The Science of "Privilege" which Un horsed Heene.

As a majority of people do not know what sort of things stock privileges are.

it may not be out of place to say a few words on this subject. A stock privilege is a paper signed by some wellknown person, and entitling the bearer to put to, or call from, that person a given amount of a given stock at a given price within a given time. These privileges are paid for according to their speculative value, their duration and the amount of stock they are issued for. They are practically insurance tickets against losses in stock gambling. A man who buys a privilege can not lose more than the amount he pays for it. If he buys a stock and it goes down, he can put it to the signer of the privi lege. If he sells it short-and it goes up he can call it and cover his contract The so-called puts and calls go only one way, and the bearer can only either put to or call from the signer the stock con cerned. The spreads and straddles work both ways; the holder can either put to or call from the signer the stock concerned. The sellers of privileges work upon the same plan as bookmakers do at the races. They sell stocks short against their puts, and buy them against their calls. As a rule they make a great deal of money, for the figures of the privileges are usually far away from the market, and the premium paid for the privilege forms in most cases a clear profit. The largest dealers in privileges are Messrs. Russell Sage, J. R. Keene, M. O. Bogart' and 8. V. White. Old Sage has made a million or two by selling privileges. Being a director in many corporations, he always knows which way a given stock is likely to go, and sells his puts not being connected with any large corporation, and of having no following to speak of. But he had a perfect passion for selling privileges. A crisp thousanddollar bill exhibited by a curbstone privilege broker was to him like piece of red cloth to a bull. He could not resist the temptation to go for it. If he had confined himself to the dealing in privileges he would probably have come out ahead. But, being a large speculator, besides, he was all the time crippled in his movement by the puts and calls he had out. He was probably the most consistent and intelligent bear for the last two or three years, yet he did not dare to let the market go down too far out of fear that an avalanche of stock would come down on him. The conquence was that he had to sustain the market by buying stocks, and, as prices went down notwithstanding his efforts, he had a mass of stocks put to him besides. That game was going on for a long time, and he was a big loser plored him long ago to give up the privilege business, and he has repeatedly promised them to do so, but the fatal passion was there, and he could not get rid of it. The collapse had to come, and it came. There can be no doubt that he will make all his outstanding contracts good, though it will probably take him some time to do so, but the nervous tension to which he must be subjected at the present moment must be terrible, and there is not a man in Wall street who knows him well who does not deeply sympathize with him. He was always the most open-hearted and least tricky of the great Wall street

Doc's Bad Boy.

A local contributor sends in the following: "Mowrey, the jeweler, went outside for a few days, and just to keep business moving, Doc's Bad Boy, with his customary cheek placed himself at the bench and 18-8t assuming an expression of owl-like wisdom, waited for suckers. Owing to the extensive business enjoyed by Mr. Mowrey no great amount of time was lost before he had an opportunity of squinting through the wrong end of an eye glass into the brassy network of an antiquated cleck which an unsophistocated verdant from way back brought in to receive the proper treatment. The usual diagnosis was made and the case pronounced curable. Everything worked as smooth as goose oil until he attempted to replace the various wheels in their relative place, here, in the language of the immortal poet, the youth "struck a snag." The bull wheel did not jibe, connecting red was too short and the throttle wanted packing. All of a sudden the main spring which was wound up to its utmost tension, exploded, causing the boy and the clock to collapse simultaneously. This youth has a great faculty of getting into trouble which is caused, says our village phrenelogist who has since examined his head, by the fact that his Oshkosh

And the old man would go off, happy in the thought that another stranger had heard of his generosity.

As he had no children and disliked his relatives, the suggestion was made to him that the medical college in the town would be an appropriate legatee. He approved the suggestion, and often intimated that he would make his will in favor of the college.

He was taken sick. His physician, seeing that it was the old man's last illness, urged him to make his will. But he could not endure the thought of letting go his grasp upon the gold he

A Hindu's Death.

Mr. Dall, the American Unitarian entered the room a devotee sat at his head crying in a mournful voice, "Hari, Hari!" name of the god of an old Salvation Army that followed Chaitanya, said to have been born of a virgin and to have "disappeared" four centuries ago. The dying man's son, weeping, continually called "Baba! Baba!" Mr. Sen's mother asked mournfully: "What have I done that thou shouldst suffer such agony?" The dying man said that this agony this dire distress body, mind and life are Thine. Do Thou with them as Thou wilt, only, with clasped hands, I ask for this blessing: Grant unto me peace, patience and strength. II. In the darkness of peril, Mother, what a frightful look is Thine! The body trembles at that terrible counterpage.

SIBLEY G. TAYLOR, Mortgagee Attorney for Mortgagee. trembles at that terrible countenance. In the midst of the dismal ground of cremation Thou seemest to be dancing in the armor of battle. The intelligent form, deep in its immensity, appears tinged with blood. But, Mother, in Thy inward nature there is a deep ocean of love that surges constantly. What fear, then, Mother! I have found Thee out—Thou art that Merciful. Infinite out-Thou art that Merciful, Infinite Ocean of Love."-M. D. Conway, in Philadelphia Times.

A New Ax for Mr. Gladstone.

Late on Saturday afternoon, says a Flint telegram, the following incident growing dusk the police, who are in constant attendance upon the Premier, were surprised to see a man walk rapidly up the approaches to the castle, carrying under his arm a mysteriouslooking parcel, and from his manner it was inferred that the man was either laboring under very great excitement or that he was insane. He was speedily taken charge of by the police, and removed to that part of the castle in which they are quartered, and on being interrogated by the officer in charge he said he was a workingman from Birmingham, and had made an ax which he intended to present to Mr. Gladstone. He would present it personally, no matter what the cost. The man was kindly treated by the officer. and after he had somewhat regained his composure a message was sent to Mr. Gladstone, who came out of the castle and received his admirer on the lawn, where he was presented with the ax, much to the satisfaction of the man, who afterward walked to Chester and returned to Birmingham the same evening .- London Standard.

The artisan who represented to Mr. Gladstone that he had come from Birmingham in order to present him with a new ax is named Simeon Shorter, and is in the employ of a firm at Saltley, near Birmingham. Shorter made the ax of solid steel, and having accomplished his task determined to present it himself without ceremony. He accordingly set out for Hawarden, where he announced his errand, but at first had some little difficulty with the detectives. Mr. Gladstone greatly admires the implement, which is fitted with an old English oak handle. On one side of the blade is Mr. Gladstone's armorial bearings, and on the other the Staffordshire "knot" with a poetical couplet. After partaking of refreshments Shorter was presented with Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone's photographs and autographs.-London Telegraph.

1. Bites of all sorts are painful, and if not treated with expedition and skill they sometimes prove very dangerous. The most common kinds are those received from dogs, mosquitoes and bears. The rarest kinds are trilobites and Jacobites.

2. One seldom, if ever, gets a bite when out fishing.

3. If about to be bitten by a dog, while serenading or foraging in a melon-patch, immediately take some violent exercise in order to preserve a good circulation. For instance, run a mile or so without stopping.

4. Never stop running because there is a man with a club apparently chasing the dog; sometimes he is encouraging
