The state of Michigan's war account with Uncle Sam is balanced. The amount imposed was $501,733 33; 15 per cent. allowance, $75,264 50; amount paid $426,468 83.
John King was the lowest bidder for the building of the bridge on Sixth avenue, his bid being $224 00. The contract for its construction, the work of which must be completed on or before the first day of June, was let to him.

The horses were the property of J. C. Deyo, of Jackson.

The secretary of state's crop report for April shows the condition of wheat to be 98 per cent. of its condition one year ago. Very little has been reported as winter killed. The report shows 8,880,579 bushels have been marketed since August last, thus leaving 6,766,500 on hand or not reported as sold. In clover only three per cent is reported as winter killed. Apples are nine-tenths and peaches one-half of an ordinary crop.

The Post and Tribune gives an encouraging report of the lumber market in Detroit, from which we print the following: At the lumber yards throughout the city an active inquiry is reported for all description of stock. The demand for house room does not seem to be supplied, although building was never so large during the past two seasons, and a large amount is to be put into such property this season. The indications are that such operations in 1884 will even exceed those of any former year. This is somewhat a surprise to all

MEETING OF TOWNSHIP BOARD.

[OFFICIAL]
Pursuant to written notice, James Hamilton and William B. Kelly, elected justices to fill vacancy, at the annual meeting of Tawas township for 1884, met at the Township Clerk's office with S. G. Taylor, Supervisor, and D. B. Dixon, clerk, and decided the term of said vacancies in the manner and form prescribed by law by means of which said drawing, said William B. Kelly drew the vacancy which expires July 4th, 1884, John A. Weckerly last incumbent, and James Hamilton that which expires July 4th, 1886, E. E. Williams, last incumbent.

After said drawing, the Township Board was called to order, consisting of S. G. Taylor, supervisor, W. B. Kelly, justice of the peace, and D. B. Dixon, clerk.
The Clerk's bond was presented and approved, with James Hamilton and A. F. Zeiter thereon as sureties.
D. B. Dixon then presented his bill for services as clerk, $20.00; which was allowed, and an order for same was drawn. On motion the board adjourned until Monday, the 28th day of April, A. D. 1884, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of appointing two (2) members of the Board of Review; a Health officer; and for the transaction of any other business which may come before said board.

Also, for the appointment of a suitable person to take the census required to be taken in the month of June.
D. B. DIXON, Clerk.
Dated, Tawas City, April 21st, 1884.

OUR BUSINESS MEN.
With the opening of the spring trade our enterprising merchants are beginning to bestir themselves. W. B. Kelly has just received one of the largest stocks of furniture and wall paper ever brought to this shore. His stock comprises bed room suits of rich and elegant designs, and his wall paper is of the latest and most fashionable patterns. Hamilton & Bryant, T. Simen, and C. H. Prescott & Son have also received new stocks in their several lines that do credit to the town, and argue well for home patronage. In the grocery and provision line, John Huston, A. G. Van Wey, and R. M. Tackabury are not behind the times, and are deserving of patronage. For boots and shoes, the new stocks of foot wear which have lately been opened at Miner's and Huston's establishments lack nothing to make them complete, and affords purchasers ample opportunity to make a satisfactory choice. A glance through Dr. Darling's Drug Store shows a new and excellent line of toilet articles, stationery, etc., which have been selected to meet the demands of the trade, while at W. A. Darling's we find a complete stock of periodicals, newspapers, and confectionary as are usually found in like establishments. To the people in and surrounding Tawas City, we would say, that our village affords equal if not superior advantages for trading than any place in Iosco county. Every dollar left at home helps to build up our village and thereby increases the value of property and directly benefits purchasers.

THE PRISONERS ARRIGNED.

They Plead "Not Guilty" to the Charge of Murder.

The 13th Day of May Set For Their Trial.

The Missing Money Still a Mystery.

Etc. Etc. Etc.

Since our last issue nothing new has developed in the Schouler murder, nor anything of any particular importance transpired. The prisoners, Reynolds, White and Kattermann, still insist that they have no knowledge of the whereabouts of the missing money, and that part of the affair seems to be as great a mystery as ever. They claim that they never saw the money on the night of the tragedy, and have had no knowledge of it since. The money is gone, and it will be hard to convince the public that some one of them, if not all, know what became of it. There are countless theories in regard to how it might have disappeared, but nothing definite is known.

During the past week more than a score of ridiculous rumors have been current on the streets; one of the most ridiculous being one that we understand emanated at East Tawas, to the effect that a petition was being circulated here requesting the judge to be very lenient with White. Upon hearing the report, we immediately made inquiries as to its truth and were very shortly satisfied that it had about as much foundation as the hundreds of other rumors that had been set afloat. Not one person could we find who would sign any such petition.

On Saturday evening Mrs. W. B. White, was removed from the sheriff's residence to her home, she being somewhat improved since last Thursday night, and is now gaining slowly.

As a means of further security, White was shackled, Reynolds placed in the Farmington cell and Katterman in the dark cell. No one is allowed to see or communicate with the prisoners except the officer in charge.

THE PRISONERS ARRIGNED.
This morning at the opening of the adjourned session of the February term of the circuit court a large gathering of citizens both men and women, congregated at the court house to hear whatever might take place in regard to the disposition of the prisoners.

Jacob Katterman was the first brought before the court and the charge read by the prosecuting attorney; to which he pleaded not guilty. He was asked if he had means to employ counsel, to which he answered in the affirmative, and chose Mr. Robert White, of East Tawas, as counsel.

William Reynolds was then ordered to appear. He came to the front with head erect and seemed to be familiar with the situation. To the charge he pleaded not guilty; and was returned to his quarters in the jail to be tried on the charge, May 13.

Wm. B. White was then brought before the court. His manner and appearance indicated that the past two weeks have not been all sunshine to him. On hearing the complaint; after a moment's hesitation he answered in a faltering voice, "I will plead guilty to all that I am guilty of, but I am not guilty of murder." The judge then fixed the day of trial for May 13th, after which he asked him if he had means to procure counsel to which the prisoner answered "no." After being sworn as to his inability to secure counsel, he stated that he had neither real or personal property, having given it to his wife as he thought she would need it. He has no other property except what little stock is in the restaurant, which is fully covered by outside claims. On being asked if he could secure means anywhere, he stated that he possibly could get it from his wife. Thereupon the judge refused to appoint counsel. The prisoner was then returned to his cell.

The Event of the Season.
The great and only Continental Vocalists and Swiss Bell Ringers will appear at Simon's Hall on Monday evening of next week. This company comes to us well recommended, and should be liberally patronized. The following complimentary notice comes from the Alpena Reporter:

The musical entertainment of the "Continental's," Hudson and Benjamin, was excellent. They are fine vocalists, and their rendition of "Ship Aho!" and the "Bugle Call" drew out deserved praise. Mr. Hudson's violin performance was the finest we have heard since Ole Bull delighted the

New Haven Minister's Love for Fast Horse-Flesh—The Righteousness of Rapid Driving—He Wins a Race.

[New Haven Cor. Chicago Tribune.]
 Rev. M. H. Houghton, the minister who recently denounced from his pulpit William Lewis as the murderer of Rose Clark Ambler, to-day appeared in an even more distinctively characteristic role than that of reverend detective. Ever since Mr Houghton came to New Haven he has been noted for his fondness for fast horses. He never drove a horse that could not make a mile in three minutes, and when his pulse became sufficiently plethoric to allow of his purchase of a horse for himself, he bought a handsome and spirited black whose grace and speed rendered his owner the envy of all the dealers in the city. Mr. Houghton speeded his horse almost daily on the wide avenues of the city. One day, about a year ago, his horse entered into a brush with a passing stepper with so much zest that Mr. Houghton could not stop him when he wished to, and when he sawed on the bit the horse dashed to the curb and threw the driver into the street. The animal was caught many blocks away. The story of the runaway got into the papers, and some of the more straight-laced of his congregation remonstrated with Mr. Houghton on the scandal likely to arise from his driving of fast horses. Mr. Houghton paid no heed to the protest, but some Sundays later delivered one of his inimitable sermons on the righteousness of driving a good horse, if any. He held that speed was given to horses as sugar to pearls—for man's use. He sustained his position by Scriptural quotation, describing in such glowing terms the pleasure of holding the reins over a fast trotter that his congregation was charmed, and no more complaints were heard on that score. He continued to drive, and to drive fast—so fast that it was understood he had the fastest trotter in the city.

About three months ago Arthur Baldwin, a local horse-dealer, bought in New York a Kentucky thorough-bred sorrel trotter named Borax, for which five thousand dollars had once been offered and which had made a private record of 2:27. This horse had not been speeded on the avenue the second time before Rev. Mr. Houghton perceived that his horse was not so fast as Borax. He determined to own Borax. Mr. Houghton is rich, or rather his wife is, and Mr. Houghton was soon in possession of the coveted sorrel. There was no horse in the city that could compare with his in speed. There was no glory to be gained here. He was anxious to try Borax's mettle in a race, so when the towns under the National Trotting Association began to advertise their fall trotting meetings, Mr. Houghton pretended to hand his horse over to a recently-graduated dentist named J. F. Brothers, who has opened an office on Chappel street. The understanding was that Brothers was to enter Borax in some of the country races under an assumed name. The first essay of this kind was at the Danbury races at the beginning of this month. The minister's horse was called Allen, and was entered by J. F. Brothers. Secretary Vail, of the National Association, in some way discovered that Allen was not the proper name of the horse, and so informed the Danbury judges before the race began. Just before the positions were assigned in the 2:45 race Mr. Brothers was told that he was fined $50 for entering the horse under a false name and he must pay the fine or his horse could not enter. Mr. Brothers did not have the money, consequently Mr. Houghton's horse gained no laurels at Danbury. To-day was the first day of the fall races of the New Haven Trotting Association. It attracted a large crowd to Hamilton Park, many of whom were old horse-men, and they were perplexed as to the speed and ownership of Borax, entered on the postcards by J. F. Brothers for the 2:45 race. When the eleven horses in this race appeared before the judges' stand the driver of Borax was told that he could not race unless he paid the $50 due for the Danbury fine and another $50 for changing the horse's name to Borax. It was in vain that Mr. Brothers protested that Borax was the real name of the horse. The judges were inexorable, and Brothers was called one side by Rev. Mr. Houghton, and paid the $100. Brothers passed the money over to the judges. Borax won the race in three straight heats, in 2:36, 2:38 and 2:35. Mr. Houghton gained by the race $100, for the premium to the first was only $200. Moreover, since the race he is said to be anxious that his parishioners should not learn the facts of his connection with the race.

TORN FROM HIS WEALTH.

Death of an Unnatural Miser, Worth $50,000, in a New York Village.
 [Goshen (N. Y.) Special to Chicago News.]
 In the village of Walden, twelve miles from here, in the Wallkill Valley, there died on Monday night a man named John Wilson. He had lived in Walden for fifty years, and by the most miserly of habits had accumulated a fortune of fifty thousand dollars. Ten years ago he took up his abode in the garret of an old stone house, where he lived the life of a hermit until the house was torn down, when he was forced to try a miserable house in an out-of-the-way place, where he lived until he was found dead in his hut yesterday morning. The only welcome visitor was Minnie Oldham, the daughter of a poor laboring man of Walden. She is now seventeen years old, and has been a favorite of Wilson from a baby. She visited him daily, showing him many kindnesses and attending to the only housework that he would have done.
 When Wilson's mother, at the age of eighty, was worn out with hard work and years she applied to her son for support for the rest of her life. He told her he would see that she was taken care of. He purchased her a pair of shoes, and then walked her twenty miles to the poor-house. Telling the shoes from her he turned her over to the poor authorities and left her without a word. She died in the institution soon afterward, and was buried a pauper.
 Wilson was a typical miser in appearance. His tall, gaunt form was covered with a mass of patches of all colors (and sizes); he had not permitted a comb, razor or pair

VENTRILQUISTS.

An Interesting Interview with One of Their Number—Their Strange Gift Explained.

The art or gift of ventriloquism, though dating back to the remotest antiquity, and supposed to have its origin among the ancient Hebrews, Canaanites and Egyptians, and practiced to a considerable extent at the present time, is a mystery to the general public, and is this week the topic of considerable discussion, as Mr. Albert O. Duncan, one of the most skillful of the few successful ones now practicing it, has been giving nightly exhibitions of his gift at the Park theater during the past week.

The term ventriloquism has its derivation from the Latin words ventus, the abdomen, and loqui, to speak; it originated from the practice of witches, who were supposed to have a good or evil spirit within them. That it was commonly used among the Israelites and Egyptians the following from the nineteenth chapter of Leviticus will serve as evidence: "Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards to be defiled by them." In this case, as in several others referred to in the Bible, the term "having a familiar spirit" signifies in the original Hebrew "speaking from the abdomen." For many years it was supposed that in order to become a successful ventriloquist it is necessary that a peculiar formation of the larynx be possessed. Thinking that perhaps the public would be benefited or interested with an explanation of the mystic gift, a reporter called on Mr. Duncan yesterday, and the first question put to him was whether it was possible for any person to acquire the art.

"It is an utter impossibility," replied the ventriloquist, "to acquire a knowledge of it out of the numerous books published on the subject. To tell you the truth, in all my career, though not a very long one, I have never met a book made ventriloquist. I have looked over several of the works on the subject, but instead of being an assistance they were positive detriments and only tended to confuse me."

"Then according to your theory ventriloquism is a gift and not an art?" "That's it exactly. I have had a large number of people call upon me and request me to give them lessons, but unless they are naturally adapted for it, any degree of learning will not do them any good."

"What do you mean by being naturally adapted? Are your vocal organs different from the general run?"

"No; I have had my vocal organs examined by a number of physicians, and they failed to discover any malformation."

"Then where does the peculiarity exist?"

"In the muscles of the stomach. My ventriloquial voice is entirely governed by them. I suppose there are a great many people possessing the same gift, but after discovering it find out that considerable practice is necessary to become proficient in it."

"How did you discover that you possessed the gift?"

"When a small boy I was in the habit of imitating animals of all sorts. One day a man heard me and said that the voice seemed to come from a different direction. He called me a ventriloquist, but I hadn't the slightest idea what he meant by the term until I grew up to be quite a large boy, when I became conscious of my ability of throwing my voice wherever I chose. I first appeared at church societies and other entertainments, and with constant practice I was soon enabled to adopt the stage as a profession."

"How is it that in uttering consonants you do not move your lips in the slightest?"

"Well, you see I use my throat and mouth for the pitch and tone of the voice, also for consonant sounds; and I regulate the distance, where I want the voice to sound, by contracting the muscles of the stomach. If I want the voice to sound apparently at some distance I move the muscles at the base of the stomach; the lower I go the further the voice sounds; and if I wish it to sound nearer I contract the muscles of the top of the stomach, and with constant practice I am enabled to regulate sounds instantaneously."

"How about the saying that ventriloquists usually die at an early age?"

"Owing to the great strain upon the stomach. It is of course necessary to take the best of care, for you know the stomach is a very delicate organ; but with proper care and temperate habits there is no danger whatever from over exertion."

"Did you inherit your gift from your parents?"

"No, indeed; they are both deaf mutes; but I have often thought that I possessed the voices of both combined, my natural tone and the tone in my stomach."

"Did you ever take advantage of your gifts for your own personal amusement?"

"Oh, yes, quite frequently. You see I pass considerable of my time traveling upon the railroad. When the trip grows monotonous and we have no more subjects to discuss or yarns to spin, I, by special request of the other members of the company, proceed to have some fun with the conductor. You know that dogs are not allowed on some of the roads unless the fare is collected for them. As soon as I see the conductor enter our car, I begin to imitate the barking of a very healthy dog and throw the voice under one of the seats. The conductor immediately institutes a search for the canine, and I tell you we get any amount of fun out of the operation. As soon as the conductor requests the passenger—a lady most generally—to move for the purpose of discovering the dog, I throw the voice in another direction; and only last week I set a conductor almost wild they were quite polite to one another, but just for the sake of a lark I threw my voice, imitating one of the disputants, into his mouth and made him call the other man an infernal liar. The other fellow couldn't see it in that light, and you should have seen the fun. I kept this thing up for a while, made them call each other harsh names, and when they came to blows, I put an apology into the mouth of one, and thus the affair ended.

"Once in a street car," continued Mr. Duncan, "I had a great deal of sport at the expense of a blushing young damsel. The car was not crowded but the seats were all occupied, and among the passengers was a young and pretty girl wearing a heavy fur lined cloak. I began imitating the sound of a squealing baby, as if emanating from under her cloak, attracting the attention of every passenger to the lady and mystifying her completely. She moved about in an uneasy sort of manner, the cries of the child grew louder and louder, the eyes of all the passengers were turned toward her, until in a fit of desperation she unbuttoned her cloak for the sake of proving that she had no child concealed there. I then threw my voice under the seat, and an old gentleman, touched with pity and contempt for the young mother, crawled under the seat on his hands and knees and looked for it. The passengers were all mystified, for I kept the squealing up until I left the car."—Cleveland Herald.

Fruit and jelly dishes made of fancy cut glass are as much used as those of plated ware. A great many housekeepers seem to forget that it is necessary to keep their cut glass ware highly polished, and send dishes to the table that have not been thoroughly rubbed. When cut glass dishes are well rubbed they look exceedingly handsome, and make additionally palatable the dessert they hold.

Candles are still very much used to light tables at dinner parties. They are invariably shaded with blue, pink or red silk. Some of the newest candlesticks are decidedly novel and ancient in appearance, but are made of bronze instead of brass.

Many kinds of doilies are now used, and it would be invidious to say which is the most fashionable. Perhaps those in the most favor are the linen squares, embroidered in Turkey, with silk and gold thread. Many linen and muslin ovals and squares are outlined with gold or colored silk of exceeding fineness, with figures, Oriental designs, and occasionally single blooms. Some pretty ones are worked in gold silk, with an open hemstitch border of drawn threads, the center worked in fine silk with a variety of conventionally designed flowers. Others, again, are designed of the China grass cloth, which is full and transparent, merely fringed and worked in washing silk.

Lustra painting is also applied to muslin, without interfering with the painting. Some new ones from Paris are made with three rows of drawn work, for a border, and the center in white thread, worked with either a flower, monogram or crest. Pale blue and other delicate shades of silk to match the China are used for doilies, richly embroidered in a contrasting color, as red on blue. Spider webs and open fans, both in needle work and painting, for doilies, are new ideas.

The last innovation at dinner parties are floral napkin rings. They are exceedingly pretty. Three pieces of ordinary wire are made into small circles an inch and a half in diameter and fastened together. The rosebuds, or whatever flower is to be used, are then artificially mounted on this foundation. At a dinner party the other night, each of the ten guests had a different variety of flower in his napkin ring. One was composed of palest pink Boston rosebuds and violets, another was a dainty circle of heliotrope, another a band of red and white carnations, etc. The effect was exceedingly pretty.

There are many new devices to be seen in goblets and tumblers. Some of the handsomest goblets of cut glass are supported by dainty figures, others rest in the center of a palm leaf. The fashionable goblet of the moment is long and narrow, and is made of heavy cut glass engraved with a wreath of ivy leaves and berries.—American Queen.

A Story of the War.

In a south Nashville street car a few days ago two or three gentlemen were talking about cases of mortal agony, where the suffering became something so great that the sufferer preferred death, and one or two cases were mentioned where, under the pressure of pain, the victim had begged to be killed.

"I wonder whether anybody ever killed a person under those circumstances, to get them out of misery," said the reporter.

Said a prominent lawyer of this city, who was on the car: "Let me tell you something. Just after one of the bloody battles of the late war the confederates were retreating. Under a tree by the roadside sat a poor confederate soldier, shot in half a dozen places, with both legs and both arms broken. He was crying out in terrible agony, begging some one for God's sake to kill him and end his sufferings. A company of Louisiana Tigers was passing by, and one of them, hearing the cries, stepped out of the ranks and drew a large knife he carried at his side. The wounded soldier was a slender, middle-aged man, and had no whiskers except a small goatee. Taking him by the goatee the "tiger" raised his head and deliberately cut his throat from ear to ear, wiped the bloody blade on the grass and stepped back into his place, leaving the dead soldier leaning against the tree. Do you believe that?"

The reporter was watching the smoke curl up from his "Carolina," another gentleman responded: "It would have to be a mighty good man that told it."

"And I should want some corrobor-

TAWAS, April 24th, 1884.

Mr. Editor:—
DEAR SIR—Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words to the people of Tawas in regard to the small number of votes Mr. Freel received at the late election. He was a candidate for highway commissioner of Tawas township the number of votes cast for him being only 19. Mr. Freel had his tickets out but a very short time, when he found out he could not hold the office if obtained, so he withheld his tickets from the voters, and withdrew from the contest, which accounts for the small number of votes cast in his favor.
