Aid to Libraries

Lansing, Mich., July 21.—The state library commission, desiring to come into the closest contact with the libraries of the state, the board has formulated the following plan, which they submit to the cities, and villages where libraries already exist, or in which the establishment of free public libraries is contemplated.

Free public libraries, township and public school libraries in the state, may become registered with the state board of library commissions by complying with the following rules.

1. All registered libraries must be free to the public.

2. The libraries must be placed in a room suitably provided with book shelves and tables, and must be open to the public at least two days in the week.

3. A township library applying for registration must agree to use the fines as provided by article 13, section 12, constitution of Michigan, exclusively for the purpose of books for said library.

4. A yearly report must be made to the board of library commissioners by the officers of the registered libraries, blanks for such report to be furnished by the board.

When the above rules have been accepted by a library a certificate of registration will be issued by the state board and the library will receive the following advantages:

1. Registered libraries will be entitled to receive from the state commissioners, advice and aid regarding the purchase, classification and cataloguing of books, and information on all subjects relating to the care and management of libraries. Instruction in library work will also be given to registered libraries in the state library.

2. Catalogues of the state library will be placed in all registered libraries and a book or books may be borrowed for a limited time by the patrons of the registered library. These loans will be made on request of the local librarian, and transportation expenses must be paid by the borrower.

3. Registered libraries can procure copies of state documents upon request made to the secretary of the state commission.

4. Free public libraries incorporated under the state law and organized after the establishment of the state commission, may, upon notification to the state commission, that they have established a library of 100 volumes other than state or government documents, and upon furnishing a list of said books to the commission, receive from the state a loan of 100 volumes to be selected from lists to be furnished by the commission. These books are to be returned within six months unless an extension of time is granted by the commission.

The commission authorized the preparation of a circular to be circulated among the cities and villages of the state relative to the proper method of starting free public libraries and the secretary, Mrs. Spencer was instructed to prepare and publish for distribution a catalogue of books suitable for small libraries.

The Fair.

September 26, 27 and 28 are the dates chosen for the 26th annual fair of the Iosco County Agricultural Society, and every effort is being made to make it the most successful in the history of the society. Many new features are being arranged for and the earnest co-operation of every resident in the county is solicited.

One of the special features of this year's fair which will be of more than ordinary interest will be the political days. The state central committees of both republican and democratic parties have been invited to furnish the best talent obtainable to make addresses, and the invitations have been accepted. The names of the speakers will be announced as soon as the assignments are made.

The race program is divided between all three days of the fair. The polo race and the three minute race occurring on the afternoon of the first day. It is hoped that our farmers will all bring the best articles on their farms for exhibition, be it a pumpkin, a colt, the baby or his wife.

The Prayer of His Life.

An old man in Georgia, Jack Baldwin, having lost his hat in an old dry well one day, hitched a rope to a stump and let himself down. A wicked wag named Neal came along just then, and quietly detaching a bell from Baldwin's old blind horse, approached the well, bell in hand and began to ting-a-ling.

Jack thought the old horse was coming and said: "Hang the old blind horse; he's coming this way sure, and he ain't got no more sense than to fall in on me—whoa, Ball!"

The sound came closer. "Great Jerusalem! The old blind fool will be right on top of me in a minute—whoa, Ball—whoa, Ball!"

Neal kicked a little dirt on Jack's head and Jack began to pray:

"O Lord, have mercy on—whoa, Ball—a poor sinner; I'm gone now—whoa, Ball—Our Father, who art in—whoa, Ball!—hallowed be thy—gee, Ball, gee! What'll I do?—name. Now I lay me down to sl—gee, Ball! (Just then in fell more dirt.) O Lord! If you ever intended to do anything for me—back, Ball whoa!—Thy kingdom come—gee, Ball! O Lord, you know I was baptized in Smith's milldam—whoa, Ball? ho! up! murder whoa!"

Neal could hold in no longer and shouted a laugh which might have been heard two miles, which was about as far as Jack chased him when he got out.—Atlanta Journal.

A School Idyl.

Ram it in, cram it in;
Children's heads are hollow.
Slam it in, jam it in;
Still there's more to follow—
Hygiene and history,
Astronomic mystery,
Algebra, histology,
Latin, etymology,
Botany, geometry,
Greek and trigonometry.
Ram it in, cram it in;
Children's heads are hollow.
Rap it in, tap it in;
What are teachers paid for?
Bang it in, Slam it in;
What are children made for?
Ancient archaeology,
Aryan philology,
Prosody, zoology,
Physics, clinicology,
Calculus and mathematics,
Rhetoric and hydrostatics.
Hoax it in, coax it in;
Children's heads are hollow.
Scold it in, mould it in;
All that they can swallow.
Fold it in, mould it in;
Still there's more to follow.
Faces pinched, and sad and pale,
Tell the same undying tale—
Tell of moments r bbed from sleep,
Meals untasted, studies deep,
Those who've passed the furnace through,
With aching brow, will tell it you
How the teacher crammed it in.

My Pale Lady.

When I was at the orphan asylum—and all of my earliest recollections are of that place—I used occasionally to see among the visitors who thronged the hospital on guest days a tall, beautiful woman with a pale face and dark, unresponsive eyes. The lady seldom spoke to me, and when she did it was in a cold voice, but from the time she entered the room her eyes were fixed upon me.

A short time after this I was adopted by a widow, whose two sons had married and gone to far distant parts of the world. I had been two weeks with my adopted mother when I heard the voice of the tall, pale lady in the parlor. I knew it at once.

"We have been neighbors for a long time, Mrs. Thornycroft," I heard her saying. "I have come to make amends for my unneighborliness."

There did not seem to be anything in common between these two, and the conversation often dropped, yet the visitor staid on and on. I got weary sitting on the stairs—I was waiting to go for a walk with my adopted mother—and so I walked boldly down stairs and into the parlor. The moment my eyes met those of the tall, pale lady I knew she was going to pretend that she had never seen me before. So I looked at her as strangely as she did at me.

"Your daughter, Mrs. Thornycroft?" asked the lady.

"My daughter," said my adopted mother and said no more.

"What is your name, dear child?" the lady questioned me. Her tone had never before been so tender in speaking to me. I suppose she pitied me because she thought my name had been changed.

"It is the same as it always was," said I. "It is Madelaine."

I saw the lady turn pink at this.

"What a strange answer!" she said. "But it is a beautiful name. Naturally your name is the same as it always was."

"Naturally," said my adopted mother. "You may run out and play, Madelaine."

I played about the doorstep till the tall lady came out, and then I said, going up and taking hold of her hand:

"If you do not live far away, I will go with you and see what your house is like."

"Thank you," said she smilingly and led me on.

We turned a corner and stopped before a tall, dark stone house, with curtains like frostwork at the windows.

"Will you come in?" she asked.

"Not today. My mother will be waiting for me. But I will come tomorrow, if you like, and bring my doll. I can come after my lessons."

But that evening when my adopted mother held me on her lap she said to me:

"Madelaine, you are never to go to see the lady who called here today, even though she asks you."

But we met sometimes. Once in a terrible storm of wind and rain, when I was running home, she called me into her carriage.

"You are all dripping," she cried, hanging over me. "Oh, me! Oh, me! You will catch cold! Give me your hands and let me warm them." And she chafed my hands and even held them to her cheek.

She was at my coming out party, years after, and sent me a great armful of lilies, and after that I met her quite often at different places—teas or dinners or the opera. Sometimes, when we met in the dressing room, she would give a little touch to my hair or tie my ribbons afresh or say whether or not she thought a certain color becoming to me.

On a certain day every year I received a gift from an unknown donor, and I concluded after much thought that this day was the anniversary of my birth. Of the giver of the gifts I had no doubt. My adopted mother had not the heart to forbid me to keep and use the things I received in this manner, though I could see she was not well pleased that I should be the recipient of them.

I was quite 20 years old when one day as I walked in the park a woman came up to me, begging that I would come with her quickly. She said that her mistress desired above all things to see me. I knew the woman to be the maid of that lifelong, mysterious friend whose influence had always surrounded me, though we had never lived under the same roof nor enjoyed intercourse together.

"I am forbidden to go to her house," I said, remembering the old forbiddance.

"But she is dying."

A swift fear winged my feet. I ran as fast as I could to the dark house with the frostlike curtains. Up the stairs I sped, past the servant who opened the door for me, on to the front chamber. The nurse made way for me. There were two men in the room, but I brushed past them.

She raised herself from her pillows with a tremendous effort.

"Madam, madam," called the physician, "if you are so reckless you will end your life at once."

She caught me in her arms, and we wept together.

"I thought I was never going to be kissed by you," I sobbed. "Why did you wait so long?"

"Do you love me, little Madelaine?" she whispered.

I kissed her on the eyes and on the hair.

"Dearest, dearest!" I answered.

She relaxed in my arms.

"My dear young lady," said the physician gently, "she is dead."

I laid her on her pillow and then stood and looked at her.

CONVENTION DATES.

August 9 - Tenth district democratic congressional convention at Bay City.

AMERICANS are concerned in Mr. Astor's snubbing chiefly because they fear that it will cause him to come to this country again.

If the Chinese make all this trouble over the advent of a few railway trains, what would they not do if someone introduced automobiles into their country.

It is considerable of a question which will bring the powers to a closer understanding—the peace conference in Europe or the war conference in China.

No one will object to Hanna and Jones carrying all the doubtful states they can, but everybody will seriously object if they take too large a load and drop them where they will obstruct the road.

We hear much from the mouth-pieces of syndicates, trusts and aristocracy, about "arraying the classes against each other." Come to look the problem square in the face, it stands just this way—these pompous, imperialistic lords and bosses have deliberately arrayed themselves against the masses, but they roar like lions, or whine like spaniels, when it comes to the arraying of the masses against them. Well, we shall see. Meantime the masses have nothing to fear, except their own toadying to these lords, and divisions among themselves.—Word and Works.

THE suggestion that the republican central committee be permitted to manage the campaign in Michigan without the assistance of the immortal nineteen is good enough to be adopted straightaway. The immortal nineteen are not republicans in good standing, nor is it possible for them to remove the shameful stigmata which they permitted the agents of special corporations and special interests to put upon them during the last session of the legislature. The sooner the immortal nineteen are kicked out of the band wagon the better will it be for the republican ticket nominated at Grand Rapids last month. The republican party has a strong back, but the immortal nineteen are too heavy a load to be carried over dusty roads in a hot campaign.—Bay City Tribune.

For Sheriff.

The approaching campaign is suggestive of the consideration by our readers of the next republican county convention. As the convention approaches it brings with it the names of the aspirants for the nomination for sheriff. Tawas City and a very large portion of this end of the county have turned their choice to Mr. Colhe Johnson, of this city.

Sixteen years ago the north end of the county, after nominating, asked us to support John W. Lanktree. We did so loyally. Twelve years ago they asked us to support Thomas Bradley. We did so with good will. Eight years ago, East Tawas asked us to support Thomas Cox. We did it with open hand and heart. Four years ago the north end asked us to make room for another man, Peter E. Shien, and again Tawas City, with this end of the county said "yes!" All of the above men made excellent officers, but it would seem that the wind should blow in the direction of Tawas City once in sixteen years.

This year the republicans of Tawas City present as a candidate for the nomination of sheriff, the name of Mr. Johnson, who by his life spent our turn, and second, because we present a candidate who is in every way as competent as any of the past incumbents of the office.

Mr. Johnson's record as a man, as a citizen, and as a straight republican challenges examination and criticism. If his party can claim anyone, they can certainly claim him. A republican from childhood, always supporting the ticket. He has never sought an office except that of deputy sheriff which he has filled continuously under sheriff Shien for the past four years, with such ability and promptness, that his record as deputy has foreshadowed his ability as our coming sheriff.

It would seem that the republican party of Iosco county would be obliged, first, to recognize the claim of Tawas City to the honor of naming the next nominee for sheriff. Second that it must recognize Mr. Johnson's claim. His loyalty to his party has never been questioned; he is ever being found ready to turn out in its campaigns in this county and unflinchingly support his party to a finish.

Social Democrats.

The social democratic party of Michigan held convention at Saginaw Tuesday. There were 32 delegates, most of them from Detroit, Saginaw and Battle Creek. The following state ticket was nominated; Governor, Henry Ramsey of Battle Creek; lieutenant-governor, Clayton J. Lamb of Dryden, Lapeer county; secretary of state, Joseph Dyck of Detroit; treasurer, Albert Eynon of Saginaw; auditor-general, David C. Hendricks of Saginaw; commissioner of the state land office, John D. Hunt of Jonesville, Hillsdale county; attorney-general, George A. Eastman of Detroit; superintendent of public instruction, Miss Rose McBreaty of Detroit; member of the state board of education, Joseph Carr of Saginaw.

Crop Report.

U. S. Department of Agriculture Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau, Michigan Section for the week ending July 21, 1900. says:

The mean daily temperature for the week ended July 21st, 68.7 degrees, was 0.6 of a degree below the normal; the average total precipitation, 1.81 inches, was 1.34 inches above the normal; the sunshine averaged 48 per cent of the possible amount.

The frequent and heavy showers have interfered with all field work and damaged considerable hay; there is also some complaint that wheat is sprouting in the shock. Not only has the work been delayed during the rains, but much ground has been left too soft for the binder and reaper. In the upper peninsula and northern counties of lower Michigan haying has been greatly delayed and much of the cut damaged. While cultivation and other field work has been greatly retarded, vegetation of all kinds has been greatly benefited by the wet weather. There is some complaint that the heavy rains have damaged corn and potatoes on low lands, but generally corn, potatoes, beans, sugar beats and garden truck have made fine progress and are in good condition. Corn is rather short but looks strong and healthy; it is generally tasseling and in the southern part of the state is setting for ears. Oat harvest is just beginning and the present condition of that crop indicates a large yield. Some barley has been cut.

In the southern counties plowing for fall seeding has begun.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty of Lexington, Ky., when they saw him turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was Yellow Jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves it matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50, Sold by Dr. G. S. Darling and J. E. Dillon druggists.

A Nuisance.

For several weeks past this city has been infested by a gang of fake cripples and professional beggars, and it is time that the officers took some action relative to this class of tramps. From reports from other places along the shore it appears that there are many of this class in this vicinity and several burglaries at other points have been traced to them. In this city several instances have occurred where they have insulted women who have refused to give them money or vituals. Let some action be taken at once. It is safe to say that not one in one hundred of those asking aid are worthy of it, and if our citizens will refuse help in every case, and our officers arrest or drive out of town everyone of this class it will not be long before the "fraternity" give our city the "go-by."

FARM GARDEN

HORSE COMFORTS:

Stable Devices For Hot Weather, Easily and Cheaply Made.

The poor horse, the work horse of the farm, usually receives little besides food, water and an occasional brushing off of the coarse dirt which covers his coat. Yet all horse owners will agree that the sturdy, faithful beast of burden of the farm of all animals on the place deserves good care. The practice of watering horses engaged in heavy farm work between meals adds greatly to the comfort of the animals and makes them more willing in the performance of their tasks. Not any great quantity is necessary or desired, but a few mouthfuls to relieve the mouth and throat from dust, just as you want a swallow or two from the spring between meals. Then there is the excellent practice, not so common as it should be, of using a sponge and water freely, especially on the parts of the horse covered by the harness, at the close of the day's work. One can scarcely imagine the comfort the cleansing of these parts gives to the horse, as well as the washing out of mouth and nostrils and the sponging of his neck and head.

The chief discomforts of the horse, however, are found in the dark and poorly ventilated stables and especially on hot summer nights. The illustration shows how stables with door and windows can be arranged to provide good light and ventilation without admitting flies or mosquitoes and all at a small expense. As a rule stables are too dark.

The illustration of the barn door, Fig. 1, shows that the door is made in two parts, a plan of construction quite popular in some sections. The screen frame is made of inch stuff and is about three inches wide, braced at the corners. Upright pieces of the same material are screwed on as shown in the illustration. The distance apart these upright pieces should be placed depends upon circumstances—whether there is danger from thieves or if the horse should get loose in the stable, breaking the netting with its head. In such cases the upright strips should be placed closer together, otherwise four over the space will be ample. The wire cloth or netting is used, which can be bought at hardware stores at 2 cents a square foot, and varies in width from 18 inches up. The screen is made to swing inside and is bolted when closed. The upper half of the door proper swings out in most cases and can be fastened to the side of the barn with hook and staple. In the event of a strong wind or rain storm this door can be closed and bolted from the inside without removing the screen.

Fig. 2 shows how the same plan of screening the windows may be carried out. Most barn windows are made to slide, so that in this case the screen is also made to slide, but in the opposite direction from the window. It is thus very easy to slide either the screen or the glass sash whichever way may be needed over the opening. It will be noticed that the artist has covered the window of glass with wire netting such as is used in poultry yard building. This is a good idea, especially if the window is in front of the horse where he can readily reach it, for oftentimes he will thrust his head against the glass with sufficient force to break it and usually cuts his face more or less.

Add to the small expense for material the little time and labor necessary to construct the screens, and you have a comfortable stable during the summer for which the animals would render you grateful thanks if they could but speak, concludes the author of the foregoing suggestions, originally made in Farm and Fireside.

Turnips Sown in Growing Crops.

If flat turnips are sown among the growing crops of corn or other crops at the last hoeing in July or August, they will get a foothold so as to grow

Red Clover and Alfalfa—Gleaning the Grainfields.

Common red clover is one of the most desirable forage plants for hogs and the one most commonly used in sections where it has been tried. Throughout western Oregon, Washington and parts of Idaho red clover will grow to great perfection. Even in the irrigated sections of these states farmers are learning that red clover is a valuable crop. It is often mixed with alfalfa, giving good results. It will start quicker than alfalfa and helps to furnish a variety which is always desirable. Red clover will not furnish as much succulent food as alfalfa, for it will not make so many growths or remain green so long.

In some parts of the grain regions of eastern Washington and northern Idaho clover is claiming considerable attention. In the celebrated Palouse region, which is noted for its grain product, red clover is gradually gaining a foothold. In the vicinity of Moscow, Ida., clover yielded last season from 13 to 18 tons of green forage per acre at a single cutting. These figures were obtained by careful weights and measurements in the field. A crop of clover like this would furnish one of the most valuable sources of food for pigs, both as to cheapness and excellence of material. In this way pigs can be pastured until the grainfields are ready for grazing.

Where clover or alfalfa pasture is available the following plan may be recommended: Have the pigs farrowed about March 1. In six weeks turn sow and pigs on pasture, which, with a good supply of pure water and a little shorts, will keep the pigs growing very rapidly. With good pasturage, supplemented with grain or slop, including skim milk or whey, it is advisable to let the pigs run with the sow until 10 weeks old. The time should, however, be governed somewhat by the condition of the sow, the growth of the pigs and weather conditions. The sow and pigs should be fed on slops made with shorts, or other mill feed, and water, before the pasture is ready to turn into. Skim milk will add to the value of this diet in sections where it is available.

As a result both of experiments and practical experience it may be said that a small ration of grain is very desirable—in fact, almost imperative—with clover or alfalfa pasture or with any other green forage crop. This will take the pigs through the summer to the time the stubble fields are ready to glean. At this point the grain farmer who has no pigs to clean up the scattered grain suffers quite a loss. In this western country there is less care in harvesting, and hence the greater need of some stock to save the grain left in the field. The hogs can be sold directly from the stubble field, or, better, unless the market is very attractive, they may be taken from the stubble, finished with ground grain and placed on the market later in the season. The market is usually a little surer just before cold weather begins than it is a short time after. Pigs treated in this way can be made to weigh 280 or 300 pounds at 8½ to 9 months of age. Pork made in this way will be all that can be desired in quality, if good animals are employed in its production. An acre of alfalfa or clover pasture fed in this way ought to produce from 600 to 750 pounds of pork.—H. T. French, Idaho.

Cherry Culture.

A Note on Desirable Varieties and How to Grow Them.

Now that cherry culture seems to be receiving more general attention a common and hard question is, "What are the best varieties?" Professor Waugh of Vermont remarks in his last horticultural report that usually it is impossible to give a direct answer. However, Professor Waugh gives a memorandum of his own personal opinion: "Perhaps two kinds of sour cherries are enough for the ordinary farmer. If they are, Morello and Montmorency may be recommended first. If a third variety were grown, Brussels Braun is the best of those which we have seen. Next we would choose Wragg and Bessarabian. Then follow Schattent Amarelle, Griotte du Nord and Juneat Amarelle."

As to culture, Professor Waugh advises: "Soil.—The cherry tree requires a dry soil. It will grow on poor, rocky or thin soils and without much plant food, but it will not thrive on wet land. Of course it is not at its best on poor soils and, like other plants, will repay better treatment, but it should never be heavily fed.

Cultivation.—Standard cherry trees should be set 12 to 20 feet apart, depending on the varieties. Fifteen feet

FRUIT & FLOWERS

is a safe distance for common varieties on ordinary soils. Morellos on strong soils should have 20 feet. Cherries may be grown in sod and will do comparatively better in such circumstances than apples.

Pruning.—Cherries need very little pruning. Some small effort is required during the first few years to secure trees of the best form, but such cutting as is not required in shaping the heads may usually be dispensed with.

Hardiness.—Practically all the sour cherries are hardy enough for any situation in Vermont. Vladimir and Schatten Amarelle are recommended to very timid planters.

Diseases and Insects.—The enemies with which the cherry grower has to contend in this country are (a) black knot, (b) brown rot of the fruit, (c) cecidoid and (d) birds. The one safe and practicable protection against curculio and birds is to grow cherries enough for them and for the family or market besides. Black knot is seldom troublesome, but has been very serious the past year or two. The fruit rot is not likely to do great damage in this state.

Picking, Marketing, Etc.—Cherries should be picked with the stems on. If they are for market, this is imperative. When the fruit rot is bad, it is necessary to attend very closely to the picking, for the cherries rot with astonishing rapidity when they are once ripe. They should be picked as soon as is consistent with good quality, and the picking should be done when the sun shines and the fruit is dry.

In sending cherries to market under present conditions in Vermont the common quart boxes used for strawberries are best. Cherries ought to be plenty enough so that they could be sold by the peck. Think of selling potatoes or apples by the quart! The fact is there are not one-tenth as many cherries grown in Vermont as the market demands.

Food That Strawberries Need. Strawberries draw heavily on the side of potash and nitrogen, the former constituting about two-fifths of the entire ash. Any fertilizers used on strawberry plants should be relatively rich in both potash and nitrogen. Chemist G. W. Shaw would suggest the following combination and amount per acre: Nitrate of soda, 200 pounds; muriate of potash, 250 pounds; dissolved bone, 200 pounds. No scientific rule can be laid down in this matter of fertilizers, as conditions are so variable, but the farmer should use his intelligence in applying the general principles to his conditions.

Floral Notes. July is the time to plant freesias if the bulbs can be obtained that early. Carnation plants may still be grown out of doors by setting slips in beds in early July. Dusting with sulphur or spraying with bordeaux will check the mildew on the roses. Canna "Bobs" is a new variety of dwarf type growing about 18 inches tall, with dark green foliage and yellow flowers. Petunias, if grown long and stalky, can be pegged down and covered with

TAILOR TO THE BUMPY PEOPLE.

Difficulties of Making Clothes For the Crippled and Deformed.

The tall man took a coat from the rack and turned it round and round slowly. "What do you think of this?" he asked. The caller eyed the garment doubtfully. "I hardly know what to think," he said. "It seems so kind of bumpy."

The tall man laughed. "Well," he admitted, "it is something on the bumpy order. But, then, it is intended for a bumpy man. Bumpy people are my specialty."

"Oh," remarked the caller apologetically. "I didn't know that."

"Didn't you read my sign?" asked the tall man. Then he led the way out into the street and pointed to the white letters which informed passersby that a tailor who sewed for cripples and deformed persons did business there.

"I didn't notice that," said the caller. "It was hidden by the awning."

"So it was," said the tall man, "but so far as business is concerned it makes little difference whether my sign is visible or not, for everybody knows where to find me. You did not know perhaps that the tailor business, like every other profession, is gradually being divided up into specialties. I have taken the bumpy people, as you call them, for my particular patrons. For the past five years I have been working almost exclusively along the bumpy line, and now fully two-thirds of my customers are people troubled with some physical imperfection which they want concealed or, where that is impossible, reduced to a minimum by their clothes."

"It stands to reason that it is a difficult thing to give a deformed man a good fit. It might seem to the casual observer that any tailor who can turn out a well fitting suit of clothes for a sound, upright man ought to be able to do proportionately good work for a cripple, but this theory does not hold water in practice. I know scores of tailors up town who do first class work when sewing for their own trade, but as soon as they intinge on my specialty they make a botch of everything they lay their hands on. Their incompetency in that line is due chiefly to the tendency to give attention to the whimsical notions and suggestions of patrons."

"As a rule, a man whose physique is out of kilter is very sensitive in regard to his shortcomings. He naturally wants the defect minimized to the greatest possible degree, and he has a grist of ideas which would, he believes, tend to improve his appearance. The tailor who has not learned from experience the cut best adapted to various deformities is apt to be guided by the most plausible of these suggestions, and the result is general dissatisfaction on all concerned."

"As for myself, having studied this branch of the trade for so many years, I consider that I am competent to fit the worst case of crooked limbs or bad back on record, and, while I listen patiently to directions and apparently defer to the wishes of my customers, in reality I follow my own judgment, and the consequence is I am troubled by fewer kickers than any other tailor of my acquaintance. I am quite proud of my reputation too. There are hosts of these bumpy people in town, and it is high time somebody was making a special study of their anatomy."—New York Sun

A gentleman recently cured of dyspepsia gave the following appropriate rendering of Burns' famous blessing. It instantly relieves and radically cures indigestion and all stomach disorders. Dr. G. S. Darling.

"The marvelous cure of Mrs. Rena J. Stout, of consumption, has created intense excitement in Cammack, Ind. writes Marion Stuart, a leading druggist of Muncie, Ind. She only weighed 90 pounds when her doctor in Yorktown said she must soon die. Then she began to use Dr. King's New Discovery and gained 37 pounds in weight and was completely cured. It has cured thousands of hopeless cases, and is positively guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. 50c and $1.00. Dr. G. S. Darling and J. E. Dillon's drug store.

After many intricate experiments, scientists have discovered methods for obtaining all the natural digestants. These have been combined in the human body and united with substances that build up the digestive organs, making a compound called Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It digests what you eat and allows all dyspeptics to eat plenty of nourishing food while the stomach troubles are being radically cured by the medicinal agents it contains. It is pleasant to take and will give instant relief. Dr. G. S. Darling.
