We show herewith one of the popular Queen Quality styles. A KIBO KID boot, "Spanish Opera" last, light sole, high arched instep. A glove fitting boot, most comfortable and beautiful.

James LaBarge.

NEVIL'S UNCLE JERRY.

I am the junior partner in a firm of lawyers. One morning one of my clerks, Nevil by name, came into my office with some letters for signature, and I was struck with his woeful appearance, and it was rather natural that I should ask what was the matter with him.

"A dreadful and shameful 'oax has been played on me, Mr. 'Opkinson, sir," he said. Nevil was always erratic with his h's when "put out."

"Sit down, my man, and tell me all about it," I said, for, much as I disliked the man, I could not help feeling sorry for him, so distressed did he seem.

"You know," he continued, "that we have always looked forward to Uncle Jerry leaving some of his wealth to us or the children when the end came."

"Well, Nevil," I interrupted, "has he died?"

"No, sir; worse than that. I am afraid I would not be so cut up about that, but he has played such a dirty trick on me and mine that I am as much disgusted as disappointed."

As I saw he was bursting to tell me his sorrows, I told him to proceed with the story of his wrongs.

"You must know that Uncle Jerry last Christmas, as was his usual custom, invited all his poor relations to dine with him. I don't mean all our children, as well as the 'grown ups'; no, he did not like children well enough for that, even if his house could have held them, which it could not. No; only the parents, and there were enough of them to crowd a good sized table.

"After a satisfactory but plain dinner we disposed ourselves in little groups, some at cards and others to chat. The night passed smoothly, excepting that two cousins got excited in a political argument. These evenings wound up with a dox an doria, or speech, from our host, and then, after singing 'Auld Lang Syne,' we would separate. The speech last Christmas was a memorable one, and I remember each word burned itself into my memory as it fell from Uncle Jerry's lips.

"My dear relatives," he commenced, "you will be sorry to learn, as I am to announce it, that this gathering, which it has been my pleasure as well as my duty to hold at this season of good will toward all men, is to be the last.

"Yes, the last, I grieve to repeat. You are all, I think, aware of the sudden collapse of the company which promised to be one of the greatest and most successful undertakings of modern times. I will be brief, as the subject is to me a painful one. In that company I was foolish enough to invest my money, not so much for myself as for the benefits I could bestow upon my kith and kin. That dream has ended—as dreams do—suddenly. My riches have taken to themselves wings. I remember with pleasure the many professions of affection from you all—yes, all—without a single exception."

The assembled relations gasped with astonishment at the first few sentences, but before Uncle Jerry concluded his speech—and he was in no hurry, I assure you—they had recovered themselves sufficiently to applaud in the right places and to utter the usual platitudes at the end.

"'Auld Lang Syne' was sung rather hurriedly, and we drew a long breath of relief when we were outside the house. A small indignation meeting was held around the corner, but, hot as we were in indignation, the weather was too cold for outside declamation, so it was broken up as a futile waste of energy, and we dispersed to our respective homes.

"As to myself," continued Nevil, "I was as mad as any of them, but as my wife and I were walking along our street I was suddenly struck with the notion that it might be a 'plant.' You see, sir, I am a great reader, and in novels and these short stories which one reads in the evening papers rich old uncles have a habit of springing these surprises on their poor relations at such festive gatherings in order to test the genuineness of their professed affection."

I remarked that I had read of such tests.

"Well, sir, I stopped and danced on the pavement until my wife caught hold of my arm and said: 'Sam, are you drunk or mad? You'll have a crowd round us in a minute.'

"'Mad, Sally! Not I! I see through the artful old hypocrite's dodge. It's the old, old joke.' And I explained matters to her.

"The upshot was that I farmed Uncle Jerry for all I was worth, and more, for I had to borrow money to cover increased expenditure. I first had him to stay with us at Brixton, and then took him as part of the family to Margate when we went for our holiday, paying all his expenses and keeping him supplied with tobacco, and he smokes no small amount.

"Well, this went on for some time, and, although the others knew what I was doing, not a soul stepped forward to help the old man. Not that I cared, for I quietly chuckled at having outwitted them.

"Under proper circumstances—that is, according to novelists and story writers—I should have been rewarded by a handsome check and ultimately been his sole heir when he died, but no such luck for me.

"Suddenly one morning about a month ago Uncle Jerry said he was going to town, where he intended to take cheap lodgings and look for some work. From that day to this I have never seen him, much as I have tried.

"Today the final blow has been dealt to me. I read in this morning's paper of the marriage of Jeremiah Joskins to Susan Hobbs. No cards. No cake. No presents. Susan Hobbs is a buxom wench about 25 or 30 and is certain to have a squad of children."

Poor Nevil! I could not help laughing at him, for all he looked such a picture of misery, but Uncle Jerry was indeed a wise man, for he cleared away his relations at one swoop. Later, however, he had the good taste to send a check for $500 for Nevil's out of pocket expenses and as a solatium for any moral or intellectual damage sustained.—London Leader.

A PIONEER.

Died, at the home of his son, John Anschuetz, in East Tawas, June 15, 1900, George Henry Anschuetz, aged 85 years; 4 months and 24 days.

The deceased was born in Cella-Gothow, Germany, January 21, 1815 and immigrated to America in 1853, settling at Saginaw. While on the ocean coming to America he lost his eyesight which was never restored, and for 48 years he was totally blind. He came to Tawas in 1865, and has since resided here. He was married to Elizabeth Barthelmees and was the father of nine children, six of whom survive him. He also leaves 46 grand children and 35 great grand children, besides a large circle of relatives to mourn his loss. The funeral services were held from the Ev. Zion Lutheran (brick) church of this city last Sunday afternoon and were conducted by Rev. J. Karrer, in the absence of Rev. C. L. Wuggazer, the regular pastor. The funeral was largely attended and the remains laid at rest in the Lutheran cemetery.

The republican state convention meets next Wednesday.

Some whiskers are slowly but surely giving place to Chinese pig-tail in the war cartoons.

The republican national convention at Philadelphia yesterday nominated President McKinley and Theo. Roosevelt by acclamation as their candidate for president and vice-president.

The name of Edward A. Crandall, of this city, is being talked of in connection with the republican nomination for register of Deeds this fall. The party could not give a more worthy young man a place on their ticket.

Of course Dewey has retired from the presidential race when Ohio declared for Bryan, it became evident that Mrs. Dewey could not control her own state and consequently had to withdraw her candidate.

The supreme court has granted the mandamus asked for by the state tax commission to compel the Grand Rapids assessors to deliver their assessment roll to the commission so as to enable the commission to add assessments omitted etc. This sustains the validity of the act creating the tax commission.

"Twenty dollars a month on a farm" says an exchange, "is very much better than $85 a month in a city store. As a general thing at the end of nine months the former has $150 in cash, three pairs of overalls and a straw hat, while the latter has two or three suits of clothes, a pair of golf socks and is $17 in the hole. Yet there are seventy-five applicants for the latter job to one for the former."

People who are interested in making public improvements should remember that now is a good time to think of fixing up the roads in the community. A few days spent in drawing gravel and working with a grader would make a great difference and some of our sandy thoroughfares would be much better to travel over. Poor, rough roads hurt the reputation of a community, and while ours are far from being bad, still they might be a little better. Time devoted to such work is well spent.

IN THE STORM.

My child, your hero may not be, In truth, a hero all the time; Remember, it must chance that he Shall still have rugged steps to climb. Don't place him on too high a plane In fancy; then he will not fall In your esteem and may attain To something noble after all.

My boy, don't think your sweetheart bears A halo on her golden hair; A crown of purity she wears, And you must help to keep it there. But she will have her trying moments And be not always kind and sweet; These are life's nerveing interludes— And pitfalls for unwary feet.

You both are far from perfect yet, And quarrels will, unhappily, come; Both may be wrong; so don't forget, In anger's blind delirium, That sweet concessions each must make And tender promises renew Or else a loving heart may break And sorrow come to dwell with you. —Pearson's Weekly.

TRICK OF A WOMAN SHARPER

She Found a Lace Handkerchief and Quickly Turned It Into Cash.

"I lost a $3 lace handkerchief today, but I learned one of the tricks of the light fingered people in Chicago," remarked a North Side woman as she came back from a shopping excursion. "Was it worth $3?" asked her husband.

"Hardly, but it's interesting. I bought a lace handkerchief, and as I walked to the car I stopped to buy a newspaper. I had my purse in my hand and a number of things, of course, and I laid the parcel containing the handkerchief and the check for it down on the corner of a fruit stand near by. After I got to the car I thought of my package. I hurried back, and the package wasn't there.

"Where is the little package I left here?" I asked the Italian vender.

"Zatta litt' papa?"

"Yes."

"Other lady took it."

"I wanted that handkerchief especially to give to a friend for a birthday present. I went to the store again and picked out another handkerchief.

"I am sorry the first one didn't suit you," the clerk said.

"Why, I lost it!" I replied in astonishment.

"You don't say so?" said the clerk.

"Why, about ten minutes ago a nice looking woman came in here with that handkerchief, and we took it back and refunded the money. She said that you were her niece and that you were out shopping together. You decided the handkerchief was not just what you wanted, and she came back to return it. We gave her a ticket for the $3, and she cashed it."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

QUEER EFFECTS OF WHIMS.

Men Who Could Dress Well on Money Wasted For Cigars.

"It's a curious thing how some people will sacrifice themselves to their whims," said a man who prides himself upon his study of human nature. "I don't mean wealthy people, for they can usually afford to do as they like. I am speaking now of people in moderate or less than moderate circumstances. I have in mind a young man whose tastes run to expensive neckwear. He wouldn't think of wearing a tie that costs less than $2, and he has stacks of them. Now, he can't afford this luxury, so he has to stint himself by wearing $3 shoes and $15 ready made suits. He doesn't realize the incongruity of his attire and is perfectly happy if his tie is all right.

"Another chap I know doesn't pay the slightest attention to his personal appearance and is usually rather frayed looking. That's because he spends his money on expensive cigarettes. He smokes only the highest priced imported Egyptian brand, and they cost him 4 cents apiece. He is a fiend and smokes probably 40 a day. You could not hire him to smoke a domestic cigarette which costs half a cent, yet if he did he could afford to dress himself as he should. I could cite numerous instances of this tendency to one extravagance which have come under my personal observation. I can only explain it as a lack of mental balance."—Philadelphia Record.

Washington Church Kodak Fiends.

"The story that a Washington woman sent notices to the ministers of the capital of the opening of her summer home with the request that they be read from the pulpit may be a libel, although I have been told that it is a fact," said a man who has been in Washington for several months, "but I'll tell you what I have seen there—men and women carrying kodaks into their pews on Sunday. No; not to take a snap shot of the minister, but the Washington kodak fiend stops on his way to church to make shots, and after the service he lingers on his way home to do likewise. There is no other place in the country where the kodak fiend is so insatiable as he is in the capital."—New York Sun.

Peculiar Problem.

Subtract 45 from 45 and have 45 left. It can be done, strange to say. Here is the method: Put down the numerals 1 to 9 in a row in reverse order; underneath place the same numerals in regular order. The sum of the figures in each row is 45; subtract the lower row from the upper:

9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1=45

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9=45

8 6 4 1 0 7 5 3 2=45

The sum of the third row of figures is also 45. Thus you have taken 45 from 45 and have 45 as a remainder.

Crop Report.

U. S. Department of Agriculture Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau, Michigan Section for the week ending June 19, 1900, says:

The mean daily temperature for the week ending June 16, was 60.6 degrees, or 5.1 degrees below the normal; the average total precipitation was 0.39 of an inch, or 0.36 of an inch below the normal; the sunshine averaged 66 per cent of the possible amount.

The cool weather of the past week has retarded the growth of corn, and in the upper peninsula frosts have injured garden truck slightly. Rain is needed in the upper peninsula and northern counties; in the central and southern counties showery weather has slightly delayed cultivation and other farm work, but generally the week has been a favorable one. Corn although it has made slow growth; has a good stand and for the most part has been cultivated. Rye, barley, peas and oats have made fine progress and are in good condition. Oats are heading and promise a heavy crop, although the continued wet weather in the southern counties has caused some rusting. Hay now promises to be a fairly good crop; in the northern portion of the state, meadows are rather light; old meadows are generally light in all portions of the state, but new meadows in the central and southern counties are generally heavy. Clover haying in the southern counties has begun and haying promises to become quite general during the week. Wheat continues in very poor condition; the spring work of the Hessian fly is now manifesting itself in breaking down the stalk and wheat is being still further abandoned by turning the fields into pastures. Early potatoes have made good progress and generally cultivated. Late potato planting is well advanced and nearing completion. A large acreage of beans is being planted; early planted beans are germinating rather poorly on account of the cool weather. Buckwheat seeding has begun in the northern and central counties. Sugar beet seeding is generally finished; the seeding has made a good stand and its thinning and cultivation have progressed favorably—correspondents unite in saying that the crop is in fine condition.

Fruit conditions remain about the same as last week. Apples are dropping more but the prospect still remains good. Strawberries are ripe in all portion of the state and the crop is abundant.

 Last Friday was the 81st birthday of Grandma Brabant, and about 40 of her relatives and friends gave her a most enjoyable surprise at the home of her son, Nelson, on that evening. Four generations of the family were present. She was the recipient of several valuable and useful presents. Refreshments were served and a most happy evening was had by all.

So what is struggling humanity to do?
 It is reported that there is talk of getting up a picnic in opposition to the one given by the farmers institute society Sept. 3, because the report has been circulated that dancing, and other amusements would be prohibited at the institute picnic. POTATO TROUBLES.

Beetles, Fly Bury and Their Remedies—Benefits of Irrigation.

Colorado potato beetles are especially active before the plants come into blossom. They are destroyed by arsenical poisons (Paris green, etc.). The insects are so numerous and omnipresent that some damage is practically unavoidable, but since their attacks largely precede the critical period in the development of the potato, the plant recovers rapidly and the damage to the crop is small, providing timely use is POTATO LEAF EATEN BY FLEA BEETLES. Made of the arsenites. Halsted has found that the bordeaux mixture alone may more effectively protect plants against this beetle than does the poisoning with Paris green. This is of course attributable to its action as a deterrent. The bordeaux Paris green mixture is more effective than is Paris green alone.

Flea beetles frequently cause more harm to the potato than do the potato beetles. This is largely because their attacks are most severe at or soon after the critical period in the development of the potato. When badly eaten at this time, especially if the weather is dry, the plant never recovers. Arsenical poisons alone do not afford adequate protection. The combination of arsenites with bordeaux mixture does more to keep off these pests. Experience has also shown that bordeaux mixture alone is sufficient protection in practice.

It is necessary to make several applications of arsenical poisons to the potato plant during June and July in order to give protection against the potato beetle. The commercial preparations used, Paris green, London purple, etc., are largely insoluble. A small per cent of soluble arsenious acid is always present, however. This poison rarely penetrates the uninjured epidermis to do harm, but serious damage often results when it comes in contact with mutilated tissues, such as insect injuries, rents in the leaf, etc. The tissue die and blacken for some distance about such spots.

The full benefits from arsenical poisons can be obtained with lighter applications of arsenites than usually are made and such will cause little or no injury (e. g., 1 pound in 100 to 200 gallons water). The slight remaining danger is eliminated when lime is added to the arsenite or when, as is preferable, the arsenite is applied in bordeaux mixture. In such cases the soluble arsenious acid is made insoluble by the lime and so rendered harmless.

"Tip burn" is characterized by the death of the potato leaves at their tips and margins, which portions dry, blacken and roll up or break off. This trouble occurs during the dry hot weather of midsummer. Tip burn is not caused by parasitic fungi. It is attributed to unfavorable weather conditions surrounding the plant, with insufficient water supply. As prevention, efforts should be made to sustain the general vigor of the plants. The only thing that can be done in addition is to irrigate in times of extreme drought. Irrigation of potatoes is rarely practiced in the eastern United

TIP BURN OF THE POTATO LEAF. States outside of small gardens. We have seen marked benefits from watering such garden plots. In the western states, notably in Colorado, immense crops of potatoes are raised upon irrigated land.

Devices That Save Trouble—A Self Hiver and a Swarm Catcher.

In an apiary of 60 colonies or more, it frequently happens that several swarms issue simultaneously and, of course, always cluster together in one huge mass. If the queens are at large with the bees, the cluster will necessarily be hived as one swarm, and the queens will kill each other until only one survives. To prevent this loss, a week or so before swarming time I slip a queen trap on the live entrance of each populous colony.

Just a word about attaching the queen trap. The directions which accompany the trap are to fasten it to the hive with two nails. Now it is not the best thing for the beekeeper or his neighbors to hammer on a beehive that is boiling over with bees, so I invented the contrivance herewith shown (Fig. 1), which consists of two small pieces of flat iron, bent at right angles and fastened to the trap with two screws. To affix the trap to the hive, slip the fasteners under the alighting board. No matter how many bees are clustered all over the trap it can be removed in an instant without even a jar. When a swarm issues, the queen remains in the trap, confined in an apartment by herself. I then remove the old hive and place an empty one in its stead, also removing the queen trap with the queen and then sit in the shade and watch results. Invariably the swarm will return in 10 to 20 minutes and enter the empty hive, for the bees mark the location and come back to their old stand after they have missed their queen. I then release the queen and let her run in with the swarm.

I have had three queenless swarms hanging in one cluster, but when they broke cluster they returned to their respective hives. I have also had them return and cluster all on one hive. Of course such a mass of bees could not all enter, so I would take a dustpan and brush and divide them. I could not get the right bees and queens together, but that seemed to make little difference.

I have tested quite a few swarm catchers, but have found none to give such thorough satisfaction as this simple device (Fig. 2), which any beekeeper can make. Find a suitable crocheted stick and remove the bark, make a ring about 20 inches in diameter out of stout wire (telegraph wire is about right), next take a piece of burlap and sew into bag shape, then sew the wire ring into the mouth of the bag and fasten it into the crocheted stick so it will swivel, and the device is ready for use. It is well to have on hand one or two poles of different lengths and two short straps with which to unite them.

To hive a swarm whose queen is at large with the bees bring the swarm catcher right up under the cluster and give it a sharp jerk upward, and the cluster will drop from the limb right into the mouth of the catcher. Carry to the hive and invert the bag, or, rather, turn it inside out, and the bees will drop in front of the hive and run into it, and the hiving is done, says a writer who describes the foregoing devices in The Farm Journal.

Replanting Corn. My experience and observation have led me to believe that replanting, as usually practiced, does not pay. The question has reference more directly to the farmer who may be seen up to July going over his fields and filling up the empty hills. Replanting makes the time of ripening irregular. Many farmers delay their corn cutting on account of a lot of late stalks and thereby have their whole crop damaged by early frost. Make every effort to get a good stand in the start and let it go at that, concludes an Orange Judd Farmer correspondent.

News and Notes. Europe not only produces more than one-half of the world's wheat crop, but consumes almost the entire world's surplus. North America, on the other hand, raises between one-fourth and one-fifth of the world's crop and is the world's great surplus exporter. Between these two great wheat producing regions is transacted the bulk of the intercontinental wheat trade of the world.

The horticulturist of the Utah station tells of a digger wasp which destroys the apple worm and says it is beyond doubt that this insect keeps the orchard in which he has found it free from apple worms.

Pennsylvania and New York, with 42.1 per cent of the total winter rye acreage of the country, report conditions 11 points and 4 points respectively below their ten year averages. Kansas, which ranks third in the scale of acreage, reports the high average condition of 107, the highest average report on May 1 of which there is any record.

The reduction in acreage in the principal wheat states, owing to winter killing and the ravages of theessian fly, is reported as follows: Indiana, 1,608,000; Ohio, 909,000; Michigan, 317,000; Pennsylvania, 158,000, and Illinois, 137,000 acres.

IN THE APIARY.

It Can Be Made Valuable as a Dairy Animal.

The usefulness of the goat in clearing foul lands and the profitability of the animal for its hair, skin and even carcass are becoming pretty well understood. But the goat is valuable as a dairy animal. If the cows, for instance, are being used for supplying a city milk trade, the keeping of goats for the home milk supply would be an excellent policy. The goat will live where a cow would starve, and, while it, like every domestic animal, will do best on good pasture, it will live and yield milk on astonishingly little food.

The animal and its milk are almost entirely exempt from disease. The milk is more nutritious than that of the cow and agrees with stomachs that cow's milk frequently offends. The animal requires only the cheapest kind of shelter, but it needs shelter from storms and in winter. If by reason of drought soiling is necessary, leaves, vegetable refuse, peelings of the apple or potato, bread crusts or stale bread, if they are sweet and clean, will be all the feed that is needed.

All goats, however, will not eat the same food, and the feeder will have to study the appetites of the individual animal. Frequent feeding and a variety of food in winter will be found beneficial. Roots, oilmeal, oats, corn (of the latter in the whole state the goat is very fond), are proper feed, especially for the milking goat. Rock salt is greatly relished. The flavor of goat's milk cannot be distinguished from that of cow's milk if it is properly cared for. From three to four pints a day is the average yield of a good milker. The milk is so rich and of such a character that in making pastry it will take the place of eggs.—Epitomist.

SIVA AND DEVI.

The Fearful Devil of the Hindoos and His Principal Wife.

Siva is both typical of destruction and of reproduction. But the latter attribute was doubtless a later addition to the sum of his qualities. The original conception of this deity was that of a power delighting in destruction, in the achievement of physical evil and wrong and in hurling death and devastation upon the people and their land. He is represented in the sacred books of the Hindoos as "the terrible destroyer," "the one who delights in the destruction of men." But in all this there is no whisper as yet of any moral qualities of evil. The conception is entirely one of physical power, used with the utmost malevolence and injustice against men.

Along with his principal wife, who is variously called Devi, Durga, Uma and Kali, he is portrayed as the incarnation of physical evil, wrong, injustice or misfortune. In the "Puranas" Siva is described as wandering about surrounded by ghosts and goblins, inebriated, naked and with disheveled hair, covered with the ashes of a funeral pile, ornamented with human skulls and bones, sometimes laughing and sometimes crying. Devi, his consort, is represented with a hideous and a terrible countenance streaming with blood, encircled with snakes, hung round with skulls and human heads and in all respects resembling a fury rather than a goddess. The only pleasure which Siva and Devi feel is when their alkars are drenched with blood, which, of course, could not be shed without the destruction of some form of life.—Westminster Review.

Pilkerton Won the Race.

At one of the regattas of the National Association of American Oarsmen during the early nineties James Pilkerton, for many years the champion sculler of America, was matched to row double against another team. He and his mate were the champions, and the general belief was that they would win without effort. But the night before the regatta public opinion suddenly and mysteriously changed. Mr. Pilkerton knew that this was not caused by any new development of strength in his opponent or any loss of skill on his own part. After making some quiet inquiries he discovered that there was talk of his rowing mate having been bought up by the other side and of an arrangement to throw the race.

He didn't say anything about his suspicions, but when the two men were seated in the shell and were well out into the deep water he leaned over to his mate and said:

"Look her, you blooming cutthroat! You've got to swim, drown or win this race! You know me!" He won.—Saturday Evening Post.

Watch Springs.

The watch carried by the average man is composed of 98 pieces, and its manufacture embraces more than 2,000 distinct and separate operations.

Hairspring wire weighs one-twelfth of a grain to the inch. One mile of wire weighs less than half a pound. The balance gives five vibrations every second, 300 every minute, 18,000 every hour, 432,000 every day and 157,680,000 every year.

The value of springs when finished and placed in watches is enormous in proportion to the material from which they are made. A ton of steel made up into hairsprings when in watches is worth more than 12½ times the value of the same weight in pure gold.
