CORRESPONDENCE.

Items for the Thoughtful. What does it mean? That for more than a quarter of a century a solid south and the Romish church have voted together. Did a solid south and men who sympathized with them during the war and the Romish church and foreigners unable to read, vote for Blaine or Cleveland?

THE ELECTION.

The elections of last Tuesday, both national, state and county were very close. In the national election Cleveland and Hendricks are undoubtedly elected, they having carried New York by a very small plurality which gives them 219 out of the 400 electors. In Michigan the Republicans carry the day with the exception of the state legislature which stands 19 to 13 in favor of the Fusionists and 52 to 48 in their favor in the house.

Cure for Piles. PILES are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm in bed, is very common attendant.

Grumblers.

It is your well fed, comfortable fellow who grumbles most. The countryman is as happy as a grig upon potatoes and oatmeal. He changes his oatmeal for something better as soon as he can, but even after this step is effected, when rolls and anchovy toast take the place of porridge, he grumbleth not, or turneth up his nose at the remembrance of his former fare, but eats it. Your city gentleman is a very different sort of animal. Were he kept to potatoes and oatmeal great would be the grumble. When he is prompted to something better he grumbles for another step; when he gets it he is again for a still further elevation, and at length were you to set him down to the very best dinner he would grumble at it for not being a better one.

One source of grumbling not to be lost sight of is that which is supplied by our feelings of self importance and innate dignity. People think it beneath them to be too easily pleased; they are not the sort of folks that anything will do for - not they - and they seek to prove by grumbling at what they have the superior quality or what they ought to have. How many are they who are nothing if not critical; but it is not their discernment that makes them spy faults; it is the wish to be thought to have discernment. Talent is proved in their estimation by fault-finding. They grumble over a work of art, not so much to show what a stupid fellow the author is as what smart fellows they are for having found out his shortcomings.

The Legend of Star Island.

During the troublesome times before and subsequent to the revolution the Isles of Shoals, off the coast of New Hampshire, were the resort and hiding places of the freebooters who haunted the northern coast, and these silent rocks, if they could speak, would tell many a tale of bloody cruelty and gloomy wrong. The pirates used to come here to divide and hide their booty, and melt up the silverplate they captured from the colonists along the coast. For a long time it was supposed that bushels of doubloons were buried in the gaping crevices of the rocks, or the little caves that have been eaten out of the ledges by the restless tide; but the place was thoroughly searched by several generations of fishermen, and nothing more valuable than a rusty outlass or a bust blunderbus was ever found.

There are eight of the islands, the smallest being as large, or rather as small, as a city building lot, and the largest containing only a couple of hundred acres - nothing but bare, lifeless rocks, carved by the incessant waves into strange grotesqueness, and covered by no vegetation except low clinging vines and the New England blueberry. Four of the islands are inhabited, the largest, the Appledore, bears a hotel and a few cottages. Star Island has another hotel and a small settlement of fishermen's huts, and the fourth has a bold, white lighthouse springing out of its crest. They were discovered by Captain John Smith, the friend of Pocahontas, who in 1614 explored the New England coast in an open boat, and spent some time here making repairs and resting.

A Wild Western Notion—What Is Evolved from the Inner Consciousness of an Unscrupulous Journalist.

A PRETTY STORY.

A Bird Alights and Remains Nestling on a Bride's Shoulder During the Marriage Ceremony.

[Lake Geneva (Wis.) Special.] An incident worthy of note transpired here Thursday during the nuptial ceremonies at the Catholic Church of Mr. James Knowles, a policeman of Chicago, and Miss Maggie Brennan, of this place.

BOUND TO MARRY.

The Father of the Bride Driven from the Wedding While the 'Squire Ties the Knot.

[Sedalia (Mo.) Special.] There was a very sensational wedding five miles north of Sedalia last night, in the Longwood neighborhood, and but for the timely appearance of a well-known Justice of the Peace there might have been a tragedy.

Kinsley went away, as they supposed, to arm himself. At this moment Van Garrel arrived. He found one brother armed with an ax, and Dick Duffield sat behind the stove with a double-barreled shot-gun across his knees.

A Double Elopement.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.] The gallant Admiral Rodney had two elopements in his family at the same time. His second son had long courted Lady Catherine Nugent, and though he had the good fortune to succeed in the favorable opinion of the lady, yet he could make no impression on the mind of the eccentric and facetious Earl Nugent, her father.

Winds, Followed by Storms.

[Chicago Tribune.] Facts and figures show that eighty to ninety per cent. of the Signal Service predictions are correct. At the same time the service has by observation and the simple law of average discovered many of those conditions which antedate and consequently indicate storms.

Table with columns for months (January to December) and directions (S.W., S.E., N.W., N.E., W., E.).

These signs may be considered reliable. Of course it can not be assumed that when a southwest to southeast wind, when Chicago in October rain is inevitable, or that when an east to north wind prevails it cannot rain.

[St. Louis Republican.] "If I had a cow that would give such milk, I would dress her in the finest silk; I'd feed her on the best of hay. And milk her forty times a day."

So runs the old ditty on rum. Few people who have heard the lines have ever given the matter of milking cows for anything other than milk a serious thought. And yet a genius in Dakota has succeeded in making a cow give, not exactly rum, but beer.

He continued to feed hops, for which she had a natural liking, then malt and then corn. Grass and hay would not do, because under it the liquid resumed its natural milky character.

A milk famine is now likely to occur at any moment. People may expect to hear of all the vast ranches in the West being transformed into beer breweries, and of dairymen abandoning their milk business to go into the more profitable sale of beer.

YOUTHFUL OUTLAWRY IN VERMONT.

An Unique Story of Organized Crime—The Oaths Taken.

[Jamaica (Vt.) Telegram.] The arrest and confession of two young men for counterfeiting has brought out a unique story of organized crime. Acting upon information obtained from Merton G. Clark, now in jail, United States officers found a wild gulch in the mountains, a few miles from this village, the headquarters of a criminal gang which has been coining spurious dollars.

"Do you solemnly swear upon your honor, by all that is great and small, to keep forever secret all we are about to tell you, under the fear of being laid below the rays of the sun, moon and stars by the united band of avengers, so help you God?"

When the last oath was administered, says young Clark, the applicant knelt, and a cocked revolver, loaded with ball cartridges, was held at his head.

The Old Story.

[Pittsburgh (Pa.) Special.] While in New York City recently a wealthy resident of Greensburg, named Tranger, was "taken in" by a plausible young man who introduced himself as the son of an old friend.

Many tears were shed over one small child in Judge Allison's Philadelphia court on Saturday last. "I want my child—I want him—I want him because he is mine!" cried Mrs. Besse Feaster during a hearing on a proceeding to obtain possession of her four-year-old son, who had been taken away by her husband. The little one rested upon its father's knee and gazed wistfully up into the tear-wet eyes of its mother. Mrs. Feaster testified that she and her husband had separated five months ago, and had taken her child to the home of his maternal sister. Mrs. Feaster produced several neighbors who testified that in their judgment she was fit to have charge of the child. The Judge thought it best to give a child of so tender an age into the custody of its mother. The estranged couple stood side by side before the bar. The child was given into its mother's arms. The little one wound one plump arm around the neck of its mother, leaned over, and rested the other upon the shoulder of its downcast father. "I have a word to say to you," said the Judge. "When you meet do not keep up your enmity. Let the past be as if it never existed and treat each other kindly. It may be that, coming together often before your child, you will not be so keenly alive to each other's faults, and will more clearly see each the other's good qualities. Then, perhaps, in a little time you will be living together again peacefully, as I hope it may be your pleasure, and I am sure it is your duty to do." As they turned from the bar the tears were running down their cheeks. The husband kissed the child's upturned face. The little one clung to his coat, but he put it away gently, and as he shook its fat little hand he said: "Good-bye, good-bye, now." "Why good-bye?" asked the sobbing mother. "You may come to see the child any time, Henry—any time at all." The mother, with the little one in her arms, passed out with half a dozen of her friends. They were all weeping because they had lost the child. The disconsolate father and sister and their friends followed them. They were all weeping because they had lost the little one. The dozen or more other mothers waiting in the courtroom to tell their own tales of woe were weeping too, as if Feaster's pretty baby belonged to each of them.

INSPIRED BY JEALOUSY.

A Utica Lawyer Shot Dead by a Man Who Thought Himself Wronged. (Batavia (N. Y.) Special.) Johnson L. Lynch, a lawyer of Utica, was shot and killed by E. N. Rowell, of this place, at his house on Bank street this evening. Lynch arrived from Utica to-night and went to Rowell's house. Mr. Rowell has for some time suspected his wife, a beautiful woman, twenty-seven years old, of infidelity. They formerly lived in Utica, removing to this place two years ago. Mr. Rowell is a member of the firm of Palmer & Rowell, paper-box manufacturers. Lynch and Mrs. Rowell had tea together in the dining-room, the wife supposing her husband had left on a business trip yesterday morning. After the Lynch and the woman went to her apartment. Rowell, who had secreted himself in the house, approached through the hall and fired one shot which is imbedded in the wall over the bed. Lynch then made for the door and started down stairs. Rowell followed, firing three more shots, one of which entered the base of Lynch's brain. He dropped on the floor in the hall and expired immediately. Rowell overpowered himself, and was committed to jail on a charge of murder in the first degree. When asked whether he pleaded guilty he replied: "Not guilty."

Lynch was a large man, handsomely dressed, and wore considerable jewelry, including a fine gold watch and chain and diamond collar-button.

Rowell is a small man, somewhat given to melancholy. Mrs. Rowell is a blonde. Since their residence here they have moved in the best circles of society, though recently Mrs. Rowell's character has been questioned owing to scandal with which her name has been connected. She wrote a letter to Lynch telling him she expected Rowell would be away this week, and the letter was found in Lynch's pocket.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

An Eighteen-Year-Old Girl Dies in Terrible Agony. (Pottsville (Pa.) Special.) Harry Barry, an eighteen-year-old daughter of James Barry, a prominent citizen of Germantown, died from hydrophobia, after twenty-four hours of most intense suffering. Six months ago Miss Barry was bitten by a pet dog. The wound was apparently trifling in its character. No further attention was paid to it either by the young lady or her parents; in fact, the accident had been almost forgotten until Friday evening, when the young lady's strange actions attracted the attention of her father. She became desperately ill and was put to bed. She was speechless, and was subsequently seized with violent spasms, barking and snarling in a vicious manner at those around her bedside. At one time she grew calm, and made motions to her mother that she desired to put on paper what she was unable to express orally. Paper and pencil being furnished her, she scribbled the following: "The dog has done it all." She then fell back exhausted and was immediately seized with convulsions, when death relieved her sufferings.

BUSHMAN'S FATE.

A Ulrichsville Terror Shot by His Nephew—The Affray the Result of Drunken Threats. (Ulrichsville (O.) Special.) George Fuhr, a young man, this afternoon at one o'clock shot and instantly killed his uncle, Henry Bushman, of Bridgeport, O. The deceased was a desperate character, and the Fuhr family have been compelled to submit to a reign of terror every time he came to Ulrichsville. Bushman has frequently demanded money of his relatives here while drunk and disorderly, and some two months ago chased the family out of the house with a butcher-knife. To-day he came through the alley back of Fuhr's bakery and attempted to come in the stable, making threats of what he would do, at the same time brandishing a knife.

CHARITY NEWTON'S STRATEGEM.

How She Saved Her Rights When John Newton, Her Husband, Was Dying. (New Haven (Conn.) Cor. N. Y. Times.) The little hamlet of Ledyard, Center, in this State, has lost its most important factor in the death of John Newton. The township embraced many of his broad acres, but from them the hamlet itself derived little benefit, as John was a miser. The first money that he ever earned was for chopping wood in the pine swamp. The amount was thirty dollars, and he immediately put it in a bank, where it has remained to the present day, having increased to three thousand dollars. In shaving notes and loaning money John has accumulated a fortune of fifty thousand dollars. His residence among the rocky hills of Ledyard Centre was simply a hovel, which is on the verge of tumbling down. As careful a miser as John was, he was outwitted at last. Among the visitors at his father's house when he was a young man was a spinster named Charity Norman. She was a country tailor, and went from house to house to replenish the men's wardrobes for the winter. John's father was unlike his son, and loved jolly company and good clothes, and frequently Charity would be called upon to spruce up his old garments and make new ones according to the latest fashion. One day "Colonel Newton," as he was called, died very suddenly. Charity lent a helping hand to John Newton, the son, in his bereavement. She cooked the dinner, made the butter, and proved such a valuable housekeeper in every respect that John was loath to part with her. He finally persuaded her to become his wife. However, before the wedding-day had arrived John suddenly changed his mind, and tried to get rid of her. Charity had a big brother, and to this brother she appealed for advice. He became indignant, and in an interview with John threatened many unpleasant things, among them a breach-of-promise suit, if he did not carry out his former intentions. The damage done to his sister's heart he claimed was eight hundred dollars' worth. John considered the subject, and finally consented to save the eight hundred dollars by marrying her, which he did.

A few days ago, when John's life was drawing to a close, he sent for a Philadelphia relative to whom he intended to give his property. The relative came and began arranging matters with him. His wife Charity learned enough from their talk to convince her that certain worthless mortgages would be given her as her share, while the relative received the cash. She resolved to circumvent that little game, and, going up-stairs, she discovered John Newton's private savings-bank under the eaves in the garret. She found it contained $600 in gold coin, $800 in silver, and $27,000 in bonds and mortgages. She went quietly to a lawyer in Norwich for advice. Returning home, she continued her household duties and later visited the chest in the attic, taking with her a big dinner-pot, and, raising the lid of the chest, she transferred the contents to her kettle and then returned to the kitchen, placing the treasure under the sink.

In the morning John Newton became aware that he was dying, and, wishing to settle matters, requested that his wife go and get his chest of money. She refused, and in strong terms unbraided him for trying to take away her lawful portion. The lawyers present became wretched as did the relative, but to all their entreaties she turned a deaf ear. She would not go for the money. As a last resort, John asked her how much she would take to relinquish all claims to the property, and she promptly replied $10,000 in cash. The papers were drawn up and duly signed, whereupon Charity produced the kettle and poured out its contents before their as onished gaze. The $10,000 was counted out and paid her, and hardly had the will been signed before Joan Newton breathed his last.

YOUTHFUL OUTLAWRY IN VERMONT.

An Unique Story of Organized Crime—The Oaths Taken. (Jamaica (Vt.) Tele. ram.) The arrest and confession of two young men for counterfeiting has brought out an unique story of organized crime. Acting upon information obtained from Merton G. Clark, now in jail, United States officers found a wild gulch in the mountains, a few miles from this village, the headquarters of a criminal gang which has been coining spurious dollars. Complete counterfeiting outfits were seized. The gang is a secret society numbering twenty-three members. It was organized, according to its records, on June 17. Its members are young men, eighteen to twenty-one years old, living in South Londonderry, Jamaica, West Townsend and Wardsboro, Vt., and Asnuelot and Winchester, N. H. The band was governed by a captain, first and second officers, secretary, judge of fire-arms and a board of directors. They styled themselves the United Birds and Brothers. They had an elaborate system of signals and secret alphabets. The members who have confessed tell blood-curdling stories about the process of initiation. Each applicant was required to take the following oaths:

"Do you solemnly swear upon your honor, by all that is great and small, to keep forever secret all we are about to tell you, under the fear of being laid below the rays of the sun, moon and stars by the united hand of avengers, so help you God?"

"Second oath—Do you solemnly swear upon your honor to never tell the secrets we have entrusted to you, under the fear of being avenged by a party of which you know nothing at present, so help you God?"

"Third oath—Brother, knowing our secret purposes, do you solemnly swear never to betray any one of our party, but to always defend each and every one of us through thick and thin to the last, upon the fear of being shot dead in your tracks or stabbed through the heart with a nine inch blade, so help you God?"

When the last oath was administered, says young Clark, the applicant knelt, and a cocked revolver, loaded with ball cartridges, was held at his head.

The gang has coined considerable money. It is of fair workmanship. The gang has also stolen a few horses. The leaders have
