

SENATOR BLAIR'S BILL.

While we profess to have a very thorough system for training our children in reading, writing and arithmetic, the humiliating fact remains that we are far, very far, behind Germany and other States in Europe in the matter of education.

Four years ago Tilden's declination was taken in earnest by the democratic convention and they did not so much as ask him whom he wanted nominated.

A Buddhist temple is being built in Paris by a rich English lady, who is a convert to the great religion of the East.

A Mormon Courtship.

The courtships of the saints are not always romantic affairs. Dr. Sharp, of this city, has four wives, and if he has good luck he will have another before long.

In the course of time he convinced the old man that it had been ordained from all time that Mary should become his wife; but the old lady said that the doctor had hoodooed her husband once more, and she refused to assent to the union.

Taking a new tack, the doctor then threatened to summon Mrs. White before the High Council. She told him the Sanhedrim of the saints had no terrors for her.

A Melodrom of Birds.

"Run wife! Go below, or they'll be dashed to pieces!" The keeper of the Atlantic City Light-house was watching the hydraulic floating lamp in the top of the tall tower last night, and just brushed a speck from one of the plate-glass sashes through which the intense rays from the great fixed light that warned off all floating ocean life from destruction were streaming, when, turning his head in answer to a strange flapping and whirring noise, he uttered the exclamation.

"What shall I do?" asked the plucky little woman, who is in the habit of keeping him company during the early part of his vigils.

"Go for the net! Drive them off! Take my overcoat with you and save all you can!"

In the almost white-heat glow of the lamp, outside of whose radiance everything was impenetrable blackness, a spectacle was presented unequalled in any of Dore's grotesque imaginings.

Mrs. Wolf came in directly. "I can do nothing with them," she said; "there are thousands and thousands of them." From out the bulging pockets of the overcoat birds began to fly, now dashing at the windows as if to get out again, and the three or four palpitating feathered mites she held in each hand began struggling to get free.

"Did you notice that scarlet tanager in the house as you came up?" asked Abraham Wolf, the keeper, of his guest, the scribe. "Well, that gorgeous fellow got here from the West Indies somehow. I picked him up in the net one night during a heavy thunder storm. The net, you see, is on the land side, where all the birds come, and keeps them from spattering their blood on the glass. But the wild ducks, they tear the net to shreds. We have had a few spring birds the last week or two, but this is the first large flock. Our house during the summer is nearly always full of them. We leave them loose and let them go where they want to. One night my wife and I took over 300 birds alive and let them go next morning. Rail-birds, cat-birds, wood-thrush, thistle-birds, and all the so-called fly-catchers—see the most numerous, but we get almost every sort.

Easy Lessons in Civil Service.

"Why do they call him a postmaster?" asked Rollo, as he came out of the post-office. "Because," replied Rollo's father, "he never goes anywhere; always stays in one place, like a post."

"And he stays there so well," added Rollo's uncle, "and is so hard to get out that he is called the boss post, or the postmaster."

"I should think," said Rollo, "that any body would know that much."

Rollo's Uncle George laid his finger on the side of his nose and looked very wise. "He must," he said, looking impressively at Rollo, "he must ask the man who puts on the butter."

—R. Kilkelly, of Athlone, Ireland, whistled from a car window to his dog as the train started. The dog chased the train, and when it arrived at Knockroghery, ten miles distant, the animal was about one thousand yards behind, and reached his master before the train started again.

The New York Sun says Cleveland would make a weak candidate in New York State.

The inner soul of Blaine is his intense Americanism. He is American through and through, bone, fibre, and finger nails.

THE lie that has been recently started to the effect that Blaine favored Dorsey has been nailed by the testimony of Col. Bliss before the Springer committee.

THE clergyman who attended Phipps, just executed in Canada for murder, says that he preferred hanging to imprisonment for life.

Fruit and jelly dishes made of fancy cut glass are as much used as those of plated ware. A great many housekeepers seem to forget that it is necessary to keep their cut glass ware highly polished, and send dishes to the table that have not been thoroughly rubbed.

Candles are still very much used to light tables at dinner parties. They are invariably shaded with blue, pink or red silk.

Many kinds of dollies are now used, and it would be invidious to say which is the most fashionable.

One declared he would not change his system upon dictation, and the remaining three refused to confer with the committee. The spokesman of the workmen was Selig Solomon, one of the capitalists of the place, who appears to have acted out of good will toward both parties to bring about an understanding if possible.

THE CAPTAIN MAKES A SPEECH. After a few moments the captain of the company appeared at the doorway desiring to address the crowd. They were silenced sufficiently that he could be heard some distance.

THE UNPOPULAR FIRMS. President McDonald, of Au Sable Village, says there is much feeling against Pack, Woods & Co., and the Oscoda Lath & Lumber Co. At the commencement of the strike Mr. Pack handled a revolver.

MATERIAL ASSISTANCE. Two thousand dollars has been raised for the support of those who can't stand out except as assisted.

THE NEXT SPEAKER. Was Dr. De Laive. A ladder was placed against the building and he ascended this several rounds and spoke first in English, next in French.

THE doctor was also applauded. SHERIFF ESMOND Was called for and quietly mounted the ladder. The immense throng were all attention. He spoke as follows:

SHOUTS OF "DISPERSE! DISPERSE!" arose from the strikers, and they quickly vacated the street, many returning home, others walking the sidewalks, and although the saloons were all open nothing occurred during the evening to incite riot.

MONDAY MORNING a committee of six, appointed by the workmen, called upon the several mill managers and put in a demand for last season's rate of wages, no store pay and cash every Saturday. Out of the seven establishments

THREE RESPONDED FAVORABLY. One declared he would not change his system upon dictation, and the remaining three refused to confer with the committee.

VERY GOOD JUDGMENT has been shown by Sheriff Clark Esmond and credit is due him for the tact with which he overcame the difficulties of the situation.

On a recent afternoon a team stood harnessed to a light wagon in a stable in Fifty-sixth Street, near Seventy Avenue. The stable is said to have most more money than any other in this country. Its appearance does not belie the statement. The horses were blanketed. They stood on the clean, matted floor, with their feet close together and their heads hanging in a sleepy manner. Three other horses were drowsing in their spacious boxes. An electric bell struck a sharp note. Every horse in the stable pricked his ears and seemed imbued with new life. Two bull-dogs jumped in front of the massive doors that swing on 150-pound hinges. William, better known as Boston, who has charge of the horses, remarked, "Here he is."

A side door opened, and a handsome man who has grown gray in New York walked noiselessly in the direction of the team. The bull-dogs bounded playfully by his side. "Take off the blankets," said the man. The blankets were pulled off. The horses were Edward and a young bay mare. The man stepped to the horses' heads. The mare rubbed her nose slowly up and down her master's face and appeared to kiss him. The horse rubbed his head against his master, also seeming to kiss him, and then, when he turned away, snapped with a little show of jealousy at the mare's neck. Hearing the rattle of the harness, the man looked around, remarking, "He's full of fun." At the same time he places pieces of sugar in each of the horses' mouths.

"Mr. Work, I hear that you have developed some remarkable traits in your horses." "Nothing particularly worth speaking about. I have horses and am kind to them, and they are fond of me. There's Dick Swivel. He had the reputation of being cross when I got him. Now see Dick!" The horse heard the call and endeavored to get to his master.

"If I should call him when he was hitched to a wagon he would wheel around and turn the wagon over to get to me. All I have to do when out with Dick and anybody tries to pass us is to let the lines rest lightly on his back, and away he goes in the lead. I never urge my horses. That mare, Regina, hitched with Edward, is very fast. She is a five-year-old. I shall hold her back until she is six, and then I will let her show what she can do."

"I heard that you had a mare that always joined in the circle around the fire and inhaled tobacco smoke over your shoulder." "That was old Kate. Whenever she heard us talking she would pound away in her box, and kick something loose if she was not released. When at liberty she would walk up and poke her head in the circle and listen quietly to the conversation."

"Do you believe that she understood anything that was said?" "She appeared to. I think that horses understand more than most people give them credit for. Now, there is a horse in that box yonder that is very fond of the smoke from a cigar. If you were to light one and go in his box he would place his head over yours and take in all the smoke he possibly could. If you were to leave the box he would follow you as long as he could get a whiff of smoke."

"The horses are restless and want to get out. William will show you the stable and give any desired information."

The huge thousand-dollar doors opened silently and the horses started for the road. "I have lived with many men who owned horses," said William, "but there goes the only real horse lover I ever saw. They follow him all over the place like children. He is kind to all animals. One day he saw these bull-dogs bounding over the tan bark in the walking ring on the other side of the stable. 'Do they like to play in there?' 'Yes,' I replied. 'Then always leave the door open for them,' he said."

"He never overworks his horses. One day he will drive Edward and Dick, then Edward and Regina, or Dick or Edward singly, and so change and give them all exercise. There is a horse sixteen years old that many men would think a great trotter if they owned him. I had quite an offer for him lately, so I mentioned it to Mr. Work. 'William,' he said, 'we'll never sell that horse. He has given me many enjoyable rides, and I guess I can take care of him for the remainder of his life.'"

"Mr. Work is very much pleased with the way Regina goes to the pole with Edward. I shouldn't wonder if she turned out a clipper. Then he gets all the improved riggs and harness, and anything that helps horses along. There are a lot of wagons of different kinds. Up stairs I will show you a pole sleigh that weighs only fifty pounds, and will carry double. It is very strong, and built so in front that no matter how hard a driver has to pull on his horses at times, it will not pull over in front on the horses' heels, as some of the fancy affairs do. Mr. Vanderbilt got one like it as soon as he saw Mr. Work's." — N. Y. Sun.

The committee in charge of the matter has selected for Ben Hill's statue the following inscriptions from his writings: "He who saves his country leaves all things, and all things saved to bless him; who lets his country die, lets all things die, dies himself ignobly, and all things dying curse him!" For the reverse side: "The Constitution should know no section, but should know all the States." On one side piece: "We are in our father's house; our brothers are our companions, and we are here to stay, thank God, forever." On the other side will be a brief record of the Senator's public and professional life. — Chicago Tribune.

—An engaged couple having appeared several times before a clergyman to get married, who on each occasion declined to perform the ceremony because the groom was invariably drunk, at last reproved the girl for bringing her lover before him in such a condition, whereupon she burst into tears and said: "But, sir, he won't come when he's sober!" — Exchange.

—"Waitaw, I will weally have to wemove to anothaw table. There appears to be a terrible dwat heav." "Tain't no draff hesh, no how, Mr. La Dude. Dah ain't no win' tall 'cept what dat yer lady am makin' wid' her fan." "Aw, that's it. I knew there was a dwat. It nearly blew me away. Weally, now, couldn't you ask her to stop?" — Chicago Herald.

—"Is there a dude club in this city?" asked a stranger, entering the editorial room. "There is," returned the editor, as he produced a toothpick from his pocket and laid it on the roll-top desk; "that's it, and the first dude that shows his head in this office will be brained with it." With a deep sigh the stranger turned and disappeared. — Somerville Journal.

—"Sister," said a little boy, rushing into the parlor, where she was entertaining young Mr. Smith, "will you come into the hall a minute? I want to speak to you." "I can not now, dear. Don't you see that I am engaged with Mr. Smith? What is it you want?" "Jimmy White is out in the hall, and he says he won't believe it unless you tell him so yourself." "What is it that Jimmy White won't believe, dear?" asked the sister, sweetly. "That you ate thirty-five pancakes this morning for breakfast." — Philadelphia Call.
