Republican Convention.

The Republican county convention held at the court house last Saturday afternoon for the purpose of electing delegates to the State, Congressional, Senatorial and Representative conventions was called to order by S. G. Taylor. John C. Gram of Au Sable was chosen temporary chairman and C. R. Jackson of Baldwin temporary secretary. The chairman appointed the following committees: Permanent organization—Geo. P. Smith, Greene Pack and H. M. Loud. On credentials: L. B. Smith, R. K. Gowanlock and J. E. Forrest. The committee reported for permanent chairman, J. F. Thompson, of Thompson, and W. H. Simpson for permanent secretary, which report was adopted. After some discussion it was decided to elect delegates to State convention by ballot. Greene Pack of Oscoda and J. B. Tuttle of Baldwin were chosen as delegates each receiving 23 votes. Granger Hill, of Oscoda, and Geo. P. Smith of Baldwin were chosen to Congressional convention, each receiving full vote. Four ballots were taken to choose delegates to Senatorial convention which resulted in the choice of W. H. Simpson and R. K. Gowanlock. The delegates to the Representative convention were chosen by acclamation as follows: C. R. Henry Geo. Orth, W. N. Miller, E. Laidlaw, C. North, and B. F. Smith.

Delegates unable to attend conventions were empowered to appoint their own proxy, but in case of a vacancy at convention the delegates present to cast full vote of the county.

Gen. R. A. Alger was unanimously endorsed for candidate for governor and W. C. Stevens for auditor general.

H. M. Loud was the unanimous choice of the convention for congressman.

On motion the appointment of the county committee was postponed until the next county convention.

Love Laughs at Locksmiths.

Love crops out in unexpected places. It grows and develops under the soothing influences of a fast sailing yacht, and instances are upon record where the tender passion was stimulated by the oscillating sentimentality of a swinging gate, or where the rustic lovers were cheerily treading the new made ground, sowing the luxuriant grass seed. But it is in the Barnum-London hippodrome where romances score a home run. Two years ago a young and handsome equestrian, who for the nonce we will call Sedro, was detailed to rehearse the leading male character in the thrilling Indian drama, "A Chase for a wife." Riding like the whirlwind he dashes after Little Sunshine, rescues her from the guerillas, and throwing his arm about her waist, lifts the beautiful girl from her saddle and gallops in triumph to his lodge. Month after month has he dashed around the course with his lovely burden in his arms, until the young Indian maiden had become a burden no longer. The rigid discipline of the show rendered futile all attempts at a meeting. So, too, their correspondence was a failure, for Little Sunshine's simple efforts at letter-writing were as unintelligible to Sedro as was his bold Anglo-Baxon hand to her. But there was one brief, happy moment at every performance when cruel parents and green room discipline might be forgotten. In this wild and exciting race around the course, pursued by howling Mexicans and yelling Indians and amid the clash of firearms and din of the band, the young lovers whispered their love into willing ears, pledged their truth and arranged the details of the future as sacredly and minutely as if an audience of 15,000 were not breathlessly gazing upon their perilous ride. The wedding occurs in New York late in October, immediately after the traveling season.—Bay City Tribune.

What He Could Spare Best.

"Look here," said a grocery keeper to a hill-side farmer in Kentucky, "you owe me $50 and I want my money." "Hain't got a durn cent, mister," was the confident answer.

"Well, I'll swoop down on your miserable little garden patch and take it out of what you own."

"Hain't got nothing thar 'ats worth a dang."

"You've got a cow, and three pigs and a mule?"

"Yes, thar's the frame work of a cow, and them pigs look like pork bars with the staves kicked outen 'em, and the mule's so thin the buzzards turn that noses up at him."

"Well, I won't be hard on you, but I'm bound to have something. What can you spare best?"

"Lemme see a minit. Thar's the cow and them pigs and the mule and—and—the old woman. You jis' san' round an' git the old woman. A man in my fix ain't got

The excursion given by the steamer Arundell from Alpena to Point Lookout last Sunday was largely attended. For some reason the boat did not stop at this point on her trip down, but nevertheless the most of those who got on at East Tawas were from this place and at least 15 more would have attended had the boat stopped here.

The Muskegon Chronicle says the mill men at that point are not inclined to join in the proposed shut down of the mills on the 1st of September than do those of Ludington. It says: "Those lumbermen who have been questioned to day in regard to the proposed closing of the mills as contemplated by the meeting at Chicago, a call for which is published, are inclined to doubt its practicability. The prospect is that the Muskegon mills will run this year as long as usual."

For a few years E. A. Aldrich has had to contend with a destructive animal in his potato patch and the same pest appears again this season. This week he captured one of them and put it on exhibition in a glass can at the bank. It is a bug of huge dimensions, about one inch in length, quick, supple and with the savage look and strong limbs of a tarantula. It begins by eating the side of a potato, and, if not interrupted, soon bores a large hole through its center, leaving but little of the vegetable for Mr. Aldrich.—Leslie Local.

Three additional special prizes for giving away at the coming county fair have been offered by G. E. Van Syckle. The first is a piano to be presented to the couple united in marriage on the fair grounds, and if there are two or more couples it is to be awarded to the homeliest. The second prize is $5 worth of music for the best cultured voice. The third is for the woman exhibiting the largest family at the fair ground, who previously never owned a sewing machine.—Bay City Tribune.

Last week R. M. Tackabury disposed of the remainder of his stock of groceries to John Graham, and retired from the business. John is now fitting the store up and making various improvements preparatory to putting in a choice line of groceries. He is now purchasing his stock and hopes to be doing business next week. Mr. Graham is worthy of considerable encouragement and substantial support and there are many in Tawas who wish him success in his new enterprise.

The Saginaw Courier of Monday has the following: Several million feet of lumber were disposed of in this market during last week, at prices as good as have ruled during the past sixty days. A sale Friday is noted of 600,000 feet at $9 for shipping culls; $18 for common, and $35 for uppers. A sale of 1,500,000 lath at $1.25 was reported Friday. The market for this commodity is dull. There is some inquiry for shingles, but no improvement in quotations. Sales are on a basis of $1.65 for cedar butts and $3.00@3.20 for XXX.

The indications are that with favorable weather logging will be done very cheaply next winter. Camp supplies, especially for the teams, promise to be lower than they have been for years, and if there is curtailment in the cut on some of the larger streams, and the operators now say there will be, men will be plentiful and wages low. Should such condition exist it is a question if they do not inspire the majority of loggers to push operations as vigorously

Justice Hines, of Muskegon, is getting some hard slaps from the press for his apparent bias in the cases against the Salvationists. One of the Muskegon papers says: "The Salvationists were 'stuck,' of course; every defendant is in Hines' court. He reasons: 'If a plaintiff hadn't a good case, he wouldn't bring it.' 'Six cents fine and $32 costs' was the verdict. This is in perfect accord with Hines' prayer when he retires o' nights: 'Oh, Lord, give us this day our daily bread—with costs.'"

The report that Chas. Dease, of Tawas, was robbed of his watch and money while asleep in the Everett house, East Saginaw, arose from a practical joke played on him by a friend. Mr. Dease dozed asleep momentarily while sitting in a chair in the office and a friend coming in quietly took his watch and purse, restoring them as soon as he had got the laugh on Charley. On awakening, he was alarmed at first and a patrolman being near heard of his supposed loss and told it to a reporter.—Bay City Tribune.

Reports show that during the month of July there were 88 marine casualties on the lakes, distributed as follows: Lake Michigan 42, Lake Huron 10, Lake Superior 4, Sault river 4, River St. Clair 7, Lake St. Clair 2, Detroit river 7, Lake Erie 17, Lake Ontario 5—7 more than in June. The total loss amounts at a close estimate to $249,141. Of this sum $56,700 was on cargoes, which is in excess of the preceding month of $119,842. The causes may be summarized as follows: Disabled $32,400, stranded $80,600, heavy weather $31,500, collisions $78,842, fire $17,300, capsized $400, ashore $500, lighting $300. The prevailing winds were westerly and southwest. There were 31 deaths from all causes—accidental 25, natural causes 2, suicide 2, murdered 2.

The following communication which pretends to show the state of affairs at our sister village we clip from the Detroit Free Press: A report has gained circulation that a saloon is to be licensed here soon. As it is now, we have free whiskey. No one can truthfully deny as follows:

- 1. A large amount of whiskey is drunk daily in this town.
- 2. That whiskey is sold by individuals on the quiet.
- 3. That the town does not derive a cent income by way of tax, or even fines, for either of above.
- 4. That whiskey and other spirituous liquors are manufactured here.
- 5. That thirty-five empty beer kegs have been on the deck at one time for shipment back to brewery.
- 6. That boys are often seen drunk and with bottles of whiskey in their pockets. Yet this is temperance Tawas!

It is rumored that the State of Michigan has jurisdiction over the waters of Saginaw Bay, and that complaints will be made against steamboats selling between this town and Tawas City. As the boats do not sell at the docks, persons walk to Tawas City, there take the boat and purchase liquors by the bottle while coming here, and bringing this liquor on shore, distribute among others.

In last week's issue of the HERALD appeared an article on the running race at this track two weeks ago, signed by John C. P. McDonald, one of the owners of the mare, Gentle Annie, charging Messrs. Prescott and Spileman with sending them a challenge to run at the races for from $100 to $500. The truth of it is that no such propositions were made by either of these men. Mr. Prescott having sold his mare some time previous to the races and Mr. Spileman did not know that there was to be a running race and did not consent to have his pony run until the evening before the race, which consent was only gained at the earnest request of several gentlemen of this place and Au Sable. Mr. Spileman is a man who does not indulge in horse racing and who furthermore does not bet, his pony was entered more for amusement than otherwise. Mr. Boutyette, one of the owners of Gentle Annie, says he knows nothing about any bets being offered by Mr. Spileman and we also understand that Mr. McDonald admitted he was mistaken. The race was just won and that is all, by Gentle Annie over the pony, yet we fail to see any reason for the owners of Gentle Annie to feel particularly jubilant. The pony is a little mustang for which Mr. Spileman paid the large amount of $55. The meanest article is the one by "K" in last week's Saturday Night. In speaking of the running race the article says of Gentle Annie: "Gentle Annie won the races with hands down, the Tawas flyers [?]

their piles, but the temperance town was also a poverty town, and dollars to hay-seeds went a-begging—poor Tawas being short on hay-seeds that day. Gentle Annie was speedy, game and a "stayer," and verified the good opinion of her friends." To those acquainted with the circumstances the above sounds decidedly foolish and utterly devoid of common sense. Even had Gentle Annie won so easily it would have been no great victory to crow over. Last Saturday there were races at Au Sable, about 100 we are informed attended, 55 of whom went from the Tawas. On this occasion it seems that the Tawas people carried the dollars but their Au Sable friends lack the sand.

In THE Irish World of last week appears a large cartoon representing John Bull crossing a gulf on a free trade plank, carrying a large pack of cheap goods. The supports of the plank are labeled "Anglo-democratic support". Toward the end for which John is making his way Uncle Sam stands at closed gate with the placard "Closed for Protection" hung out. The following dialogue takes place between the two: "Uncle Sam—Not to day, John. Don't want anything from you. John Bull—Call 'round after h'lection, eh? Uncle Sam—Waal, I shouldn't advise ye. For if Blaine's lected he will keep this gate closed; and if Cleveland carries, why he will make the boys work sixteen hours a day and brother Beecher, who is a free-trader and goes for Cleveland, says bread and water is good enough for workmen, and how is your pauper labor going to compete with us then?"

Below we give a part of the address made by H. H. Graves of Mt. Pleasant at Gladwin, July 4. Mr. Graves is one of the most prominent and influential democrats in that part of the State:

"I will pass over the events since the war by calling attention to the fact that as a rule wise laws have been enacted for the government of the people, our financial condition seems to be improving with each succeeding yearly statement, our commerce is being increased and extended to the marts of the old world, our manufacturing industries have doubled in a decade, our laboring classes are being elevated and protected, the arts and sciences are patronized more than ever before; in fact, our whole people, north, south, east and west, are prospering, accumulating wealth and storing up knowledge for future generations. What more can we ask? Immigration is pouring in upon us from Europe, and on through the eastern and middle states the tide flows toward the great west, which, with its remarkable agricultural resources, its manufacturing advantages, its immense fields of minerals and its magnificent climate, it bids fair to become the greatest inland industrial empire of the world. With the aid of capital and intellect supported by the influences of Christianity, the results will be astonishing and will inevitably be the very culmination of prosperity and happiness."

The following circular has been sent to the lumber manufacturers by the Lumber Manufacturers Association of the northwest, at Chicago:

"From the large number of replies received at this office answering our circular letter of July 7, in regard to limiting the manufacture of lumber during the remainder of the season, and the general desire expressed that a convention of manufacturers should be called at an early date, for the consideration of this and other important questions affecting the production of logs and lumber in the near future, the executive committee of this association has decided to issue this call for a convention of lumber manufacturers, to be held at the Grand Pacific hotel, Chicago, Wednesday, Aug. 20, 1884, at 10 o'clock a. m. Every manufacturer in the northwest is invited to attend and participate in the discussion of the important questions to be present. It is suggested that the manufacturers of each locality take immediate steps to confer with each other, and to instruct those who intend to attend the convention, as to the views and feelings of those who cannot attend the convention, with regard to the feasibility of an early shutting down of the mills.

Delegates are requested to come prepared to report the estimated stocks of logs and lumber at their producing points; the views and feelings of the boom companies of their district upon the question of early shutting down of mills, and generally upon all questions which may suggest themselves in this connection.

During the day of the convention the annual meeting of the manufacturers' association for the election of officers for the ensuing year will be held, and an opportunity given to all manufacturers who desire to become members of said association.

A. C. MORSEHEAD, of New York City, a strong prohibitionist who was nominated as one of the presidential electors of that state at the convention on the 8th of July, is evidently a man of sound sense and the prohibitionists throughout the country will do well to imitate the stand taken by him in his answer to the chairman of the prohibitory executive committee:

"Though I am a strong, what some would call a radical, prohibitionist, I do not think it wise to undertake to elect a president now. I never dare expend my efforts to accomplish what is an impossibility, and between the two men to be chosen I consider Mr. Blaine and his views upon national questions very far superior to Mr. Cleveland's, and the great republican party in its past record as far more conducive to the development of the industry and welfare of this nation than the democratic party. We as temperance men have nothing to hope from the success of the democrats, and if, as temperance men, we, within the lines of the republican party and the few temperance democrats, all unite and concentrate our energies in purifying the parties, and also unite as a balance of power to cast our votes for the man of either party who is the nearest right, as we believe, we shall much more speedily accomplish our great object than by supporting the nominee of the third party. I therefore will be compelled to decline the honor, as it would not be consistent for me to accept unless I fully acceded with their course of action."

The department of agriculture reports the condition of corn averages the same as the Pacific coast. A slight decline in the condition was reported in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and in some of the southern states. A drought prevailed in portions of the Ohio valley, and in Texas with considerable severity, reducing the condition of corn six points.

The report for wheat includes only the spring wheat region. The average is 98, one point higher than in the two last years.

The average for condition of oats is 94, one point lower than in 1883. The crop has been harvested in lower latitudes and promises a fine yield in most northern states.

The condition of rye, averages 97, the same as last month.

Barley also maintains its high condition. The prospect is favorable for another large crop of potatoes, not so full as last year, on an area three per cent smaller. Present indications point to a crop about 10 per cent less than that of 1883, with a large difference if the future condition should do less favorable.

The keeper of the only saloon at Runck Gulch, Col., got early information that two horse thieves were going to be hanged in the place, and he hastily advertised the entertainment by means of placards throughout the region, thus drawing a highly remunerative multitude.—Chicago Herald.

Between the ages of fifteen and forty-five a woman can grow about seven crops of hair. It averages about four ounces to the crop, and when the prevailing popular color, brings a handsome price. The total annual crop is estimated at 100 tons, gathered from 800,000 heads.—N. Y. Tribune.

Rattan and cane bedroom furniture is growing in popularity. The beds and dressing cases come in extremely pretty artistic designs. They are cool, and if properly attended to and cleaned once every six months will last a lifetime. They are sometimes ornamented with broad satin ribbon, but they look just as well without this addition.—N. Y. Herald.

Louisville has gone back on the standard time recently adopted throughout the country. Out of one hundred of the largest cities in the United States seventy-eight still use the standard time. Of the twenty-two cities that refuse to adopt it Cleveland and Cincinnati are the most important.—Chicago Journal.

"We need right here in the South," says the New Orleans Picayune, "more than anything else, skilled labor. We want, more and more, trained architects, engineers and machinists. Technical education should be constantly applauded and assisted, and our young men should be taught that 'the learned professions' are not the only avenues to distinction and wealth."

Those were very old cigars which were given the other day to the Spanish consul at Portland, Me. They were a lot of two thousand sent to his predecessor thirty-eight years ago, but which failed to come into his hands before he was transferred from his post. After being stored for so long a period, they are still pronounced to be of excellent flavor.—Boston Herald.

Always keep the love letters your husband wrote you before marriage in a well-locked iron box in the darkest corner of the attic. Nothing puts a man in such a temper as to stumble across his former effusions and read a few pages of them. Some men under such circumstances have been known to kick themselves down stairs and be seriously injured.—Exchange.

The "heathen Chinese" may be a poor, deluded son of an effete civilization, but he is too "fly" to allow trusted cashiers to get away with the "boodle." Go Siu runs a Boston "washer" house. Sun Gun, Hop Yu, Chu Gum, One Lung, Ah There and Stay There wrestle with the wash tub. One Lung was footing up the crow tracks on the day-book the other night to see if it tallied with the cash, and when asked if he was the regular cashier replied: "O, no; me keepee to-day, next boy to-morrow. Evly day another boy, one boy all time too muchee cheat. All same Melican man."—Boston Globe.

The Medical Record makes the startling statement that looking-glasses are responsible for mercurial poisoning. In two cases given, of a man and his wife, the cause of the trouble was in a looking-glass hanging in the bedroom, the wooden back of which was dotted with thousands of minute globules of mercury. The apartment was heated during the night. In another instance the source of the poisoning was a mirror, forty years old, whose back had become weak and from whose face the quicksilver freshness was fading. The aged culprits having been summarily removed, their victims speedily recovered.

The secret cause of the death of many formerly healthy spruces in and near Boston and in other localities in New England is easy of discovery. By examining the dying trees it will be found that the tip of almost every tiny branch has been stung by an insect, and its spring vitality directed to the formation of a false cone. These cones are now ripe, having been, in fact, for more than two weeks, and from each of them have escaped fifteen or twenty young worms, which are probably the offspring of the insect which did the stinging. The most thorough and careful plucking of all of these false cones might perhaps have saved the afflicted trees and prevented similar disaster next year.—Boston Globe.

rows. He hid at once in the straw of his cage, and never left it till the gun was hung up again. After that I had only to touch the stock, to make him hide again, when nothing could be seen in the straw, except a pair of sharp eyes watching all my motions. Just a touch of my finger or a cane upon the cock of the gun was enough to deprive him of all quiet. I used to carry on my watch-chain a little pistol, on which a percussion-cap would make a tolerably loud report. The monkey had not yet found this out, and sitting on my knees, would amuse itself with flicking the silver barrel. One day in his presence I put a percussion-cap on the nipple of the pistol. The monkey observed my movements with great attention, but without seeming disturbed by them. But when the cock, being raised, made two clicks, Molly dropped his eyebrows, while he continued sitting quietly. When the explosion took place, his fright was unbounded. Crying loudly, and full of anguish, he fell from my knees, ran across several rooms, leaped out of the window, clung to a water-pipe, slid down to the street and hid himself in a ditch in a neighboring garden. His nervousness lasted a long while, and I had to take off my watch-chain to appease it. From that day he was in such fear of the little pistol that to take hold of the chain was enough to make him disappear in the straw. But he very soon learned by experience that the source of the detonation was not in the chain but in the pistol, and could easily distinguish it from the other appendages of the chain, of which he was not afraid at all. Sitting on the straw in his cage, he would attentively watch my movements while I was handling these appendages. The closer my fingers approached the formidable object, the greater became his anxiety, and with his eyes riveted upon the instrument and with tense ears, he would dance continuously in the cage, all ready to go under the straw. He would assure himself beforehand, for greater security, that the cage-door was well shut; and one day, when the bolt had not been pushed in, he leaped out from the cage, which did not seem safe enough for him, and went and hid himself under the bed in the next room. As I gradually removed my hand from the pistol, I would receive chuckles of approbation; and, with his lips pushed forward and the muscles of his ear moving by jerks, he would manifest a very great joy.—M. J. Fischer, in Popular Science Monthly.

Juries and Jurymen.
It is a current notion that the reason why so few first-class business men are found upon our juries is that they are excused by the courts. The returns show that such men rarely get upon the jury lists. In the exceptional cases where such men are returned to serve it is no doubt one of the most important duties of a Judge to brace himself up against yielding to any but the best of excuses. Boards of Trade would do well not only to inculcate it as a point of honor that none of their members should seek to shirk this grave public duty, but also to see to it that their class be properly represented. And here let me add that the general hardship of jury duty is over-estimated. I have repeatedly had business men at the end of a term confess to me not only the satisfaction they have felt in performing this function, and the interest they have felt in their work, but their surprise it was so little onerous. Connected with the elevation of the character of the jury is the question of their better treatment. The two reforms go hand in hand. It is no doubt essential to preserve the strict control of the presiding Judge over the conduct of the jury; but it is now the aim of thoughtful Judges to exercise this control with the utmost courtesy that circumstances allow. The jurors are, in truth, a part of the court, sitting under the same solemn obligation, and engaged in the same serious duty. Respect from others tends to increase their self-respect. I cannot but feel that the more they are treated as gentlemen the better they will respond to the call upon them to act as such. I particularly object to the uncomfortable and unsanitary arrangements of most of our jury rooms. This constitutes to many persons of delicate health or refined tastes the most serious objection to jury service; while to those in good health, and who are less fastidious, it is still an annoying discomfort, which disturbs the considerate and calm judgment so important in reaching impartial and accurate verdicts. In this suggestion of better accommodations for jurors, I am sure that I shall carry the assent of all reasonable men.—Judge R. C. Pitman, in North American Review.

A Business Scene.
"Well, sir," he said, rubbing his hands and smiling pleasantly as a young man entered the store, "what can we do for you to-day?"
"You keep a good many things here, don't you?" the young man responded, looking about.
"O, yes; we keep most everything in stock. If there is anything you want that you don't see, just ask for it. We can supply you."
"Well, I don't see any money. My boss sent me around with this old bill to collect, so I'll just ask you for the amount."
"O, yes; I remember that bill. I'm sorry, but I guess you will have to wait a little for the money."
"All right," replied the young man, sitting down in a chair; "that's what the boss told me."
"What did the boss tell you?"
"He told me to wait for the money."

It has been a comparatively few years that large adventure has attracted general interest to those formidable regions. One of the earliest of the noted explorers was Sir John Franklin, who ventured into the polar realm in 1845, and since the July of that year nothing has been learned of him or his companions. He had then reached Melville Bay, north latitude 77 deg. 45 min. The first expedition for the relief of this party was begun in 1848, and for five years there was an uninterrupted effort to find the whereabouts of the missing men, there being thirty-eight different commands, besides six land expeditions, during that time, the United States Government liberally aiding in the search. In 1860 Dr. Isaac I. Hayes undertook a new exploration. The highest point reached by him was named Cape Lieber, north latitude 81 deg. 35 min., and he received several gold medals for his reward. Captain C. F. Hall began the first of his three voyages in 1860, when it was still believed some of the Franklin party might be alive. He again made the voyage in 1864, a cruise of four years, and his last attempt to solve the mystery of the ice realm was made in 1871, during which he died. In 1879, Lieutenant Schwatka, United States Army, made a sledging journey with good results, and in the same year the disastrous De Long expedition was begun. The sad story of this adventure, with Danenhower and Melville's search, is too new in the public mind, through the recent return of the bodies of the unfortunate party, to form other than a quick prologue to the Greeley disaster now so live an interest.

One of the most notable cruises was that made under command of Sir George Nares, in 1876, for the reason that, on the day of May 12, he touched the highest point of north latitude that had ever been reached, 82 deg. 24 min. The results of this expedition were regarded as being of great value and importance, and it is not unconsoling now to think that, in spite of the lamentable mischances of the Greeley expedition, American enterprise carried exploration four miles to the north of this point, and determined the mooted question of the extent of Greenland. From this cursory review of some of the more conspicuous voyages, it will appear that the charm and fascination of discovery have led many noble champions to dare dangers that cannot be properly conceived by those whose fortune is within the comprehended limits of ordinary experience. The longing of science to look into the mystic possession of the close-locked secrets of the north has inspired an enthusiastic disregard of the perils and intense sufferings entailed by these apparently improvident missions; and though there has been a strong element of conservative opposition to this hazardous course, where there has not been a public spirit to sanction this purpose of legitimate inquiry private enterprise has furnished the means. Reviewing these exploits of research, and perceiving how much larger is the proportion of disaster to the good obtained, it is no wonder many are strenuously resolved against sympathy with movements that appear so foolhardy if not criminal in their risks of life, and refuse to consider the nobler ends and aims, the holier impulses and desires that rise above the mere love of adventure and take the force of an heroic devotion to the broad interests of mankind.

These voyages are not romances with the men who undertake them, and beyond the interest in the exciting contest with the unknown and undetermined there is a practical value in these courageous attempts to demonstrate and explain certain vital physical phenomena. At such a time as this there is the inspiration of applause and commendation to shut out from thought the inclination to censure and condemn. In the presence of these five men who have come back from the most fruitful achievement of all the daring endeavors to pierce to the polar sea, laden with information that will greedily be received by men who are more interested in ascertaining the governing facts and forces of our world than in the preservation of a few lives, there should be only reverent admiration. While there is something to be learned, the only means by which that knowledge may be acquired must be unsentimentally seized upon. Science is selfish, sacrificial, ruthless in its methods, perhaps, but it is so necessarily. In the subjugation of nature the elements of nature must be understood, and the great region of seemingly useless waste in ice and snow has a relation to the balance of the earth that science should understand, and though scores of years are lost and hundreds of lives sacrificed in the endeavor to gain this understanding, the cost will not be too great if the domain of civilization and commerce may be increased or benefited. The extension and correction of geographical knowledge are matters of incalculable National importance, and through exploration alone may be obtained the material and facts for such changes as have revolutionized in a few centuries the practical world.

After two centuries of futile explorations and appalling disasters the imagined northeast passage was finally discovered, and a triumphant Scandinavian opened a water gate to strengthen commerce. It does not become a country of the magnitude and unsurpassed grandeur of the United States to be behind the world in reaching out to aid and foster science, and we can not afford to give advantages to other countries in matters of such gravity as exploration. Indeed, the resolute energy, unwavering bravery and shrewd, clear, judicial character of the American people fit them for the foremost place in such enterprises, and it is not at all unlikely that the secret of the Arctic will yet be snatched from its ice-floes and chilling desolation to the honor of American discovery. But whether the idea of arctic exploration is to be condemned or not, these heroes of the frozen zone are as deserving of popular laurels as men who storm a deadly breach in war's commotion, and

I am only a mosquito, one of that outwaded class against whom the hands of the entire world are raised in perpetual warfare and slaughter. I come when the buttercups begin to brighten the summer fields; when fragrant clover diffuses its incense on the soft, tropical air and azalias and the stately golden-rod tremble in the zephyrs along the river bank. My advent is heralded by the gentle music of my wings. I sing the romance of mosquito life.

Little as I am I strike terror into the hearts of thousands. The moneyed magnate and the impecunious sport tremble alike at my approach. The high-handed tyrant of the household and the political boss acknowledge in me an object of fear. I am proscribed and undergo a species of relentless persecution that would crush many a haughtier spirit. Nevertheless, I bear up under it all and apply myself to my appointed mission, finding ample compensation in the approval of my own conscience. I have seen strong men who have braved the heat of battle—men to whose ears the roar of cannon was music—tremble with terror at my approach. I know my power, but I can't say that I glory in the consciousness of it.

You must know that there are social distinctions made in mosquitodomy just as there are in well regulated society, and they are just, strong and immutable. Each mosquito is a creature of circumstance and into whatever channel chance directs his life he goes and follows it until death. When I was ushered into this world I had the good fortune to fall under the guidance of a grizzled old fellow, who had done years of honorable service in mosquitodomy. His wits were as sharp as his bill, and his skin, which was shrunken and wrinkled, was as tough as leather and calculated to resist the most savage assault. There was not a man of note upon the continent with whom he was not intimately acquainted. His recollections of persons and events were simply marvelous, so it was no wonder that I was an object of envy among the youngsters who came up along with me, as such a mentor insured my future success and social standing. I will remember the day when I was about to start forth into the world the old fellow said to me:

"Now, my son, for heaven's sake do not make yourself common and spoil all of your prospects in your first exploits by billing some politician or book agent. If you do your future is irrevocably blasted." And tears stood in my mentor's eyes as he bade me adieu. I took his advice. The first desirable person I saw was a rich bank cashier, who, it is needless to say, was deacon of a church. With a wildly palpitating heart and filled with excitement to such a degree that I couldn't utter a single note, I paid the old fellow my respects. I must confess that I was really pained and shocked at the startling language he used. It is said that a fiedgeling mosquito stings ten times harder than an adult. He gave me an awful fright, the deacon did, and I determined to select some other than a strict church man for my next acquaintance. So I lit on a retired merchant and a severe moralist. I experienced the same startling results. I was young and had strong faith in mankind. Inexperience thrown upon a world of humanity moved by so many different forces will soon receive many severe shocks.

Perched on a netting in a fashionable hotel, with bowed head I yielded myself a prey to the doubts which surged upon me, when my old mentor dropped lightly at my side.

"Why so downcast, my boy?" he inquired, as he complacently wiped his mouth. He had just finished paying his court to one of the bluest bloods in the establishment and consequently felt in excellent humor. I explained to him what had happened and how my sensibilities were affected, and finally expressed my determination to devote myself to the canaille, when the old veteran shook with laughter and said:

"Why, son, yours is the experience of every mosquito. Its benefits may strike you as being doubtful when your good home training is taken into view, but the effect will eventually be good. It will teach you the frailty of man, his susceptibility to make a perfect demon of himself in secret while he masquerades as a saint. You will see how hollow most lives are."

Town Lots for Sale.
The undersigned has for sale thirty-six (36) building lots, located in blocks 40 and 41, in the village of Tawas City, which he will sell on reasonable terms; said lots have good soil, and are adjacent to the proposed new depot grounds. Parties desirous of purchasing would do well to apply to
No. 15-2m.
WILLIAM KENWY, Tawas City.

For Sale.
A choice lot of Seed Potatoes; the Early Beauty of Hebron, which I obtained of A. G. Van Wey, last spring. I think they are the best potatoes I ever raised; also a choice lot of Early Rose.
REUBEN WADE, Hemlock Road.
