LEE E. JOSLYN

Sketch of the Life and Record of the Democratic candidate for Congress.

Lee E. Joslyn, the democratic candidate for congress in the 10th district, was born in Darien, Genesee county, N. Y., July 23rd, 1864, and remained in that state until his seventh year, when he removed with his parents to Pennsylvania, where he remained for two years. Owing to the poor school facilities, his people, who had a large family, came to Michigan to give the children the benefits of our excellent school system. Mr. Joslyn resided at Dryden, Lapeer county with his people until 1881, in which year he graduated from the Union or Graded schools at the later place. He had at that time acquired a taste for the profession of the law and went at once after his graduation to Lapeer and entered the law office of Judge elect W. W. Stickney, where he remained for a portion of the time until 1884, teaching at times to earn money to enable him to continue his studies. His efforts to continue his studies and the stuff of which he was made are fully explained when it is stated that to pay for his board while he was reading law at Lapeer, he acted as night porter at the Abram House; in this position he was compelled to retire as early as six or seven o'clock in the evening and arise at eleven, remaining on watch until 4:30 o'clock in the morning and then go to the Michigan Central depot and meet a train, getting to bed again about 5 o'clock a. m. Much of his reading was done during his watch from 11 p. m. to 4:30 a. m., and notwithstanding these hours he was regularly at the office from 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 at night, and Judge Stickney has said that he never had a student in his office that mastered Blackstone in as short a time as did Mr. Joslyn. In 1883 he became principal of the Otisville (Genesee county) high schools, continuing his studies in the meantime nights and mornings and Saturdays and during his vacation in the office of Geo. H. Durand of Flint, Mich. He went to West Bay City in 1885 as principal of the First Ward school of that city, spending Saturdays and vacations in the office of T. A. E. Weadock in Bay City. He was admitted to the Bay county bar by Judge Sanford M. Green in 1886, and at once opened an office in West Bay City, removing the same to Bay City in 1888 but continued his residence in West Bay City, where he still resides. He has been twice circuit court commissioner of his county, and in 1893-4 was prosecuting attorney. He also held the office of county commissioner of schools in 1887.

He may be easily classed as one of the leaders of the Bay county bar and the equal, as an attorney, of any man of his age in the state. In 1897 he was selected as city attorney of West Bay City and was reappointed in 1899, though at both times the city council was a tie with the mayor a republican. In this position he has made a most excellent record, as he did in all of the others that he has filled. As city attorney he succeeded in settling the title to the road between Bay City and West Bay city, a matter that had been in litigation for years and on which the city and county had expended thousands of dollars; by the decision obtained in this case he saved to the people of West Bay City an immediate expense of upwards of $10,000 and a continual expense for the future.

Mr. Joslyn is a fluent public speaker and takes a prominent part in the public discussions of those matters of interest to his locality. He proposes to make an active canvas of every county of the district, and if he does the principles of democracy will be well cared for in this district this fall.

Mr. Joslyn is affiliated with numerous fraternal societies and has been more or less prominent in number. He is a Mason, an Odd Fellow, a Maccabee, a Knight of Pythias, a Modern Woodman, and a Forester. He has been a member of the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias for several years, and since 1792 has been a member of the High Standing Committee of the Independent Order of Foresters, having been High Counsellor, High Vice Chief Ranger, High Chief Ranger, and High Secretary, which latter office he is now filling in such a manner as to have received the commendation of the Supreme Court of the order as being the best official of any one of the thirty-five jurisdictions.

He was married in 1893 to Alice L. Wilson, daughter of F. L. Wilson of the Wilson Hoop Co., and two children, both boys, are the result of the union.

Omer Scorched.

Seventeen Buildings Burned Sunday Night, Including the Largest Part of the Business Portion of the Town.

Omer, Mich., Sept. 24.—Fire which originated in Campbell's livery barn last midnight nearly wiped out the town. After burning the building which was owned by P. Lamoria, and the carriages and seven horses owned by Campbell, it spread rapidly and the following buildings were destroyed:

Menzer's furniture store, loss $6000 A. S. Larrabee, drug store, stock and building, $2,200, insurance $800; Dr. Page's office; Bach's saloon; the postoffice; Weber's hardware store and stock, loss $6,500; Gerber's jewelry store; Curtis's new grocery and and dry goods store and Mrs. Worel's millinery stock, $2,900, insurance $500, the new Lamoria hotel, loss $10,000, insurance $5,000; Tice's barber shop and dwelling; Cook's law office; Ken's dry house and barrel stock, $600, and three dwellings on the same street.

Eleven families are left homeless without a vacant house in town.

With no fire protection men and women worked heroically in carrying water from all available points. The scene at times became dramatic. When men on high ladders became exhausted with heat they dashed pails of water on themselves and fought the flames with renewed vigor. Around the town was strewn furniture carried from many dwellings in dreaded anticipation. It was only by prompt and persistent efforts and the use of chemicals that Kent's new five-story grist and sawmills were saved.

While the townspeople were engaged fighting the flames, some person entered the large McDonald hotel, ripped open the mattresses in four bedrooms, fired them and locked the doors. The deed was discovered in time to save the hotel.

The Bay City fire department was telegraphed for, but could not respond for two hours, after which time the fire was under control and the order canceled.

The entire loss is estimated at $70,000; insurance $30,000. The origin of the fire is supposed to be incendiary, as telephone communication between here and Standish was cut two and one-half miles out, and the road piled with logs. Some of the burned out firms contemplate rebuilding immediately, while others will move away. The mail matter in the postoffice was saved.

Much of the campaign oratory may justly be described as rag-time eloquence.

"There are no trusts! Down with the ice trust!"—Extract from a speech by Mark Hanna.

OVER one hundred good American soldiers have given their lives during the past ten days to carry out the war of subjection in the Philippines.

EUGENE KELLY, of Roscommon, has resigned as the democratic candidate for state senator from this district and the position will be filled by the senatorial committee.

It is hardly possible that the people of Michigan will be so blind as to endorse the thievery and rottenness of the present administration by re-electing the same party to control again.

No doubt Oom Paul thinks that Americans might well have saved some of their sympathy and sent him instead a little strictly practical advice as to the proper time to drop out of the game.

And now we have Bryan Republicans. Senator Wellington says he is one. Also we have McKinley Democrats, if the North Carolina Populists who have nominated McKinley for Vice President along with Bryan may be described as such.

FROM November 6, 1896, to July 4, 1900, the republican orators and organs were loud in declaring that the free silver issue was so dead that it could never be revived. From July 4 last to the present time they used their best endeavors to bring it to life. "Consistency thou art a jewel."

A case involving the constitutionality of the Porto Rican act may be heard by the Supreme Court next month and a decision rendered before the election. Certain Porto Ricans, it is said, will claim the right to register and vote and somebody will have to decide whether they are entitled to do or not. The time is very short, however.

THE daily mails are beginning to show that the campaign is well under way by the large amount of political wisdom that has begun to circulate. Only a comparatively small portion of this matter comes with a postage stamp affixed, but instead, some members of congress will take advantage of the franking privilege and let it through free. One of the great reforms demand in this country, is the abolishment of this outrage.

By all means see that your children are kept in school every day that it is possible for them to attend. None of them will get too much schooling, and besides everyone would dislike to see an army of young boys loafing around town with no apparent aim in life. There is hardly a well-thinking and good citizen but wishes, after it is too late, that he had got a better schooling, and can see the need of a better education when he rubs up against the cold world for a livelihood. Send the boys and girls to school.

Its Name and Nature.

The name "Today" will fit the character of Detroit's latest newspaper enterprise in every respect. Being an evening paper it will be able to bring the history of the day up to the close of the day's activities. Being a compact paper, the brisk title will suit the terseness of every item. No day or dates will be used in the dispatches, as "To-Day" at the top of the paper will settle the up-to-dateness of every item in the paper.

"To-Day," as a title, will relate to the preciousness of time in this hurrying age and the paper will be made up on the principle of a short story soon told. No padded reports; no waste of words; no unfounded sensations; no fictitious interviews. "Nothing but news and an opinion or two" is the paper's watchword and it will live up to it.

"To-Day" will save the time of busy readers, not alone by careful editing and intelligent condensing, but by returning to sensible typography. "To-Day" will save the eyes of busy readers by putting the history of the day in large type—headed brevier—a clear cut, legible face. "To-Day" will save the people's money by providing all the news for one cent. As a permanent penny paper it is the pioneer in Detroit.

In policy, "To-Day" will be absolutely untrammelled and outspoken. It is so organized that it owes no allegiance to any interest, individual, or "ism" apart from the people and their rights and weal. It will fly the legend "To-Day" not alone as a patronym but as a proverb and pre-empt, using the term on all occasions as a warning against procrastination and as a call to instant and well directed endeavor in civic, commercial and social life.

The Fate of the Confederate Seal.

"The result of the last Confederate council of war held at Abbeville, South Carolina, in May 1865, was soon known all over Abbeville, and the Generals and the Secretary of War were kept busy for hours signing honorable discharges for the tired soldiers, who immediately applied for them," writes Mrs. Thaddeus Horton in the October Ladies' Home Journal. "During the evening Mr. Benjamin asked for a hatchet, and with it defaced the Confederate seal. About twelve o'clock the same night the Confederate party continued their retreat in the direction of Washington, Georgia, and while crossing the Savannah River in the darkness some one suggested that the seal be thrown overboard. This idea was at once approved, and when the boat reached mid-stream it was dropped with a dull splash into the sandy river bed of that beautiful Southern watercourse, where to this day, its mission all fulfilled, it serenely rests."

Special Offer in Music to Readers of This Paper.

We are in receipt of a copy of E. T. Paull's latest and greatest march just from the press, entitled "Dawn of the Century March." This title page is a work of art, without doubt the handsomest ever seen on a piece of music, magnificently lithographed in five colors. Mr. Paull is known all over the country by people who use music as being the author of the celebrated "Ben Hur Chariot Race March," which is a universal favorite. Other famous marches composed by him are "Charge of the Light Brigade," "America Forever," "A Warm-Up in Dixie," great characteristic piece, etc. This new march of Mr. Paull's "Dawn of the Century" is said by competent judges to be one of the best ever placed on the market. Mr. Paull is styled by the leading New York music journals "The New March King." Every Piano and organ player should have a copy of this piece. It has six full pages of music. In consideration of our mentioning this new march in our news columns, the publishers agree to furnish any of our readers with a complete copy of the piece for 25c in postage stamps or silver, provided this notice and this paper is mentioned, otherwise the regular price 50c will be charged. THEN AND NOW.

I wish I had been grandpa's child,
That I could have had the joy
Of fishing in those good old days
When father was a boy,
For then the fish grew bigger far
Than they do nowadays,
And literally packed the streams—
At least, so father says.

They never caught a sucker then
That didn't weigh a ton,
And pickers were longer than
A modern Armstrong gun.
They used to yank out halibut
In hundreds from our bays,
And shad ran up the banks to bite—
At least, so father says.

They never thought of using bait
To lure the wily trout;
They reached a bushel basket down
And simply yanked them out,
And in about an hour or two
They'd fill up several trays,
And show them through the neighborhood—
At least, so father says.

In short, they caught so many fish
That 'fore their sport was through
The stream where they were fishing would
Go down a yard or two,
And not an angler failed to come
Home loaded in those days,
A habit father still pursues—
At least, so mother says.

Buried in a Chinese Coal Mine.

A strange occurrence is reported from the district of Hsing Koochow. In the neighboring province of Anhui, where there are extensive coal workings, a party of miners struck an ancient shaft where history records that a great catastrophe occurred 400 years ago, the records being preserved among the local archives.
The miners, on reopening this old shaft, came upon upward of 170 bodies of the former workers lying where they had been overcome with foul gas four centuries back. The corpses were as if those of yesterday. The faces were like those of men who had only just died.
On an attempt being made to move them outside for burial they all crumbled away, leaving nothing but a pile of dust and the remnants of the stronger part of their clothing.—Stray Stories.

JIM PRICE'S RATHOLE.

How Lincoln Disposed of a Claim Against the Government.

During the war a very intimate friend and adviser of President Lincoln called at the White House to confer with him upon some of the many perplexing questions which were continually pouring into the executive mansion for solution.
It was after the seven days' battle from Mechanicsville to Malvern Hill, when disappointment at the north was almost as great as that produced by the conflict at Bull Run, and the president was considering the advisability of calling for a levy of 800,000 troops. Topics for discussion were so numerous and pressing that it was 10:30 o'clock before the visitor, rising, said, "Well, Lincoln, I must be going now."
"No, T—, don't go yet," Lincoln replied. "Sit down. Another matter yet. There is a man from Boston here with a claim against the government for $250,000. Yesterday he submitted a portion of his papers relative to it, with the request that I examine them while he was preparing the remainder. I told him to come here tonight again at 11 o'clock with the rest of his papers, and you know he'll come, so I want you to wait."

"Very well," the visitor replied, and they resumed their topics of state, Lincoln sitting with his chair tilted backward, his hands clasped over the top of his head and his feet upon the table, the visitor near by in a similar position.
By and by at the appointed time footsteps were heard, and the expected visitor was ushered into the executive chamber through a door at the back of the president.
"There, Mr. President," said the man from Boston, "is the remainder of those papers regarding my claim. I wish you would examine and report on them as soon as possible."
"Very well," said Lincoln, turning his head somewhat toward the visitor. "Just lay them on that table there, and I will examine them as soon as possible. It may be a day or two, it may be a week, but I'll report on them as soon as I can," and he turned his head to his friend again as if to continue their conversation regarding the exigencies of the war. Before going out the man from Boston suffered his curiosity to get the better of him, and he ventured to interrogate the president as to what he thought of the validity of the claim from the papers he had already examined.

"Your claim, Mr. —," Lincoln replied, turning toward him, "reminds me of Jim Price's rathole. You never knew Jim, did you? Well, he had all his life been roaming about from one place to another and had tried every way imaginable to make a living, but without success. At the time I speak of he was trying to practice law in a little town near Springfield, but soon tiring of this he thought to enter the dry goods business and accordingly wrote to an eastern house to know if it would furnish him with a stock of goods on credit, at the same time forwarding references as to his integrity. The eastern firm addressed an inquiry to one of these references, desiring to know if it could safely trust Jim with a certain amount of goods, and the reply was something like this: 'Jim Price's assets I would fix at $20,000, consisting of the following items: One wife, valued at $25,000; one child, if I had such a wife I wouldn't take less than that for her; two children, valued at $24,000, at least if I had two such children I wouldn't take less than that for them; one office table, valued at $1.85; one inkstand, valued conservatively at 10 cents; one penholder, valued at 5 cents, and a rathole in the corner of his office that is worth looking into.'"

And the man from Boston went his way.—Chicago Tribune

Somewhat Unequal.

Rambler Clipper, and Ideal bicycles for sale by WHITEMORE & PHINNEY.

A dispatch from Northern Michigan says a new terror of courtship has, according to one of the medical papers, been developed. A young woman for some days had been suffering from a supposed attack of pleurisy. When a doctor was called in he found that one of her ribs was fractured. After much questioning the girl blushingly admitted that her fiancé had indicted the injury while giving her the usual tender embrace before parting on his last visit.

Tribe to Standish.

We started for the encampment On the nine o'clock train. Our destiny was Standish; There we would remain And meet with old comrades And hear them all cheer. How they fought the hard battles Without any fear!

On our way from Pine River It was our good luck To see chickens and geese, and A flock of fine ducks, Not one could we gobble. The truth must be told: They all ran too fast: We've getting old.

We came to the city, We heard the drums beat, We saw a large crowd Promoting the street. We marched to headquarters Our hands in our pockets, Where we paid in our quarter 'The first thing on the docket.

We put up our tent To take a night's rest. Put up in the middle, We thought it the best. We made a mistake We all soon found out; He couldn't keep still, He was kicking about.

He kept his mouth open, He couldn't keep it closed. He wouldn't quit his pipe Or puff Livermore's toes. We all made a vow You may bet your last cent, The next night Mr. H. Slept in some other tent!

At seven in the morning We fell in line At the sound of the bugle. We were always in time To march to the dining hall. It was our good luck To take the first table And get the best chuck.

We had lots of cabbage, Some mutton and bread. Some ate so hearty They got light in the head. Some would see stagger, Some wouldn't let a stick And sleep off their trouble, Stretched out on the ground.

I strolled down the street, I was looking about, I came to a side-show, When I saw coming out, August Lake, an old soldier. He was viewing the sights And watching the dance girls Draped up in tights.

Reuben Wade bought a melon; He passed it around As we lay in the shade. Down flat on the ground, He is a jolly good fellow; Nothing about him that's mean, He treated all the ladies With a dish of ice cream.

There was Chase, an old soldier From many a hard fight. He found, while in Standish, He was in a sad plight. Every corner in town, Where the banner was unfurled, He would meet a masked battery Of red headed girls.

There was Livermore, too, We know he is brave. He went to the front, His country to save. His courage has left him, He thinks it is hard If he can't have the ladies Stand with him on guard.

We had one little chap, He is like the paddico flea. Wherever there was fun, There he would be. He never says much; His actions are sly, The name of this comrade Is our sexton, H. S. Nye.

Comrade Walker came over Part way on a wheel. He passed lots of chickens. He is too honest to steal. If I was a chicken I'd want to roost high If I knew an old soldier Was going to ride by.

The dance halls were plenty, Their music was grand. Ice cream and peanuts Were sold from their stands. I looked on with wonder, With joy and surprise When the smiles of a lady Greeted my eyes.

A note book and pencil She held in her hand. She was taking down notes And listening to the band. I know she was happy; Her friends see would meet With a smile and a nod As they marched down the street.

The ladies' relief corps Is always around To help the sick or the needy Wherever they are found. If you ever should meet one, Wherever they be, Remember the ladies Of Post Sixty-three.

I'll never forget Legacy, I'll class him with the rest. He likes the old soldiers, But a good horse the best. He was always on time, He never was late To eat a square meal And fill up his plate.

I thank the old soldiers, I'll express my mind free When I speak of my comrades Of Post Sixty-three, You all come home sober, Whenever you are out, Don't ever get boozey, Your friends will find you out.
