Was the Roscommon Oil Well "Salted"?

Roscommon was "all torn up" last week about the rumors of "salting" the oil well, which has been shut down for several weeks. The public all along the Mackinac division, it is said, have been a little suspicious about the genuineness of the well and the impression is general, in Bay City, so far as we have heard, that the well is not what it was first supposed to be. This is one of the reasons why Bay City business men did not take hold of the movement, after being urged upon the first "discovery" of oil. Thursday morning parties went to the well and began digging, to see if they could find any indications of it having been "salted." The News says a trench was opened and an inverted wooden spout about 10 feet long taken out. Another shorter piece and several pieces of board were found. The floor of the shanty was taken out and the earth found to have been disturbed. The workmen dug down some four or five feet finding a few short pieces of pipe, a portion of the head of an oil barrel and other rubbish at different depths. A hole was dug beside the well to a depth of four or five feet below what was the water level when the well was in operation, but the tubing inside and out gave no sign of having been tampered with.

Thursday night John O'Brien approached Mr. Fick, a member of the company, and demanded that the money paid for three shares of stock in which he claimed to be interested be returned, in which event he would say nothing. The money was not forthcoming whereupon a warrant for Fick's arrest was sworn out, but not served. O'Brien in a communication to the News says that at his request the marshal withheld the document temporarily, and it is at rest, awaiting Mr. Fick's movements. O'Brien evidently has very little faith in the well. The shares of stock which he wished to have redeemed were owned by Mrs. Mercer. He says: "I went to Mr. Fick and told him in the presence of one of the citizens to protect those shares or take consequences. He insisted on me being quiet until 9 o'clock next morning. I reported to Mrs. Mercer. She immediately went and swore out a warrant before G. F. Mathews, having given security for costs."

In conclusion the News says: The president has caused notices offering a reward of $50 for the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who entered the buildings and buried the piping, etc.

These facts have demonstrated to the company the folly of shutting down the well when they did and awakened them to the necessity of action, and they have already commenced preparations to start up Monday, the president feeling that public faith will be stronger than ever through the inability of the investigation to prove the well a fraud.

It behooves the Roscommon oil company to keep their well in operation long enough to convince the most skeptical that the "machine wasn't salted." Until the well is proven to be a bona fide institution, the company cannot expect to dispose of shares, or secure the investment of capital. The officers of the company claim that it is the work of an enemy, and in support of that theory give the following:

The tubing has not been tampered with and the upper length is the identical one used in pumping; the short pieces of pipe were cut from pipe in fitting up the engine; that the buried trough is one used to conduct water from the oil tank while the pump was in operation and could not possibly have been where it was found; that the unanimous opinion of experienced carpenters is that the wood found could not have been in the ground but a short time; that the premises have been unlawfully entered and they have no knowledge of the acts or purposes of the party entering—B. The hay crop will be harvested this week and weather so far has proved favorable. The yield is fair but not first class. What fall wheat there was has turned out a good crop. Spring wheat, oats, potatoes, etc., promise well.—Alpena Argus.

The campers at Sand Lake are enjoying themselves immensely. The musical and literary club enjoyed a very pleasant evening last Monday listening to recitations by the Rev. Geo. Taylor, of Lansing, and singing by the whole club.

It is pleasing to note the improvement made in the sidewalk in front of C. H. Prescott's property on Lake street. It is hoped that others will follow suit and put the walks in better condition. The only bad spots which now remain an eyesore to our citizens are in front of the vacant lot next to the court house and in front of Hilburn's place.

A species of lice or insect of some undefinable character have attacked the red cedar trees of this vicinity with fatal results. We have seen hundreds of these trees—the red cedar—during the past week, every one dying and every one covered with these insects, which tap the bark of the limbs at the base and suck the gum or sap. Whether this death extends to the roots so that the tree will not survive is an open question, but to all appearance the top of the tree becomes dry brush.—Pontiac Gazette.

It is expected that quite a number will go down to Tawas Saturday to attend the races there. The following horses from Au Sable and Oscoda will be entered: In the free for all class—D. A. McDonald's Glengerry Boy and Greene Pack's Bay Mago. In the 3-minute class—L. Smith's May S., C. E. Marvin's Black Jim, and Robert Jellard's Lady Star. Two weeks from Saturday the Tawas horses and horsemen will come here for a matinee at the Driving Park.—Au Sable Saturday Night.

The August number of DEMOCRAT'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY is unusually interesting. Among the many articles that call for favorable notice are "On Foot and Four in hand in the Tyrol," Costume Portraits in the Paris Salon, "At the Whitty Jet Works," "Opportunities for Women," by Jennie June, and "Ernst Moritz Arndt, Poet and Patriot." Ella Wheeler, Eleanor Kirk, and others contribute excellent stories, and the illustrated article on the popular "Crazy Quilt" will prove useful to ladies. "The World's Progress," and the various departments are of interest and utility, and the illustrations excellent. The beautiful oil picture, "A Feather in her Cap," is exceedingly attractive.

Engraving done neatly and with dispatch at W. E. Mowrey's the Jeweler.

Mr. Wm. Fetterly, for some time connected with the Au Sable and Oscoda Saturday Night is making preparations to start an Independent paper at Oscoda. He has already received much encouragement and promise of substantial support. He expects to have the paper issued at an early date and the HERALD welcomes Mr. Fetterly as a member of the fraternity in this county.

W. E. Mowrey is now located opposite Darling's Drug Store and intends for a time to give all his attention to fine repairing of all kinds. Give him a trial. All work warranted and satisfaction guaranteed.

A few days ago some of the young men in East Tawas organized a brass band, after canvassing the town for subscriptions to aid in purchasing a set of instruments, which will soon be ordered from Cuyler's music house, Detroit, the requisite amount having been subscribed to meet the first payment of $100. The number of instruments will be 15—11 horns, a clarinet, drums and cymbals. The boys will go to work immediately, and as most of them have had more or less experience in the past, they expect to be able to play in public within a few weeks. Success to them.—B. C. Tribune.

Vassar Pioneer: The Alpena County Review presents the name of Gen. R. A. Alger at Detroit for the governorship, and the nomination is endorsed by many of the papers throughout the state. We have no personal knowledge of Mr. Alger's qualifications, but are assured by some of our citizens who know him that that he is eminently fit for the position, and we cannot regard his candidacy with anything but kindly feelings. A nomination means an election this year, and we hope to see it fall on worthy shoulders. Mr. Alger has large lumbering interests in the tenth district.

Will Mowrey the jeweler is now located in his new quarters opposite Darling's Drug Store. Call and see him when in need of any repairs on timepieces or jewelry and you will be sure to get the best and neatest of work done at the lowest prices.

Spaulding & Robertson's Young Ladies Bane gave a concert at Simon's hall last Friday night to a large audience. The entertainment was a good one and highly appreciated.

The most pleasing feature of the evening was given by the recitations of Miss Lura Barden. This young lady is certainly a very fine elocutionist, and her selections were very happily chosen. In the selection in which she personated the insane woman, and also in reciting the little girl's story, Miss Barden did some remarkably fine acting. In looking at her in these pieces one could scarcely keep from thinking she ought to be an actress. In the selection entitled "The Jiners," Miss Barden kept the audience in continuous laughter, and at the close of the piece brought down the house by a local hit, at the expense of our beloved and honored citizen and attorney, Sibley G. Taylor.

Take your watch or clock when in need of repairs to Will Mowrey the Jeweler and you can rely on having it done promptly and in the best manner. Lowest of prices. Opposite Darling's drug store.

The following biographical sketch we clip from the Detroit Evening News. The subject of the sketch is well known here and is a subscriber of the HERALD:

PIERCE HANRAHAN was swept 16 to a day when, 25 years ago, he left the town of Kilkenny, Ireland, and crossed the wide sea to America. When he landed at Castle Garden did a penny to bless himself had Pierce, so he "took service" with a Quaker farmer in Westchester county N.Y., where he stayed till the spirit of adventure led him into the wild west and the regular army. For five years he fought Utes, Plutes and Modocs from the Red river of the north to the Rio Grande, and for good conduct and soldierly qualities won the chevrons of a sergeant. When the war broke out he was one of that band of marines—the Irish drill sergeants—who converted a mob of counter-jumpers and plover-boys into an army of heroes and invincibles, and Pierce himself followed the flag with an Irishman's joy from Bethel to the apple tree at Appomattox. At the second battle of Bull Run a piece of shell struck him on the head and by some devilish contrivance, raised a lump on his neck which still remains and grows larger in wet weather. After the war Pierce's regiment was disbanded at Fort Wayne. He joined police force—patrolman—very good—vigilant, discriminating—roundsman—writes hand like a lady—detailed for clerical work at headquarters—still there—owns two houses and two children—large, soldierly-looking and trim—neat as a pin—tells good stories—everybody knows him—still roundsman; ought to be sergeant, captain, chief, police commissioner—does everything well—always fills bill to perfection—irascible in wet weather; lump on neck makes him cross; sunshine, clear weather—merry as cricket—Butler democrat.

Strike at Bay City.

About 40 employes at Birdsall & Barker's saw mill [McGraw's] refused to go to work Tuesday Morning, asking an increase in wages. Mr. Barker said of the strike: "At our mill we employ 130 men. Of this number 89 receive from $1.50 to $4 per day, according to the nature of their work." There is light work at every mill for some of the men and, of course, their wages are not as high as the other men receive. Of those we employ 41, eight of whom receive 11 shillings per day and the balance 10 shillings per day. These men struck this morning. As soon as I heard of it I said to the men: "I think we are paying you as much as other firms are paying for the same work. I will make inquiry, and if we are not paying as much we will increase your wages to the same rate that they pay." This did not seem to satisfy the men and they demanded that their wages be increased at once. I told them we could not do it, and I immediately shut down part of the mill. We pay as much as the other mills. It is actually to our advantage to close a portion, if not the entire mill, but we have done everything possible toward keeping the men at work, even going so far as to build additional docks and tramways with a capacity of 4,000,000 feet of lumber. I spoke to the men of the situation of lumber matters, and told them that it was their interest to work at the wages they had been receiving."—Bay City Tribune.

T. A. E. Weadock on the Congressional Situation.

The following, touching on the congressional situation in this district we find in the Detroit Free Press:

Mayor T. A. E. Weadock, of Bay City, was in the city Monday. He spoke very enthusiastically of the Democratic prospects in Michigan, particularly in the Tenth Congressional District.

"We have opened up organization well in the valley," he said. "Bay City has two general Cleveland and Hendricks clubs and West Bay City one and they are all flourishing."

"What is the Congressional situation?"

"Congressman Hatch declines a renomination and the Republicans are at sea, with a vast ocean-full to gather from, regarding his successor. Ex-State Senator C. Frost Gibson, with half a dozen others from Bay City, H. M. Loud, of Oscoda, and B. W. Huston, of Vassar—who has been a Congressional aspirant for lot these many years—and a large field beside are mentioned. The Democrats would ask nothing better than the nomination of Loud. The laboring men up the Huron shore are all opposed to him, because of his attitude in the late strike at Oscoda. It would be a walk-away as against him. But I think we can beat any of their men with the man we shall nominate."

"Who's that?"

"Mayor S. O. Fisher, of West Bay City. He is a splendid man and will make a 'humping' campaign. He has the bee in his bonnet pretty bad, too, and we are entirely willing he should, as he is the popular choice for the candidacy."

"He also has the important 'b' in his pocket—a barrel," commented E. J. Ensign, who stood by.

"Quite true," continued Mayor Weadock.

"Will the Greenbackers support him?"

"The best men of the party have shown a decided inclination to do so. There may be some opposition, but it is inconsiderable."

"How do you stand regarding the State canvass?"

"I am in favor of a union of the opposition forces and I believe a union will again carry the State."

Piper Became Suddenly Scarce.

On Wednesday evening at the first entertainment given by the Young Ladies Band, four young gentlemen of Oscoda occupied seats in the front row; right next to the stage. On Thursday evening two of the same young gentlemen, Max Pease and Robt. Duncan, took the same seats. They were very emphatically invited by Mr. King either to take seats in the back part of the house—35c seats—or to purchase tickets for reserved seats. They went to the door to get their tickets back, in order to go down to the office to exchange them for reserves. Mr. Piper, the business manager, refused at first to return their tickets, using language to them which is unfit for publication. In short, he called them some very low names, and accused them of insulting the ladies of the band the previous evening. The next morning they went to Piper and asked him to apologize for his language. He refused to do so, and they then went to Prosecuting Attorney Henry and had a complaint made out against Piper, charging him with accusing them of doing a low and degrading act. Piper got wind of the fact that he was going to be arrested, and sneaked out through the back streets, past the Driving Park, and got on the train at the "Y" after it had left the depot.

Justice Hill, who drove up the river in the morning, issued a warrant as soon as he got back to town, about 8 o'clock, and a telegram was immediately sent to Sheriff Esmond to arrest Piper. In the evening Deputy J. W. Lanktree received an answer from the Sheriff, saying that Piper had left there by the mail boat at noon.—Au Sable Saturday Night.

simple dyspepsia. It is more common in men than in women, and especially affects sedentary persons and those nervous individuals who eat rapidly, swallowing their food without proper mastication. It is also common in persons whose teeth are defective. Its immediate cause is deficient activity in the muscular walls of the stomach and intestines, and also deficient quantity or quality of gastric juice. The symptoms are much the same as those which follow the taking an excess of food, but are felt only when a moderate amount has been taken. An hour or two after eating a sensation of weight and oppression is felt. The discomfort continues for some hours, gradually wearing off before the next meal. The appetite is usually pretty good, but often the stomach will not be prepared for the reception of food at meal time, as the work of digesting the previous meal has not yet been accomplished. Sometimes there is considerable flatulence of the stomach, the eructations being tasteless, however, never offensive; often pain between shoulders or beneath one shoulder-blade, and not infrequently in the region of the heart. Palpitation of the heart often occurs in the night, causing great alarm on the part of the patient and his friends, who entertain fears of his sudden death. Sleep is disturbed and unrefreshing. The tongue is often foamy in the morning, with a bad taste in the mouth. All the symptoms mentioned are greatly exaggerated by a late supper, or by an unusual excess in quantity or quality of food. The bowels are usually constipated, but may be regular. When the difficulty has been long continued, there will be observed a marked disposition to sleep after meals, or unnatural sleepiness at other times, and a decided loss of natural vivacity and energy. Acid dyspepsia is that form of indigestion in which the slowness of digestion is such that the food undergoes fermentation, forming acids which irritate the stomach and give rise to the same symptoms, much exaggerated, which have been mentioned as attending slowness of digestion with several others, the principal of which are heartburn, regurgitation of intensely sour liquid from the stomach, acid eructations, a white tongue, frequently with transverse fissures, often flabby and indented at the edges, acid saliva, causing decay of the teeth, bowels likely to be either constipated or unnaturally loose, grinding of the teeth at night, and a reddish sediment in the urine. No one patient presents all the symptoms, but more or less of them. There is quite likely also to be pain at the pit of the stomach, with soreness on pressure. On account of the extreme slowness of digestion, farinaceous food always aggravate this form of dyspepsia. Starchy-food, sugar, fruits, and especially vegetables of all kinds, cause great increase of acidity and heartburn. In some cases even bread and all sorts of preparations from grains will disagree. Sugar, or any food containing it, will give rise to great distress. A meal consisting of animal food almost entirely may be digested without difficulty, though milk frequently sours. The digestion being very slow, portions of fermenting food remain in the stomach from one meal to another, so that acidity becomes habitual. Patients suffering with this form of dyspepsia are usually very thin and bloodless. Occasionally, however, we meet with a case of the opposite kind, in which there is an abundance of tissue, though of a loose, flabby texture. Women suffer from acidity more than men.—Herald of Health.

Gave Away Her Baby.
Last Wednesday evening a poor woman arrived in the Indianapolis depot over the Bee Line Road, with two or three bundles and a baby. She looked discouraged. Tom Price, the train caller, inquired what road she wanted. She said she wanted to go to Illinois, and asked him to get her a ticket, at the same time giving him the money. He purchased the ticket and gave her the nickel in change, and learned that that was all the money she possessed. Gathering up her bundles for her, Tom asked her to follow him and he would show her the train. Noticing that she was leaving the child, he asked her if it did not belong to her. She told him no; that she had given it to a lady in the room.
Mr. Price returned to the room and found another lady who was going to Bushnell, Ill., had taken up the child and was looking at it admiringly. He offered to help her to the train, this time carrying the baby. As he walked toward the train he asked if it belonged to her. She replied that it did; that it had been given her by a poor, discouraged woman who had arrived in the depot that evening, and who had said she was unable to take care of it on account of her poverty.—N. Y. Journal.

Dresses for Young Ladies.
Simple and very pretty is a dress for a young lady. The short skirt is finished at the lower edge with a knife plaiting of cream silk. Above this plaiting is a very deep puff of cream cashmere headed by five tiny ruffles of silk, then comes another deep puff of the cashmere, over which falls the full, gracefully-looped drapery from the waist line. The pointed corsage is of cashmere cut V shape in the neck and is trimmed on the short sleeves and the end of the throat opening, which is edged with lace, with loops of ribbon, pink rose buds and green leaves. Clusters of the roses and leaves are also used as ornamentation where the over drapery of the skirt is secured.
Another useful and becoming dress for a young lady or a miss is of ivory crepe, the short skirt trimmed with two deep box plaits of the material, each edged with lace. Scarf tunic over the front and hips form drapery in the back. The waist has plastron front of lace, put in full, between shirrings of the crepe on either side. Lace finished elbow sleeves, lace frill at the throat and sash of satin ribbon tied about the waist and brought down in large loop ends at the side.
For a miss of ten or twelve years a new wrap is in pelisse shape, full effect in the skirt given by shirrings down the waist front, with the width left in the skirt of the stylish little garment, which is allowed to fall open far enough to show the plaitings in the front of dress skirt, worn beneath. The back is made in the same manner, only it is closed in the center and at the waist line; on either side of the front puff is a sash-belt of plaited satin, which forms deep loop bows in this center of the back. This garment is in navy blue satin, with felt hat in the same shade, trimmed with satin and feathers.
A suit to be worn in the early spring by a young girl the same age is in one of the mode tones. The skirt is of cloth, made plain in front, side plaited over the sides and full in the back, the lower edge being trimmed with wide bands of blue velvet. The apron over drapery is also bordered with the velvet, while the fullness in the back is not trimmed. The fitted corsage has a plaited front, crossed by bands of velvet with cluster of loops in the middle, velvet collar, cuffs and belt, loops of cloth serving as basque skirt to the bodice. The hat is covered with the modeste cloth, and is bound and trimmed with velvet and two birds.—Philadelphia

She Was Disappointed.
A crowd had gathered the other day in front of a new clock which had just been unveiled over the door of a large jewelry store on Woodward avenue, and a tall, lank woman in a red shawl and Hoosier hat, with a lean, yellow dog at her heels, stopped to look on.
"Where's the show?" she asked of a man next to her, as she looked up and down the avenue.
"There," said he, pointing to the new clock.
"Well, what is it? What do them figgers do?"
"They move automatically, answered the man.
"Which?"
"The figure on the left is Father Time," explained the man, good naturedly. "That on the right is Vulcan. When the hour strikes they come out and perform."
"Show 'em a performance is it? Why didn't ye say so? How soon does it begin?"
"As quick as the clock strikes twelve."
The woman braced herself against a lamp-post and the yellow dog sat down and waited. Presently the clock struck, and the figure of Time made a few moves and the blacksmith pretended to rap his anvil. Then they subsided into their former state of repose.
"Well, I swan!" said the woman, as the crowd moved away, "if that ain't a leetle the worst performance I ever see."
"Why, what did you expect?" asked a bystander.
"Expect! why, I expected a show of course. I expected Old Time would flop up and dance a jig and ring them dinner bells, and play a chune on that there instrument at his feet, and that the t'other one would sail in and give him one over the left ear, and a whole brass band would play Hail Columbia, with varashuns an' it would last n' hour 'n' half anyhow. If it hadn't been a free show, I'd be madder'n a wet hen. Kum, Philandy, less go hum"—and she started off with her nose in the air, and the yellow dog at her heels.—Detroit Free Press.
