Ring Rule Must Go.

The people of the Tenth Congressional District, irrespective of politics, are determined to put their seal of condemnation on the individual that concocts all kinds of nefarious schemes to perpetuate his reign in public office. This kind of political warfare is so distasteful to the honest, fair American citizen that it will be tolerated no longer. Year after year this condition of affairs has been charged to one party or the other, and just as soon as the public becomes thoroughly acquainted with the facts the manipulators must go. In the Tenth Congressional District this year is the plainest statement of the true condition ever presented to the people of Michigan. H. H. Aplin is the nominee for congress on one ticket. That he is a capable man no person will deny, but what interest has he got in the general business of the district? None whatever. In the first place his whole life for the past thirty years has been spent in the line of holding public office—his knowledge in that capacity is not questioned. Thousands of the best citizens of the state of Michigan, and Bay county in particular, have watched with interest his manipulations. Have they been conducted on an honorable, upright basis? Hundreds of the leading republicans of Bay county have been refused as delegates to county, state and national conventions on account of the ring management of this individual. Year by year it grew worse and more of it until the present. Today what is the true situation? Oh, no. By the ring rule of a small number of federal office holders. Through trickery and deception in every township in Bay county where there is a post office established—that is the political headquarters of Mr. Aplin—and the postmaster is in duty bound to see that the interest of the ring is maintained. The condition is no secret to the reliable, honest, trustworthy republicans of the district. They are on the alert, and no doubt whatever but they will stamp their seal of disapproval on the methods of Mr. Aplin and cast their votes for a business man and not a ring politician.—Bay City Democrat.

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Hallway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by Dr. G. S. Darling.

'One Cure For Anarchy.

In this exigency nothing could be a severer blow to the demagogery and rant of anti-social socialism of all degrees of activity and cussedness, than fruit shaken off by the east winds of licentiousness should now be called "Czolgosz!" Already we hear of reactions in New York and other cities against what calls itself "socialism." We rejoice that socialists in convention disavow the act of Czolgosz but it is equally true that the violence of the tongues of many mis-called socialists is remotely responsible for the crimes of Anarchy. Socialists as a body are made up of all sorts and conditions, and they quarrel among themselves worst when society troubles them least. Hence to make martyrs of socialists would be the height of folly. To leave them to their own division is the easier cure. All that society ought to do is to arrest any person inciting to sedition and murder. The busy tongue of the prejudiced monger may do mischief; does do mischief, but far deeper would be the mischief imposed by giving the notorious too much publicity or by arresting the largest possible freedom of debate.

The remedy for anarchism as well as for anti-social socialism is not in the invocation of a Russian policy in the United States. It lies in the spread of sound economic views, of co-operative ideas, of friendly societies of labor and capital, in a developed consciousness of the sacredness of property rights and of popular rights and in the clearer apprehension of what Liberty, Equity and Fraternity signify as distinguished from license and false ideas of equality and the confusion of fraternity with arson, murder and vice.—Bay City Times.

Working Day and Night.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fog into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by Dr. G. S. Darling and Jas. E. Dillon.

An Unanimous Verdict.

Some years ago, when Robert Louis Stevenson made one among the little colony of art students and others at Barbizon, a discussion arose as to who out of all their numbers could best be spared by the world at large—he, in short, who never would be missed by the general public. There was some difficulty about coming to a decision, so finally everyone present inscribed the name of his candidate on a slip of paper. The slips were folded, placed in a hat and on being opened and read proclaimed that all, himself included, had voted for Stevenson.

What a comedy this was. Stevenson is immortal, but who ever heard of the rest of these young fellows.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite.

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For bysale Dr. G. S. Darling.

Different Dueling Methods.

Viennese dueling methods are quite different from those of Paris. The chief characteristic of Parisian dueling is its publicity and harmlessness. In Vienna perhaps not so many duels are fought, but those that are generally result in the letting of considerable blood, and they are always quietly managed. The other day a woman was convicted in Vienna for renting her apartments for duels. For years she has made this a profitable business, and at her trial she admitted that in the last three or four years over 200 duels had been fought in her parlor. Everything was so arranged that there was not the slightest publicity, and as the fights always took place before 6 in the morning the chances of the police finding out anything about them were small—in fact, Frau Pietsch might have gone on doing this indefinitely had not her husband objected to it. He had begged her to stop, but she wouldn't. Then he got a separation from her, and it was in his suit that her occupation was made public.

Sir Thomas hasn't kicked yet at having a last year's model put up against him.

Columbia, the old boat, tried and true has been selected to defend the America's cup in the races with Shamrock II. If Columbia fails in her second task, people will wonder why Independence was not given an opportunity.

Now that the first burst of rage over the assassination of the President has passed, let us devote ourselves coolly and calmly to solving the problem his death has set us; how to get rid of the anarchists without taking steps that will breed more of them. The task is not an easy one.

It will be a great card for Schley and a corresponding blow for Sampson, if the court of inquiry shall officially declare, as his counsel asserts, that the former was both legally and actually in command at Santiago. History would have to be rewritten—even Maclay's history.

Few people realize how free from all pledges President Roosevelt will be. Probably he is the first man ever nominated for the Vice-Presidency against his will; consequently he owes nothing to those who selected him. He will be free, for instance, to allow his civil service reform lent in any direction it may lead him.

The laws of different states are peculiar. If Czolgosz had committed the assault upon President McKinley in Michigan and the President had lived, he could have been given a life sentence, but had he lived, New York could have given him only ten years. In case of the death of the president, Michigan could have given no severer sentence than for the other offense, while New York can put him to death.—Ex.

President Theodore Roosevelt assumes the highest position in the gift of the American people under trying and most undesirable circumstances. That he will give a conservative and careful administration of government affairs is the belief and hope of all. He is the youngest man to attain the high and responsible position, and his well known characteristics lead all to believe that his administration will be firm and honest.

A Nation mourns the death of a well beloved public official. President McKinley passed away at 3:15 a. m. last Saturday morning, from the result of the wound administered by the Assassin Czolgosz. The news of the sudden change for the worse in President McKinley's condition last Friday afternoon came with almost as great a shock as the first announcement of the shooting, and the announcement of his death on Saturday morning cast a gloom over the entire country.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning," writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Dr. G. S. Darling's and Jas. E. CIRCUIT COURT.

Thirty Five Talesman Called Before a Jury was Secured to Try the Oscar McDonald Case.

No Court Yesterday in Respect of the Late President McKinley.

The regular September term of Circuit Court convened last Monday. Judge Main J. Conning presiding. Monday was devoted to assigning cases, hearing motions, etc. The case of John Corey, charged with rape, was put over until next term, owing to the illness of his attorney, Hon. C. R. Henry, and one of the witnesses. The jury did not appear until Tuesday.

The first case on trial Tuesday was that of the people vs. J. H. Gilmartin, charged with using a net of smaller mesh than that provided by law. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty. An appeal to the Supreme court was taken.

The next case was that of the people vs. Oscar McDonald, charged with poisoning a well. It took from 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning to secure a jury. Thirty five talesmen were examined in addition to the regular panel. When court adjourned Wednesday seven of the people's witnesses had been examined. It is expected that the case will go to the jury today.

Judge Conning, adjourned court Wednesday evening until this morning in respect to the late President McKinley.

The next case on trial is that of the people vs. Henry Wood on the charge of arson.

Deaths in Michigan.

There were only 2,672 deaths returned to the secretary of state for the month of August, corresponding to a death rate 31.1 per 1,000 population. This is an unusually low mortality for August, the number of deaths returned being nearly 300 less than the number returned for August, 1900. Owing to the absence of extreme heat during the greater portion of the month, the deaths of infants under one year of age, 646, were not as numerous as usual, although they constituted over 25 per cent of the total deaths. There were 210 deaths of children, aged 1 to 4 years, inclusive, and 615 deaths of persons over 65 years of age.

Important causes of death were as follows: Pulmonary tuberculosis, 153; other forms of tuberculosis, 28; typhoid fever, 48; diphtheria and croup, 23; scarlet fever, 18; measles, 1; whooping cough, 15; pneumonia, 50; diarrheal diseases under 2 years of age, 398; cancer, 128; accident and violence, 206; the latter including 44 deaths from drowning.

The only diseases showing marked increases for the month, as compared with July, were typhoid fever and diarrheal diseases of infants. With both of these, the deaths reported were much below the number for the same month of 1900.

The Country Press.

In an address before a farmers' association one of the speakers said: "As a rule the farmer has no firmer friend than the country press. The paper is distinctly the farmers' own paper; supported directly or indirectly by farmers who compose the backbone of the printer's subscription list and largely for what the enterprising merchant advertises. Now, brothers let us not forget our friends. Let us see that our subscription is paid before the first of April and a year in advance if we can afford it. The men or the papers that fight my battles shall have my support. Another thing—the merchant who advertises is the one who makes it possible for us to get a good local paper, and the man or firms who are too penurious to advertise and help support the local press have no right to the farmers' patronage. I propose hereafter to go to a live advertiser and a man who will do his share towards supporting the local press, thus contributing to my support, rather than buy of a man who proposes to 'take all and give nothing in return. If farmers as a class would support their friends, the other fellows would soon go out of business."

That Cameo Bracelet.

Jack Demoiné was in love with penniless Margaret Sears, but his sister urged him to marry the rich Jenny Valkenburgh.

"Propose tonight," said Miss Demoiné. "Tonight? You don't want me to propose to a girl at a masquerade, do you, and when I don't even know her disguise?"

Marion mused a moment, her fine eyes bent to the floor. It was no use evading the question—her brother must marry money, and here was the chance. If she could only get him to promise.

"If I give you a hint, will you give me your promise to do the right thing tonight?" she asked, with suppressed eagerness.

Jack Demoiné hesitated. Into his heart there came a sudden, sweet throb—the memory of a face and voice that he loved; but, as he had told himself a hundred times, he could not "afford to marry" Margaret Sears, and it was his business to forget her.

"Yes, I promise you I'll ask her tonight to be my wife. Now for the directions—be brief."

Marion knew her brother's temper too well to trifle with him now. He had passed his word, and she could trust him.

"You know the bracelet of the cameo intaglios that Miss Valkenburgh showed us the other day? She will wear that on her left arm."

When the time came, Demoiné threw a cloak over his dress, and with his mask in his hand he stepped into the carriage. He was late. As he entered the brilliant drawing room his eyes began their search for the wearer of the cameo bracelet. He was going to have his task over directly. He had come to offer his hand to Jenny Valkenburgh, and the quicker it was done the better.

He did not look at ladies' dresses. He looked at their arms and felt a sense of relief at each one he saw which did not bear what to him was the fatal bracelet. He felt very mean, and he despised himself. He was going to ask a woman whom he did not love to marry him—he wanted her money.

A waltz sounded from the band. Glittering couples glided off down the room. At that moment, as Demoiné was leaning against the wall moodily watching the forms that went past him, there came a graceful figure clad in some diaphanous blue robe. He could only tell that it was surpassingly lovely, and he did not know what character was to be represented.

Simultaneously with the feeling of admiration that stirred in his heart he saw on one fair, plump arm the coil of the cameo intaglios. There was no mistaking them. They were of too rare workmanship for one to forget them.

He did not pause. Softly he made his way after the blue mask, and the next moment he had whispered to her:

"Make this music still sweeter by waltzing with me!"

The mask paused in seeming irresolution. Had she recognized him? He had not tried in the least to disguise his voice. He rather wished to be known by her, but her tones were evidently disguised as she replied and placed her hand on his proffered arm.

In spite of his preoccupation Demoiné enjoyed that waltz, and, owing to the power that delicately appeals to the senses, the young man found himself thinking that so graceful a woman could not be wholly a bore as a wife.

"Now for it!" he said to himself as he swung her out of the group and bent down his tall head as he asked her to go out of the crowd—it was so warm.

He coughed and stammered something inaudible. She begged his pardon—what did he say?

He plunged in.

"I don't know how to do the thing gracefully, Miss Valkenburgh, but I'll make my words plain. Will you be my wife?"

There, it was done! And Jack Demoiné breathed a long sigh and waited. He fancied she was agitated. It was a moment before she spoke, and Jack hastened to say:

"It is not possible that you don't know me?"

"I know you," she answered, and the voice, no longer disguised, was like a knife through Jack Demoiné's heart.

He tore off his mask and revealed a deathly white face. Now the woman was much more composed than he was. She removed the blue silk covering from her own face. Yes, it was Margaret Sears who looked at him. Her face also was colorless, but it showed no emotion otherwise.

"You should not ask such vital questions at a masquerade, Mr. Demoiné, or you should first take the precaution to make sure of the identity of the lady."

How calm her voice was!

As for Demoiné, his blood was on fire. He uttered an inarticulate ejaculation. He caught the girl's hands in his own and held them to his heart; he poured forth a torrent of passionate words; he so degraded himself as to offer his hand where he could not give his heart.

He could never remember how he explained matters, but it was certain that he made Margaret Sears understand that he was thankful for the mistake and that he loved her no more.

Fifteen minutes later, when the two, carefully masked again, re-entered the ballroom, a woman in gorgeous fifteenth century dress swept by them on the arm of a Louis XIII musketeer.

"That is my Cousin Jenny," whispered Margaret. "How curious that at the last moment she should have changed her mind and fastened the cameos on my arm!"

The next morning Marion, who had gone home before supper, asked her brother:

"Did you propose to the girl with the cameos?"

"Yes."

"And she accepted you, of course?"

"Yes."

"I congratulate you!" cried Marion, with sparkling eyes.

Jack Demoiné lit a cigar and walked out, wisely thinking he would leave explanations to the future.—Exchange.

All the talk about sending a tele-

A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in the sick room. A good laugh is better than medicine. The man who can tell a wholesome story to his family and keep his troubles to himself will have very little use for a doctor. The world is too busy to bother with the troubles of each individual. A good laugh is also good for a topid liver.

September and October are the months during which typhoid fever reaches the point of greatest prevalence and the state board of health is now sending out circulars to health officers regarding steps to be taken to prevent the spread of the disease. Probably more deaths result from typhoid fever during the two months mentioned than all the remainder of the year.

A Massachusetts man has patented an anti-crowding device which he warrants as an effective preventive of the early morning rooster racket.
It consists of a clasp which is adjusted on the roosters neck so that his claxon notes are shut off just as he gets to the overture. If the inventor will only follow it up with a device which will work the same game on the people who snore he can be assured of a rich reward by the grateful public.

Stood Off Death.

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Texas, once fooled a gravedigger. He says: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to use Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better, but continued their use until wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease, germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. Only

MEMORIAL SERVICE

In Respect of President Mc-Kinley Held Yesterday.

Yesterday was a day of mourning throughout our land in respect of the late President McKinley, a man who was beloved by the American people.

In this city most solemn and impressive services were held at the M.
E. church at two o'clock. The church was most appropriately decorated with somber black, flowers and National colors.

Mayor Hartingh opened the services by a few most appropriate remarks, and Rev. D. Q. Barry followed with a most impressive sermon.
C. A. Jahraus also made a short address. Excellent music was rendered, and as a whole no more impressive services were ever held in this city.

All business places were closed during the afternoon, and many symbols of mourning were visible throughout the city, including flags at half mast and pictures of the late President appropriately draped.

In the production of "baby beef" rather richer grain rations are generally used and a maximum grain ration fed, which generally contains some oil-meal, says E. A. Burnett of Nebraska in Prairie Farmer. The grain in these cases is ground so as to increase the consumption of the food. I have known of small quantities of flax to be fed in the sheaf as a substitute for oilmeal, which gave most gratifying gains. These calves took on flesh very rapidly on a grain ration of snapped and shelled corn and a sheaf of flax fed four times per week.

Our feeders are largely appreciating the fact that the cost of producing gains on any animal increases with each month of his age, and that the more rapid the gains the cheaper they will be on the average. We cannot afford to bring the calf up to 400 or 500 pounds at weaning time and then allow him to stand still for the next three or four months during the winter season and spend the first two months on grass in recovering from the starvation of the previous winter. If it is profitable to feed corn to a 3-year-old steer, it is much more profitable to feed him during his calfhood and early growing period.

If the calf can be made to weigh 400 pounds at six months, it should certainly weigh 700 pounds at 12 months, 1,200 pounds at 18 to 20 months and 1,400 pounds or upward at two years, if kept until that age. These figures may seem large to men who have been buying 3-year-old steers weighing 1,000 pounds, but they are being duplicated and exceeded by many men within the state today who are selling steers of their own raising and feeding at 18 to 20 months and weighing 1,200 to 1,500 pounds. Such steers top the market wherever sold because they not only show the evidence of good feeding, but because they have the breeding and the form which put a large amount of prime beef in a small package.

Dried Blood For Calves.
Dried blood is not only good for a weak calf, but is an excellent remedy for any calf subject to scours. The Kansas experiment station has just purchased 20 young calves. Frequently these calves arrive at the station badly affected with the scours. A little dried blood always brings about a cure.

Recently a test was made with five calves that happened to be scouring at the same time. With two of these dried blood was fed after reducing the regular feed of milk. With the other three dried blood was fed without changing the supply of milk. In the former case the calves recovered from the scours after two feeds, in the latter after three feeds. With the 70 head of young calves under experiment at the Kansas station during the past year there has not been a single case of scours that dried blood has failed to check.

In feeding dried blood a teaspoonful at a feed is a great plenty. This should be continued until the scours disappear. In case of a weak calf the allowance may be gradually increased to a tablespoonful at a feed. To prevent the dried blood from settling to the bottom of the pail, where the calf will be unable to get it, it may be stirred in the milk while the calf is drinking or the milk and blood may be fed immediately after being thoroughly mixed.

Since dried blood is such a cheap and effective remedy, it will pay any one who raises young calves by hand to have a little available whenever a calf shows signs of disorders in its digestive tract. It can be obtained from any of the large packers. When ordering, state that the blood is wanted for feeding purposes.

A GATE WORTH TRYING.

A Correspondent Warrants It to Close Itself and Stay Closed. I send you the following sketch of a gate that will absolutely close itself and stay closed. Take any ordinary gate and attach hinges as shown (to be made from old wagon or buggy tire), just so the same will work easily on the post. Then attach trace chain at brace A and also to post at B on reverse side from gate. By opening the gate the chain is wound around the post, raising the gate about eight inches. It will close by its own weight. The hinges are cheaply and easily made and attached, using only two small bolts on each. If people will adopt this hinge and method of swinging a gate, they will have no further trouble by having gates left open. I have used three now for four years and have had no trouble. Before it was nearly impossible for me to keep them closed. The gate is suspended by the chain, and the brace at A is for the purpose of letting the weight come on all four slats and should be about 18 inches from the rear of the gate.—Cor. Farm and Ranch.

SELF CLOSING GATE.

Live Tree Fenceposts.
The best post for a wire fence at a corner of a field or on a bluff or in a hollow is a live tree, says Alva Agee in National Stockman. Fifteen years ago I set out a few trees here and there along rough land, and since then some more have been set, and this is much cheaper and better than trying to get a solid post set in rocky ground. In a depression crossed by wire a tree is surer than an anchored post. I should not want a great number of trees along the line on account of the extra amount of shade, but it is a good idea to set them wherever one sees that they will serve a good purpose. Too often such work is put off because the pay seems far in the future, but the trees can be used in a very few years if the wire is stapled to a stake that is tied to the tree.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from Pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Dr. G. S. Darling's and Jas. E. Dillon's drug store.

Morning Glories For Sheep Forage.
Morning glories, the annual purple flowered kind, will yield 40 tons of green feed per acre, are drought proof and highly nutritious, equal to the best clover, and can be cut, cured and thrashed. I sow them all over my farm. Sheep annihilate them. They never go to water when they can get them. They can be sown in young cultivated corn and the whole cut up and shocked. They will cut five to seven tons of dry feed per acre.—J. C. Norton, Kansas.
