Jacob Luffmann, a Polander of East Tawas, last summer commenced the manufacture of leather peculiar to his country, which make an excellent shoe-pack, or mitten. His tannery bids fair to become quite an industry in our sister town, but for some reason his enterprise has been unnoticed heretofore.

A Union ticket has been put into the field in Burleigh, with the following candidates: Supervisor, Robt. H. Martin; clerk, William Wilson; treasurer, John Wilson; school inspector, Frederick Hess; com. highways, J. J. Kentz; justice of the peace, David Tucker; constables, Edward Evin, Frederick Hess, Robt. Allen, O. R. Croft.

The propeller Oconto has been put in excellent shape for the coming season's work, extensive and material changes having been made on her during the winter, all of which have been made with a view to comfort, convenience and speed. A new compound engine and boiler have taken the place of her old machinery, which, it is calculated will increase her speed at least three miles per hour.

The clerk's and steward's offices have been removed to the main deck. The cabin lengthened out and made 15 feet longer, giving her more cabin room than any boat of her size on the lakes. Her passenger compartments which were heretofore midships have been placed aft, and many other small improvements have been made during the winter which add to her convenience and comfort. She will run between Cleveland and Alpena, touching at points on the Detroit and St. Clair rivers, Sand Beach, Saginaw, Bay City, Tawas and Au Sable. She will be commanded by Capt. G. W. McGregor, who informs us that she will commence the season's run just as soon as the ice removes sufficiently to let her through.

TO OWNERS OF LOGS.

The McBean mill has been repaired and put in shape to do first class work, and is now under the management and control of J. H. Watson, who can guarantee his customers satisfaction.

MY MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Oh! My mother-in-law banes her hair; She is funny, fat, forty and fair, And cuts quite a dash While she makes a sly "mash." As a "masher" there's none can compare, I declare!

I warn all the young fellows, beware! Of the widow that banes her front hair; Sings "When the Clouds Roll By" In a treble so high, You will always remember the air. So beware!

I'd like to say a word if I dare On the propriety of banging her her hair; But I'm afraid of the jaw Of my mother-in-law. And therefore I shall wisely forbear, In despair.

Now you susceptible gents have a care, For my mother-in-law's set a snare; With her frizzes and frills, Her notes and her trills, And with banging and banging her hair, Oh! the snare.

John Woolver nearly lost his house on the town line last Thursday, by fire. Fortunately, the fire was extinguished, but not without considerable damage. Mr. Woolver seems to be unfortunate in this respect, only a year ago he lost a house by fire.

C. D. Hale, went outside Tuesday for the purpose of purchasing a "hog" which he intends to place in his mill to cut the edgings into fine fuel, so as to be able to use them as fast as manufactured, which will do away with the necessity of piling them in the yard to season.

"What is the next thing to a dude?" was asked in a fashionable parlor the other evening. One lady answered an ape, another an ourag outang, but when a little girl said the next thing to a dude is his undershirt, the subject was suddenly dropped. - Ex.

To get rid of the smell of fresh paint in a chamber or living room, slice a few onions and put them in the middle of the room. After that it will be desirable to get rid of the onions. This can easily be done by putting on another coat of paint. - Ex.

A suit is in progress in the United States circuit court in which Thomas Robinson & Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., claim that in August, 1881, John E. Potts had on his wharves at Au Sable, Mich., about 1,000,000 feet of lumber, and the entire lot was purchased by the plaintiff. The company remitted payment by draft, prior to the arrival of the lumber. The plaintiffs claim to have relied entirely upon the word of Potts that the invoice would be the same that had been previously purchased. The complainants allege that when the lumber arrived it was found to be inferior in quality to that seen on the wharves, and actually worth much less than the price already paid for the same. Potts is said to have refused to either take back the lumber or exchange it for what had been actually purchased on the Au Sable wharves. In consequence the plaintiffs claim to have been forced to sell the depreciated lumber for what it would bring in the market - a much less figure than that paid. They subsequently brought suit to justify matters, claiming damages in the sum of $5,000. - Bay City Tribune.

Glad to Hear It.

The Kingston, Ontario Whig, of the 5th inst., in an article referring to our townsman, R. J. Smith says: "Mr. R. J. Smith has completed his medical studies at the college of Physicians and Surgeons of Baltimore, and taken high honors and a Gold medal. Mr. Smith, during seven years service in the large drug store of S. S. Hobart, applied himself to the study of chemistry, and left that establishment well trained and enthusiastic, and established himself at Tawas, Mich."

We noticed in our last issue Mr. Smith's success, and learn by private letter to relatives here that he has the further honor of an appointment as resident Physician in the Maryland Maternity, one of the large hospitals of the city of Baltimore, for one year, with assistants, rooms, servants, and a fair compensation. He has also been tendered the compliments of three other hospitals of the city. These privileges with free access to the college and the opportunities of a city practice, will give the doctor one year's practical experience seldom enjoyed by students and will place him on a footing with many physicians of several years' practice.

Dr. S. says in his letter, "I feel very proud of my gold medal, it is a real beauty, very valuable, but its intrinsic value is of no consideration compared with the honors. It was not in my possession thirty-six hours when I was called to perform a surgical operation in the city; made a handsome fee and a good job."

Success, doctor, but do not allow honors to cause you to forget your many friends in Tawas who will be glad to greet you on your return.

The following article has been handed us for publication this week:

OUTER-RIDING UNDER DIFFICULTIES. A Bay City horse attached to a Tawas vehicle, occupied by a pompous gentleman of Arenac. Thus equipped the individual proceeded for a decided destination; before reaching his destined place, he arrived in a certain village not fifty miles from anywhere, and encountered a remarkable young lady whose fascinations were of such a magnitude, attracting intense interest as to render a denial impossible; accordingly the gallant extended an invitation for a pleasure ride, which was cordially accepted and the drive began; as distance increased, conversation augmented. Imagining (judging similarities), the conversation at first decorous, but soon blended in a harmonious volume of rapturous ecstacy, transporting their thoughts beyond this opaque sphere, and all went "merry as a marriage bell," when suddenly they were apprised of their consciousness by the vehicle assuming a lateral figure coinciding with two horizontals badly demonstrated. The vehicle appeared empty as when manufactured, except, attached to it was the Bay City horse.

The unfortunate re-arranged affairs and returned his lady unscathed, he wending to his destination without any further mishaps so far as is known, but wiser in equestrianism.

The State Republican convention to elect delegates to the National convention is called for the 24th of April at Grand Rapids. Iosco county is entitled to two delegates.

Country roads have not kept pace with national development in other respects, and the day is not distant when the subject must be taken up in earnest and a system inaugurated by which what is expended one year is not entirely dissipated before the next year comes around. The question has been left mainly to the farmers, and their slowness is proverbial, but many of them begin to see their mistake and are ripe for a better system. And it will come before many years.

A party who evidently knows a thing or two, for he signs himself "A. B. C.," writes the New York Sun that he can cure anybody of snoring, no matter how bad or how continuous they are. He says: "My cure is simply to say aloud, 'Don't snore!' and repeat until the patient quits. Don't allow him to sleep on his back. I recently cured two of my brothers, 19 and 21 years of age." This is the man the country has been looking for these many years; a man who would kill or cure the man who snores, and the Sun can do no less than nominate him for the vice presidency. His signature indicates that he has the necessary educational qualification, and his communication shows that he has laid awake nights studying the interests of the race.—Bay City Morning Call.

In connection with the visit of some mysterious armed stranger to his hotel room, Judd Crouch tells a somewhat curious story about himself. He awoke, he says, and seeing the shadow of a man cast upon the wall, he supposed it might be that of his companion, a detective, who was sleeping in another bed in the same room with him, and who had got up for something. He thereupon reached for his revolver, when the door closed and woke his companion up. The question naturally arises, why if he thought it only his companion, did he reach for his revolver? If he had thought the person was, as he proved to be, an intruder in the room, his reaching for the revolver was reasonable enough. But if he thought it his companion why did he wish to use his revolver at all? Considering that he is accused of murdering his father and sister, and charged already with shooting a detective, his apparently habitual "quickness with the trigger" is very unfortunate for him.—Detroit Free Press.

JOHN KELLY, who only the TAWAS HERALD has named for the Democratic presidential nomination, has changed front again. On Thursday he said to a World reporter: "Tammany hall does not care who is nominated; it will support the ticket. The organization, however thinks that success will be assured by the nomination of a presidential candidate who hails from this state. Tammany hall does not care who the man may be—Tilden, Hewitt, Flower, or anybody else." "Suppose Gov. Cleveland should be nominated?" Yes, Cleveland, also. We will support the ticket no matter who are nominated for president and vice-president. "Suppose the national convention does not give Tammany hall satisfaction?" "We will have to bow, as good democrats who wish to see a democratic president elected." "Then Tammany hall will support the nominees of the Chicago convention whether Tammany hall delegates are admitted or not?" "Tammany hall will support the ticket nominated. It is time, however, that Tammany hall's strength as an organization was recognized. Many Tammany hall men are getting tired of going to conventions to be allowed the privilege only of kicking their heels against the curbstone."

The tariff bill which has been agreed upon by the majority of the Ways and Means committee will contain the following section, which enumerates the articles that will be placed on the free list:

SECTION 3. That on and after the first day of July, 1894, in addition to the articles now exempt from duty, the articles enumerated and described in this section, when imported, shall be exempt from duty; that is to say: Salt in bags, sacks, barrels or other packages or in bulk; coal, slack or lump; coal bituminous or shale—provided, that this shall not apply to coal imported from the Dominion of Canada until that government shall have exempted from the payment of duty all coal imported into that country from the United States; timber hewn and sawed, and timber used for spars, and in building wharves; timber squared or sided, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this act; sawed boards, plank, deals and other lumber of hemlock, whitewood, sycamore and basswood; and all other articles of sawed lumber; hubs for wheels, posts, last blocks, wagon blocks, car blocks, gun blocks, heading blocks and all like blocks or sticks rough or hewn, or sawed only; staves of wood of all kinds, pickets, palings, laths, shingles, pine clapboards, spruce clapboards, and wood unmanufactured, not specially enumerated or provided for in this section.

from the fertile brain of the schoolmaster. Well my amiable friend, you seem at last to have grasped the idea that General Kilpatrick is dead. I cannot help wondering whom you consulted in order to obtain the information. I should also judge from your very scholarly article that you have been making some attempt in order to ascertain the name of the gentleman and soldier whose character and reputation you have attempted to traduce. But why did you not publish his name in full? "Hugh Judson Kilpatrick." I will tell you why you did not; it was because you wanted to suppress part of his name in order to have at least an apparent excuse for calling East Branch a liar. When a man stoops to so low a position as this it is evident to any one that his limited stock of information is almost exhausted. Now for the benefit of the readers of both HERALD and Gazette, and also for the edification of the stately schoolmaster, I will give the biography of General Kilpatrick as published in volume 8, page 514, of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopedia:

"Hugh Judson Kilpatrick was born in New Jersey 1836; graduated from West Point in 1861, and was appointed to the First artillery. He was wounded at the battle of Big Bethel, received rapid promotion and was Colonel of cavalry in 1862. He was commissioned Brigadier General the following year. In 1864 he joined General Sherman, with whom he continued until the close of the war; he was wounded again severely at the battle of Resaca. He was commissioned Major General in 1865; he resigned from the regular army in that year, and the volunteer service January, 1866. From 1866 to 1870 he was United States minister to Chili; in 1880 he was a prominent candidate for governor of New Jersey."

Now readers of the HERALD and Gazette what conclusions can you draw from the above? Is the schoolmaster so depraved and with so little regard for the truth as to willfully prevaricate, or are his articles the outgrowth of his fanaticism, which has been thrust so prominently before the citizens of the Tawas and of Iosco county for the last two years. Was the said school teacher hired to teach the youth of East Tawas according to his limited ability, or was there a secret understanding that he was to exercise his massive brain and Herculean energies in raising dissension and trying to defame the character of one of our country's noblest defenders? Dear, departed spirit of General Kilpatrick, methinks you must look down with pity and sympathy upon the tall benighted "pedagogue" of East Tawas, who instead of doing his duty by his school and employers, spends his time and no doubt burns the midnight oil in trying to coax his sluggish and clouded brain to evolve some thought by which he can cast a blur upon thy fair fame. But his weak and feeble efforts must ever be in the future as they have been in the past, futile; for as the long train of ages glide away, Thy honored name and laurels won on many a bloody field, Shall live on and on, growing brighter and still brighter!

while the aspiring schoolmaster molds in oblivion, "unknown, unhonored and unsung." Of Hugh Judson Kilpatrick we can truly say—

"He was a true, a brave, and downright honest man,
He blew no trumpet in the market place,
Nor in the church with hypocritic face,
Supplied with cant, the lack of Christian grace;
Loathing pretense, he did with cheerful will,
What others talked of, while their hands were still."

In his last feeble attack upon me in which he attempts to be very cutting, the festive school teacher makes use of the classical word Bah! When I first saw it I was rather surprised that this word (or sound, rather) should occupy such a prominent place in his vocabulary. But when I stop and consider the "species" to which the word Bah! is so closely allied, my surprise and wonder clear away like the dew before the sun, for I realize that the teachers inherited characteristics are very strong, and must necessarily assert themselves under all circumstances.

Now in conclusion, I will say that as to the school teacher's future aspirations for notoriety through the press, his puerile articles must pass by unanswered, for he has signally failed so far to produce a single argument in favor of his original assertions. And a man who will stoop so low as to willfully misrepresent or suppress facts as he has done, deserves to be treated only with silent contempt. As for his bah-ny ability or kicking proclivities are concerned he no doubt is a decided success. But as to real arguments brought forward by him, where are they? We pause for a reply, but echo only answers WHERE? Now readers of the HERALD and Gazette, as to General Kilpatrick's true name, please examine his biography as published in Chambers' Encyclopedia one of our standard authorities, and see for yourselves how the facts compare with the teachers last so called article.

The deceased was born near Niagara Falls, Niagara County, New York, where her childhood was passed. She was the youngest of four sisters, all but one of whom survive her. Mrs. Mackin was a lady of fine education, amiable disposition and lovable character, abounding in all the christian virtues, which had drawn around her a large circle of friend and acquaintances by whom she was universally beloved and respected. Although she had been an invalid for many years, yet her sweet disposition and gentle manner never forsook her, but they stood out as bright and shining lights, even till the last, even her mind so beautiful and richly stored, remained vivid and clear to the end; her last words being full of council and consolation to the bereaved husband and sorrowing little ones who now sadly miss her presence. During all her long illness she was never known to grow impatient or complain, but all her sufferings were borne with that degree of humility and resignation as but few possess. Those who had the pleasure of her acquaintance will never cease to remember how grandly and perfectly she filled the position of kind friend, affectionate wife, and loving mother; most truly can it be said in the midst of life we are in death. Once again we see a family circle broken and another loved one is added to the list of those who have gone before. Whatever may be the necessity for this sad change, the blow falls heavily on those who remain; and were it not for the assurance that in that "better country" we shall all meet again, dark indeed would be the journey of life.

How tender our hearts become in moments like these, and how transitory appear the things of time; as we sit and meditate, a holy calm pervades the air and angel voices seem to whisper it is better as it is. The future of course must remain a sealed book—to know its secrets perhaps, would but unfit us for what lies before us, and so no doubt

"It was good, it was kind, in the wise one above,
To hang destiny's veil o'er the face of our years;
That we dread not the blow that shall strike at our love,
Or expect not the beams that shall dry our tears."

But while the book of destiny remains sealed and we are not permitted to penetrate its secrets, yet we are not to wander in darkness, uncertain as to where we are going. Kind hands have already opened the pearly gates, and if we will we may all catch an occasional glimpse of our future home. For all this we are doubly thankful, because it rears the tomb of its terrors, and helps brighten our pathway as we take the journey down into the valley and shadow of death. And, so, although we have laid the form we all loved so well in its last resting place, and our hearts are therefore sad and heavy, yet we cannot help realizing that what to us has been a great loss, has been to her an eternal gain, and she will ever live in our memories and affections while separated from us even as she was dear to us all while here.

Town Officers.

There does not seem to be much gained in stirring up the past in the management of our town business, and from the tone of complaints made, it is probable that the sooner we bury the ghost of the past year the better; but we have the future to provide for, and also have to guard against the recurrence of these unpleasant things.

Let us also hope to get rid of another bone of contention, viz: The priority of the village over the country, and the reverse of this.

Will some of our enterprising politicians move in the matter of bringing candidates before the people at a town meeting a reasonable time prior to the day of election.

All are aware that a "slate" arranged by a few, is not the voice of the people; neither is random voting on election day likely to result in any good to the town.

While a few may get their own way in affairs—and be honest in purpose, too—by making up a "slate" on Saturday to be voted for on the succeeding Monday. Much more good to the town, resulting from equally honest purposes will grow out of nominations made ten days preceding the town election.

We presume the fact is not forgotten that quite a number of intelligent voters last year stayed away from the polls. Shall we not try this year to create an interest in town business sufficient to get out our voters, and get the benefit of their good judgment? W.R.

In the window of a shop devoted to the sale of hardware and kitchen furnishings, the sign, "Iron Sinks," appears in letters of considerable size. The other afternoon an individual, whose ideas had become somewhat confused by the combined action of heat and alcohol, came along that way and beheld this announcement, whereupon he braced himself against a convenient lamp-post, and sapiently moralized as follows: "Well, I hate a fool! Man must be an ash to sthick—hic—up such a sign as that. Iron sinks! Wash or use putting that up in the window? Everybody knows it sinks. Look here!"

The proprietor, who at that moment appeared at the door, "Why don't yer put up, 'Wood floats,' in yer other window? Yer must think public don't know nothing." And thus saying he went away, shaking his head sapiently and wondering at the shopkeeper's rhapsody.

form of the maraudy, is sometimes called simple dyspepsia. It is more common in men than in women, and especially affects sedentary persons and those nervous individuals who eat rapidly, swallowing their food without proper mastication. It is also common in persons whose teeth are defective. Its immediate cause is deficient activity in the muscular walls of the stomach and intestines, and also deficient quantity or quality of gastric juice. The symptoms are much the same as those which follow the taking an excess of food, but are felt only when a moderate amount has been taken. An hour or two after eating a sensation of weight and oppression is felt. The discomfort continues for some hours, gradually wearing off before the next meal. The appetite is usually pretty good, but often the stomach will not be prepared for the reception of food at meal time, as the work of digesting the previous meal has not yet been accomplished. Sometimes there is considerable flatulence of the stomach, the eructations being tasteless, however, never offensive; often pain between shoulders or beneath one shoulder-blade, and not infrequently in the region of the heart. Palpitation of the heart often occurs in the night, causing great alarm on the part of the patient and his friends, who entertain fears of his sudden death. Sleep is disturbed and unrefreshing. The tongue is often foul in the morning, with a bad taste in the mouth. All the symptoms mentioned are greatly exaggerated by a late supper, or by an unusual excess in quantity or quality of food. The bowels are usually constipated, but may be regular. When the difficulty has been long continued, there will be observed a marked disposition to sleep after meals, or an unusual sleepiness at other times, and a decided loss of natural vivacity and energy. Acid dyspepsia is that form of indigestion in which the slowness of digestion is such that the food undergoes fermentation, forming acids which irritate the stomach and give rise to the same symptoms, much exaggerated, which have been mentioned as attending slowness of digestion with several others, the principal of which are heartburn, regurgitation of intensely sour liquid from the stomach, acid eructations, a white tongue, frequently with transverse fissures, often flabby and indented at the edges, acid saliva, causing decay of the teeth, bowels likely to be either constipated or unnaturally loose, grinding of the teeth at night, and a reddish sediment in the urine. No one patient presents all the symptoms, but more or less of them. There is quite likely also to be pain at the pit of the stomach, with soreness on pressure. On account of the extreme slowness of digestion, farinaceous food always aggravate this form of dyspepsia. Starchy-food, sugar, fruits, and especially vegetables of all kinds, cause great increase of acidity and heartburn. In some cases even bread and all sorts of preparations from grains will disagree. Sugar, or any food containing it, will give rise to great distress. A meal consisting of animal food almost entirely may be digested without difficulty, though milk frequently sours. The digestion being very slow, portions of fermenting food remain in the stomach from one meal to another, so that acidity becomes habitual. Patients suffering with this form of dyspepsia are usually very thin and bloodless. Occasionally, however, we meet with a case of the opposite kind, in which there is an abundance of tissue, though of a loose, flabby texture. Women suffer from acidity more than men.—Herald of Health.

and one so easily acquired, it is odd that anybody should take credit to herself for a vocation in that direction, and yet we sometimes hear people boasting about their ability to give certain friends or foes a piece of their mind calculated to stagger them, as if one required a special genius for the task which any fish-wife is competent to perform to her infinite satisfaction. Who, indeed, has not met those who absolutely plume themselves upon their powers of scolding, and do not allow them to grow rusty for lack of use? There are mothers whose children live in constant dread of a prolonged reprimand if any little accident happens to their clothing, although we are warned by the sage that scolding tends to make a child sly and irritable, and prefer any place before home. It is a lamentable fact that when we think of the scold it is always as a feminine noun: whether it is that a man disciplines himself to make the best of inevitable annoyances rather than rail against them, or whether, owing to his more robust nature and his interest in larger pursuits, the trifles which irritate the sensitive feminine world have no effect upon his toughened cuticle, it is difficult to decide. We would naturally suppose that the scold would possess a strong physique; that one who was forever kicking against the pricks would need muscle and nerve for such energetic existence; but as we often find her an invalid, or one who has added that role to her other accomplishments, and who exhorts from her comfortable couch with the strength of ten. She is confined to no class of society, but may be met with in hovel or palace. Does she not sit down at every boarding-house table in the land, and did one ever travel without encountering her? She inveighs against the wind at the summit of Mount Washington, and at the lack of it in the valleys below. She is ingenious in finding a cause for exercising her "free speech;" her neighbors, her friends, her servants, enjoy the benefit of her liberality in that respect. Indeed, she would cease to be happy if there were nothing to rail against, as if such a state of things were owing to some neglect of duty on her part. Nothing is too high or too common to escape her oratory, and, although she may not be called a conversationalist, nor remind us of a Madame De Staël or Margaret Fuller, yet, when she warms to the occasion, it is doubtful if either of these could rival her.—Harper's Bazar.
