Teachers' Association.

The Iosco County Teachers' Association convened here last Saturday. Friday evening the teachers and citizens of the Tawas had the pleasure of hearing Hon. D. E. McClure give one of his characteristic talks. Mr McClure is not an orator but an educator and his soul stirring remarks left a deep impression on his audience. The first subject at the forenoon session was "Reading". Miss Vic Nesbitt of East Tawas, gave the paper, which met the approval of all. Mr. Campbell led the discussion and with others agreed that reading was a neglected subject. The next paper was "How to Secure the Co-operation of Parents" by Mrs. P. C. Goldie. This very important part of the program was listened to with the greatest of interest. The discussion was led by Rev. Howard Goldie and W. H. Hartley. Rev. A. Waterbury not being present. By a vote of the association the secretary was instructed to send a copy of the paper to the Tawas Herald for publication. "Language work in the grades" came next. This paper was by Miss Kathryn McDonald, of Oscoda. Miss McDonald's paper was to the point and not only pointed out the defects but submitted a remedy. Miss Florence Oaks of Whittemore gave a very neat discussion of the above paper.

The afternoon session was quite largely attended by those outside the profession. Many mothers and a good representation of high school pupils were in attendance.

The first paper after dinner was "Over Crowding the Course of Study" by Miss Maona Mason, of this city. This subject was well discussed by Miss Mason and many of the defects in our modern course of study were plainly stated. The paper was highly appreciated by the teachers. The discussion was led by W. H. Hartley, of East Tawas. "Physical Geography in the Schools" was presented by W. M. Gregory, of East Tawas. Mr. Gregory gave some very good ideas concerning the teaching of geography. The question box was not opened on account of the limited time in the afternoon.

After the election of officers for the coming year the teachers left for their respective homes all agreeing that both a pleasant and profitable time had been had.

HOW TO SECURE THE CO-OPERATION OF PARENTS

The subject assigned me by the program committee, was give, doubtless, from a desire on the part of teachers, to hear what could be said upon this subject from a parent's standpoint, and it will be the purpose of this paper to show as clearly as possible what the feelings of parents are regarding the subject.

One of the fundamental principles in the accomplishment of any object is unity of purpose, and that it should be a common one to the best method of securing the co-operation on the part of the one most vitally interested seems rather anomalous.

There should be, and doubtless is, in a large majority of cases, the most earnest desire on the part of parents, to further all the teachers plans and schemes for the advancement and improvement of the pupil.

The parent is supposed to be the silent partner, furnishing and equipping the child to be operated upon, if I may so state it, and not very frequently, on the part of the teachers, consulted, as to the methods of achieving the best results. They are supposed to submit to all the plans conceived by the teachers and board of education for the intelligent expansion of the young minds committed to their care, without a murmur of disapproval nor an idea advanced, either intelligent or otherwise, that a different method might achieve better results.

At times this may be given to teachers without the least hesitancy and at times it is not. Not always is the withholding of it due to all obstinate or combative temperament, but is in many cases simply a lack of information as to the object in view, and the best way of achieving that object.

It would be simply impossible to readjust the course of study to meet the demands of each and every patron of the school. One parent Phylology, for as was said by a mother of this kind "she did not want her Mary Ann larnin about her insides, for she didn't think it was nice." Another sees no necessity for the study of Grammar, for, as he sagely observes "grammar never did him no good and he don't see no use in it;" there are a number of people not a hundred miles from this school that see no earthly use in the study of History, Literature, the science, etc., and so it would be ad infinitum. If once the flood gates were opened the whole teaching staff, and the board of education would be always besieged with suggestions and complaints but very wisely the course of study is prescribed, and the pupils are expected to persevere it faithfully to the end, without the option of saying what they shall, or shall not study, but were I a teacher where such complaints such parents are known to exist I would see with them, giving the reasons why this or that study has been considered of sufficient importance to be placed upon the curriculum prescribed by law. If you can by a gentle persuasiveness, win the objector to see the beauty of a uniformity of study, you have made a friend, but if not you have the comfortable satisfaction of having done your duty.

Now as to the matter of punishment parents are as a rule wonderfully touchy upon this point, they are not in a position to know all the circumstances surrounding the case. They cannot understand how their child who carries home such a pitiful account of the way in which he always is selected as the scape-goat of the school, can annoy the teacher beyond the power of quiet endurance. He tell not of the whispering, the neglected lesson, the note writing, the paper-wad throwing, the shuffling of feet, the gum chewing, the open defiance of all law and order, but when patience ceases to be a virtue and punishment swift and severe falls upon the offending pupil, the parent is promptly informed of the humanness (?) of the teacher, and the account is embellished with all the exaggerations that physical pain and wounded vanity conjure up. Then the parent utters a protest, not always of a mild nature but sometimes full of bitterness and couched in language cruel and untrue. Not all parents do this, but it is a fact that the objection to corporal punishment is deeply rooted in the minds of a large majority of parents because they do not realize the aggravating circumstances that led to its infliction. Would it not be wise therefore, to make corporal punishment so infrequent, that the parents of the one punished, could be personally informed as to the reasons that necessitate it? We realize that in some cases even this might fail to produce unanimity, but it would tend to greatly lessen parent objections to this God-ordained method of punishment. We can search the world over, but we will never find a better guide for raising children than the Bible. There are some children so unfortunate that only fear of punishment, will produce good results, there are others that are simply humiliated and crushed beyond power to describe by the act, one has to exercise a wise discrimination in its application. It should never be administered while in a passion and always preceded by a quiet talk which places you in the position of justice fairly that of executing law, and not as an avenger who take pride in humiliation of an enemy.

There would be very little need of corporal punishment, if scholars could be induced to feel that the teachers were there to make manly men and womanly women of them. A teacher who acts the spy, or shows in manner, word or deed that they look upon any pupil as a sneak that needs constant watching, has forever lost his influence for good upon that child.

We know full well that there are times when a teacher is so pressed with duties that time cannot be taken to adjust these matters; but a pupil who persists in annoying teacher and scholars during study hours, must be removed from the room, until time can be given to talk to him or punish him as the case requires. It should be impossible for any one pupil to monopolize the whole attention of the school during study hours. The parent of such a child I am very sure, if possessed of good common sense, would gladly assist the teacher to make a better child of such a one, if he could only know just what was required of him.

Teachers claim to gage the interest in the school by the number of visits the parents make them. This is hardly fair I think. The one who does the best work in improving the manners and morals of the child, in drawing out and developing all its mental capacities and in guiding and stimulating its drawing ideas into active and thrifty growth and it would seem as a mere matter of business if for no other reason their very best efforts for the furtherance of this result would be given.

Therefore the parent with no financial obligations upon him and with multitudinous duties at home to perform, does not find the time to visit the schools that he or she would like to have, so that it does not necessarily indicate a lack of interest and co-operation on the part of parents when they so seldom are found in the school room.

By the way, how many times do the teachers visit the parents in the course of the year? It is the common rule of politeness that we return the visits made upon us and when this is not done, we naturally suppose that other visits are no longer desirable. How many of the parents' visits to the schools have the teachers returned? Remember politeness must be reciprocal and what we do not grant to another we should not expect for ourselves.

Nothing would please me better than a visit from the teachers of any of my children, either singly or in groups and I am sure that all parents would be equally pleased to talk with and consult the other partners in the business of guiding the precious souls committed to their care.

The very best way to secure the co-operation of parents therefore in my opinion is, to establish a feeling of love and respect, of trust and confidence in your work, in the parents mind and that you are more genuinely concerned about making the child a comfort and blessing than you are about collecting your salary; and I venture to say that both the parents and the children will live to bless the day that the Board of Education established you as an instructor and educator in this school or in any other.

As a parent we with you join in your profession. No work in life is more noble or capable of doing more good, than that of molding the plastic mind of the young, and stamping upon it reverence for God and love for all mankind.

W. P. W. Improvements.

A HERALD reporter spent a few hours in Alabaster last Tuesday, and found everything in a lively, prosperous condition and many new improvements being made. The company have just completed an elegant and commodious suit of new offices, on the first floor of the large store building for the accommodation of its general officers, the postoffice and telegraph office. The office force, which consists of S. L. Avery, secretary and treasurer of the company G. W. Fraser, confidential clerk, B. W. McCausland, head bookkeeper and cashier, and Sidney Parkham stenographer and assistant bookkeeper, are to be congratulated on their handsome location.

The change in the offices give much more room for a better arrangement of the general store and the proper display of their large line of merchandise. The store is under the management of F. B. Slingerland, with Duncan Boomer, as assistant.

ALABASTER NOTES.

Supt. T. G. McCausland, has moved his family to his farm, one-half mile west of town.

G. W. Fraser is the D. & M. station agent here and Sid Parkham assistant. The company's business will be well looked after.

Those Taxes.

The Gazette and Press have been telling their readers that there was a growing sentiment in favor of a compromise of the Loud tax cases. Although we had made many inquiries we were unable to locate this sentiment, and in order to ascertain where it was, we last week sent throughout the county several hundred cards and run a coupon in our columns requesting ALL to express their views. In addition to this we have personally interviewed a large number of the taxpayers. We are yet unable to locate this "growing sentiment." Thus far we have received nearly a hundred answers to the cards, and of the entire number, but one has expressed a desire to compromise. The proportion of those interviewed is about the same.

Below we attach another coupon with the request that further answers be sent before our next issue, when we will give a full account of all answers given.

ROBERT A. RICHARD,
 County Treasurer.

Secretary of State, Washington Gardner, in his twentieth annual report on farms and farm products of Michigan, turned out a very handsome pamphlet of about 126 pages. Wheat and sheep and wool tables, tables of agricultural statistics for five years, acres of improved and unimproved lands in farms, total number of farms and the average number of acres in each farm, all make interesting reading, and the whole would be a valuable document for the farmers to put away for reference.

A small church was sadly in need of general repairs, and a meeting was being held in it with a view to raising funds for that purpose. The minister having said $500 would be required, a wealthy, and equally stingy, member of the congregation arose and said he would give one dollar. Just as he sat down however, a lump of plaster fell from the ceiling and hit him on the head, whereupon he arose hastily and called out that he had made a mistake; he would give fifty dollars. This was too much for an enthusiastic present, who, forgetting of everything, called out fervently, "O, Lord, hit him again."

During the past week Lady Anna Coffin, D. G. L. C., of the L. O. T. M., has been working up the membership of that order in the Tawas, and as a result of her efforts a class of 18 was initiated Wednesday evening at East Tawas. Six of the class becoming members of Northern Light Hive of this city, and the remainder being divided between Baldwin and Easter Morn hives, of East Tawas. A most enjoyable time was had by the ladies, and at the close the Sir Knights were invited in, and ice cream and cake served. The ladies of the three hives presented Lady Coffin with a handsome silver berry spoon in recognition of her efforts on their behalf.

The following from last week's Gazette is of much interest to the general public. Doctor Thompson has received from Doctor Karl von Ruck, some glass slides on which are mounted the bacilli of tuberculosis, or consumption. They are only one twelve-thousandth of an inch long and one-fifth as broad as long. With the doctor's microscope the spores in each bacillus, only one sixty-thousandth of an inch in diameter, can be easily counted. As Doctor von Ruck is curing sixty-four out of every one hundred cases of tuberculosis, taken in the early stages, his work is being watched by the medical profession of the world with great interest.
