Marriage and the Modern Girl

"MARRIAGE is a failure!" sighed Mrs. Smith.

"Is a failure just now," corrected Mrs. Brown.

"Humph!" ejaculated Miss Jones. Being unmarried, she had opinions of her own. "Why do girls marry then?" she asked.

"Oh, dear me, for a thousand reasons," answered Mrs. Brown briskly. "Take me, for instance. I fell in love with John at first sight. Then any number of girls marry because they consider it the proper thing to do, and they're afraid they won't have another chance, and a lot more marry because they're unhappy at home or marry because they are nagged into it and others because the poetry of the thing appeals to them."

"The poetry of marriage?"

"No, of course not! The poetry of being made love to. And there's still another class—those who get trapped into it."

"Trapped into it?"

"Oh, yes. I don't mean by others—by themselves. They form platonic friendships with uneligible young men their common sense tells them they ought not to marry. First thing they know they lose their hearts, and before they have a chance to recover they are dragged to the altar and, presto, the thing is done!"

"A GIRL MUST MAKE AN ANALYSIS OF THE MAN SHE INTENDS TO MARRY."

Miss Jones cleared her throat. "Thanks to the modern advancement of women," she remarked, "they no longer consider marriage the chief aim and end of their existence."

"Don't say a thing, my dear, about the bachelor girl," put in Mrs. Brown. "She has a pretty horrid little trick of her own. As long as she is successful she scoffs at marriage; when she becomes ill or breaks down or doesn't succeed or something or other, she falls limply into the hands of the first man."

"After all, what do you consider the best kind of marriage?"

"The best sort of marriage," mused Mrs. Brown. "Well, let me see. Yes, it's this—a blending of love and of companionship. Love there must be, but also certain tastes in common, so that life may not be too desolate when love has gone."

"But according to you, then, a girl must make an analysis of the man she intends to marry."

"The must—she does—and that's mainly the difference between the old fashioned and the modern maiden. The modern maiden is critical because she knows she has to be. She has thoughts, ideas, aspirations, of her own. She is no longer a blank page to be written upon by the man, and she must see to it that his natural bent does not clash with hers. That is why when she does choose as a rule she chooses well."

"But the papers never were so full of divorcees as now."

"True. In the old times women suffered in silence. Now they simply won't stand for what they used to. Then, too, my dear, if you study these cases you will see that the women in them as a rule belong to the old regime, the regime of the women who loved at first sight, who leaped before they looked."

"Then you don't believe in love at first sight?"

"No. The love which comes at second or even third sight is much more worth having. The love which comes after a sight of the man's finer qualities is the love to be relied upon."

"Yet you started out by saying marriage was a failure."

"True. At this particular stage of affairs it seems to be, and the reason is mainly this: Women themselves have changed, and half of them don't stop to realize it. They can't marry on sentiment alone any more now. When all the women realize this and have the courage to let their heads guide their hearts, marriage will be elevated to a happier and a nobler plane."

MAUD ROBINSON.

Dr. Mudd, Who Mended John Wilkes Booth's Broken Leg.

Mudd was a physician, and it was to his house that Booth had ridden on the night of his great crime. There his broken leg had been set, and there he had been secreted for one day. The doctor was an educated man of refined and dignified manner. He had never quite recovered from his surprise that any one should find fault with him for setting a broken bone for a stranger. He always asserted that he did not know Booth and was not aware at the time that Booth had committed a crime. But Mudd had been an ardent secessionist. He was accordingly sentenced to imprisonment for life.

It was a hard fate to be called upon for professional services by a wounded desperado and then narrowly to escape hanging for it. The trial and sentence were a terrible blow, from which Mudd never recovered. He had left a devoted wife at his home in Maryland, and his mental sufferings were so severe that he seemed always on the verge of insanity. He had at first been put to work with a wheelbarrow; but, having never done any manual labor, he was rapidly falling under the combined physical and mental strain. For this reason I directed that he be transferred to the prisoners' hospital as nurse.

There he made himself exceedingly useful, and there he might have remained had not his homesickness in an evil hour overcome his judgment. While a ship lay at the wharf he contrived to get aboard and secrete himself in the coal bunkers. He was of course discovered, and then he learned what he did not know before, that no ship was allowed to sail until it was ascertained that every prisoner was in his place. He was immediately placed in solitary confinement, where he remained several months.—McClure's Magazine.

PELLETS OF SNOW.

How They Fling and Drift in the Adirondack Region.

On a good driftmaking day in the Adirondacks the snow comes not in the star shaped flakes that look so pretty when portrayed on a page of the dictionary, but in small pellets. These pellets are in shape like tiny white footballs usually, and they come rolling and tumbling down wind as if they had been "kicked for fair" by the half-back gods of the gale. And yet while they roll and tumble and bound they find lodging places, and as the idler gazes he sees them pile up in a wall on the crest of the road cut. Higher and higher grows the pile, forming at first a vertical wall, but before this has risen three inches it is seen to overhang the gulch.

Though round and easily rolled, these pellets in some way fit to each other as bricks would, until the overhang is perhaps a fifth as great as the elevation of the wall, and then, marvelous and impossible as it would seem to the unaccustomed observer, a lip forms on the crest of the wall, and soon it begins to droop and hang down. Wider and longer it grows, farther and farther it droops, until its shape is precisely like the lip formed on a huge wave when it breaks on a shoal water beach. Lips that are ten feet wide and hang down three feet clear of all, though but six or eight inches thick where they join the chin of the wall, are not uncommon. By what magic is it that these frozen, oblong pellets that go bounding along as merrily as footballs form into such a shape as that? Of course if the storm continues a time usually comes when the lips break off because of their great weight. And then no new lip forms to replace the lost one. The snow merely drops over into the lee of the wall and gradually fills the cutting.—Scribner's.

The Rose.

At all times the rose has enjoyed peculiar favor as a sacred flower. Mohammedan tradition says that when Saladin captured Jerusalem he refused to enter the shrine of the temple which had been converted into a church by the Crusaders till the walls had been thoroughly cleansed and purified with rosewater. A similar story is told of the Church of St. Sophia, at Constantinople, when transformed from a Christian place of worship to a Mohammedan mosque. The origin of the rose, according to Moslem tradition, is that the blood of the prophet sprang into new life in this glorious crimson flower. To this day when a Turk sees a rose lying on the ground he will raise it tenderly, kiss it reverently and deposit the frail blossom in some place of safety.

Baby's Name.

"But why did you name your baby after his most disreputable ancestor?" the surprised friend asked the proud young mother.

"Well, you see I expect him to improve on the former bearer of the name. Indeed, he hardly can help it, because the ancestor was so very bad. If I had named him after the most distinguished member of the family, he might not have lived up to the name. Babies hardly ever do when they are named for great personages, as I have often noticed."—New York Press.

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

Importance of Ventilated Closets and of Airing Clothing.

A visit to a modern day nursery that is properly equipped gives a house mother many useful hints. One is the necessity to keep wearing apparel properly aired. In all well conducted nurseries the clothes taken off from the child in the morning and replaced by clean outfits provided by the institution are well shaken in the outer air, loosely folded and gathered in an open bag made of knotted cord. The bag is then hung out of the window or sometimes in large, well ventilated rooms filled with dry heat. At night when the child leaves he is dressed in these clothes thus freshened. The process is partly to guard against possible infection in the garments, but as well to air them thoroughly and get rid of the close, stuffy smell that clothing worn constantly in a tenement room, where cooking, laundry work, etc., are carried on, is sure to acquire.

Personal clothing in any home should never be shut up in hermetically sealed closets. No well trained architect now thinks of drawing a house building plan that does not provide for ventilated clothes closets. But houses built only a few years ago still have their series of stuffy little boxes, airtight when the door is shut, dark, hot, moth breeding and altogether the most undesirable receptacle for wearing apparel or bedclothing that can be imagined. Such closets may be somewhat improved by having the door panels taken out and a fine wire grating inserted that will let in air and a little light and practically keep out dust. Even then clothing kept in them should be constantly taken out to the last garment and the closet left wide open for two or three hours to the sun and air before its contents are restored.

Leather For Decoration.

It is said that leather has never been so extensively used for decorative purposes as now. For many years it was practically restricted to dining room, office and library chairs and sofas and then was seen only in its plain, unembellished form.

With the renaissance in household art that began about twenty-five years ago came a more general knowledge and appreciation of the sumptuous old Spanish and English leathers that were seen on antique furniture, and modern dealers set themselves to work to emulate their beauties if possible. As a result leather has become so beautiful that it expresses the highest thing attainable in household art in several directions.

In many cases these leathers are reproductions of the old Cordovan, so long famous, and even the softness of tone that in the Cordovan is the work of time is faithfully copied with good effect.

Many kinds of skin are used, as some are too coarse of grain to become flexible enough or to take the finish demanded for certain purposes. Cowhide could not be applied to walls and screens, but is perfectly adapted to chairs and couches. The same is true of most sheepskin, and great care is exercised in selection, before the coloring and decoration are applied.

New Wall Papers.

It is a satisfaction for the woman with a slender purse, intent upon furnishings for the city or country home, to know that the new wall paper designs in the cheaper grades are just as dainty in design and good in coloring as the more costly coverings intended for the summer cottage of fortune's favorite. Spring is the season when the wall paper manufacturers bring forth real treasures, and this year there is a fine supply on hand. Green is the favorite for the drawing room, with white second in demand, and some of the most beautiful patterns are in Louis XVI. designs on a foundation of pale green or white and occasionally rose Du Barry pink. Blue gray is a new shade of paper for staircases, while there are the loveliest of reproductions of old chintzes for bedrooms. In renovating either the city or the country home there is no excuse this season for selecting inartistic or unsuitable wall paper.

For Fairy Fingers.

One of the most effective stitches at present being employed in flax thread or silk upon cases for ties and handkerchiefs, nightgown bags, evening slipper holders, table centers and photograph frames is called the cable, which has quite the effect of ribbon embroidery and is much more quickly done.

The newest table centers are of an oblong shape and are being made of colored linen or satin. The satin ones look best edged with applique lace, while the others may be embroidered with flowers, shown conventionalized or au naturel, as is preferred.

A Great Success.

The Medical Expert—I'm sure your baby shows what our modern methods will do. Did you follow my directions?

Mother—Oh, yes. First I skimmed the milk and added two parts of hygienic water and two parts of your celebrated modifier. Then I carefully sterilized the whole.

"And then?"

"I threw it out of the window and gave the baby the cream."—Life.

Paint Economy.

The cost of a gallon of paint is not always indicated by the price of a gallon as it comes from the dealer. Some paints require oil for thinning, some won't take any, and some worse ones have oil to pour off. Every drop of oil you can add, decreases the cost per gallon to you. An Example. A customer this season added to a 5 gallon can of Sherwin-Williams Paint, one and one-half gallons of oil making the net cost of his paint, $1.40 per gallon.

Five of his most notable works appear in the Woman's Home Companion for May. Mr. W. G. Bowdoin contributes an appreciation of the artist.
Sheriff Johnson went up into the wilds of Oseoda county a few days ago to arrest Wm. Conklin, of AuSable, who is wanted on the charge of robbery. He found Conklin working on the Soloman drive, but after a hard chase from above Mio to McKinley his man finally escaped, the sheriff being unable to get even in gun shot of him.
Reports to the state board of health, by representative physicians in active practice, in different parts of the state, indicate that rheumatism, bronchitis, tonsillitis, influenza and neuralgia, in the order named, caused the most sickness in Michigan during the week ending April 19. Meningitis was reported at 7 places; whooping cough, 17; diphtheria, 17; typhoid fever, 32; scarlet fever, 85; measles, smallpox, 126; consumption, 214.
The Tower correspondent of the Cheboygan Democrat says: "The way Maurice D. Meyers made the dust fly as a vote getter, came very near making him 'it' in the race for township treasurer, and aroused the admiration of old line campaigners who willingly admit that had the contest been delayed till next spring he would undoubtedly have lugged off the red apple with ease. Up against a clean record, asking for a second and final trial in the office, it was quite remarkable that Mr. Meyers should come within seven votes of turning the trick this time."
Climate and Crop Bulletin.
U. S. Department of Agriculture, Climate and Crop Bulletin of the Weather Bureau, Michigan Section, for the week ending April 19, 1902.
The mean daily temperature was 41.4 degrees, or 1.9 below normal, the average total precipitation was 0.04 of an inch, or 0.48 of an inch below the normal, the sunshine averaged 54 per cent of the possible amount.
The weather has been cool and dry, with several frosty nights, in the central and southern counties no precipitation has occurred, while in the northern counties the showers have been scattered and very light. Freezing temperature occurred in all parts on Tuesday and Wednesday.
Weather conditions have been very favorable for field work, but much too dry for wheat, rye, pastures and meadows, wheat has made little, if any, growth during the past week, meadows and pastures are starting very slowly and need rain badly, stock is still being fed as pasturage affords no fodder as yet. The cool, dry condition of the soil has been detrimental to germination of early spring seeding, especially oats.
Plowing has advanced rapidly in all sections of the state. The seeding of oats, peas and barley has been in progress in nearly all counties, in the southern counties oat seeding is nearly completed and early potato planting has begun, plowing for corn has quite generally begun in the southern part. It is now very dry in most all localities of the lower peninsula and a warm, general rain if much needed.
Reports regarding fruit trees continue very promising, all fruit seems to be budding heavily.

SEPTEMBER 24-26.
This is the date set for the next annual fair.
The board of directors of the Iosco County Agricultural Society met at the court house in this city, last Saturday, and started the ball rolling for the next annual fair. The date set was Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 24, 25, 26.
The premium list was reviewed and improved by the addition of premiums in nearly every class. In years past many articles have been exhibited for which no premiums were given, and while it would be impossible to offer premiums on everything, the directors have added a number of articles to the list that have heretofore been exhibited and worthy of recognition.
It was voted to repair and improve the floral hall and make other improvements which are badly needed.
The officers will make every effort to make the coming fair a success, and to overcome the errors that have occurred in the past. How well they succeed, depends on the support they receive from the people of the county.
The last fair was the most successful in years, and the next may be still better, if all put their shoulder to the wheel and push.
Card of Thanks.
We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the officers and members of Baldwin Tent No. 22, Baldwin Hive No. 144, Easter Mora Hive No. 588, and all who assisted at the funeral services of our beloved husband and son, Alfred Spring.

A little hanging, just enough to rid the community of a class of degenerates and murderers that every few weeks shocks the entire state with their terrible crimes, would seem to be very appropriate at the present time. The abortionist and his principal should occupy the center of the stage at the happen matinee.
Wants to Help Others.
"I had stomach trouble all my life," says Edw. Mehler, proprietor of the Union Bottling Works, Erie, Pa., "and tried all kinds of remedies, went to several doctors and spent considerable money trying to get a moment's peace. Finally I read of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have been taking it to my great satisfaction. I never found its equal for stomach trouble and gladly recommend it in hope that I may help other sufferers." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. You don't have to diet. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Good Soil Needs Good Seed.
If we wish to attain success as farmers, we must first become acquainted with the soil and be particular as to the kind and quality of seed we intend to sow, says P. J. McGlynn in Prairie Farmer. A large number of farmers spend much of their time and money buying and planting poor seed. Many plant poor seed because they are cheap, but which oftentimes prove most expensive. Experience has taught me that the better the seed the better the crop. Great care should be given to the soil as well as to the seed. One variety of seed might do extremely well in a soil, while another of a different nature would be a complete failure under similar conditions. The cultivation of a crop is only of secondary importance in comparison to either soil or seed. Therefore it should be obvious to every one that these two particular points are of paramount importance and are worthy of much thought from those interested in agricultural pursuits. It is essential that ever farmer be thoroughly acquainted with the soil, for upon this knowledge his success largely depends, and I can truthfully say that if this particular point is carefully considered a crop could be easily expected—that is, if the season be a favorable one—and not regarded as merely a matter of chance.

Approaching the Limit.
It is often assumed that the possibilities of the expansion of the sheep industry on the ranges are almost boundless. This is not true. The limit has almost been reached without serious interference with other industries. And sheep are not going to supplant cattle and horses to a very large extent so long as prices for the latter are so favorable to the producer. Another feature of the business is worth noting, and that is the exhaustion of range pastures. The range will not support fastly increased herds or flocks. The land is pretty well occupied now; in some localities it is overstocked, and in others range grasses have so deteriorated under hard usage that they will not keep many animals. It seems that the limit of range sheep production is being approached. The sheep industry will settle down, and finally, we trust, after a few years. It has been disturbed so frequently by new developments that people expect an upheaval every decade, but a more constant production is likely to prevail before long—National Stockman and Farmer.

Corn Planting.
Many of the tests at experiment stations have shown better yields from planting moderately early rather than very early; from planting a larger number of kernels per acre than most good farmers think advisable; from planting small growing varieties in rows closer together than is best for large varieties; from giving shallow and level cultivation rather than deep and ridged cultivation; from planting rather shallow early and deeper in late planting. Other trials have seemed to show that very frequent cultivation does not repay its cost; that it is important to cultivate as soon as may be after rains; that deep cultivation while the stalks are small may be helpful if followed by shallow culture, says the agricultural column of the Hartford Times. It also adds that the farmer will be better satisfied if he tries some experiments of this kind himself and tries them more than one season that he may be sure that the change in method and not the season has changed results.

How to Use Poultry Manure.
Poultry manure is of such variable richness, owing to feed of poultry and the amount of dirt collected with it, that it is impossible to make a very definite prescription for use, but 500 to 1,000 pounds could be safely used per acre if care is taken not to manure the manure in close contact with seed, says Professor E. J. Wickson of the California experiment station. The best way to apply where no showers can be depended upon after corn is planted is to broadcast before the spring plowing. The corn will grow roots to reach it. As for using the poultry manure in a drill, it will be very troublesome and expensive to dry and grind it to sufficient fineness to work well in a drill, as commercial fertilizers do.

Hogs and Corn.
Census figures reveal that of the 62,876,000 hogs in the country in 1900, 40,474,000 were in the north central division, represented by the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas. The south central division, composed of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, had 13,047,000 of the remainder. These two divisions contain 85 per cent of all the hogs in the country, and they contain all the states that can be classed in the corn belt. Corn and hogs still go together in this country.

Value of Farm Land.
"The question is raised whether land that sells for $100 per acre can be farmed at a profit," says the Kansas Farmer. That such land is farmed at a profit is the proper answer. The further fact that good land is often farmed at a loss regardless of the selling price is not a fault of the land, but of the farmer. Many of the most profitable farms in Texas cannot be bought for less than $100 per acre, and the land is capable of earning a profit because it is worth that price.—Dallas Farm and Ranch.

Sunburned Potatoes.
Potatoes must be well covered. A potato greened from the sun may be just as good for seed, but it is not fit for the table.

The SPORTING WORLD

A Leading Catcher.
William Bergen, the star Cincinnati backstop, is a young man with a bright future. His catching is of a gilt edged order, and as a thrower he has few superiors.

Bergen is the brother of the famous catcher Bergen that died a couple of years ago, and he promises to uphold his family reputation. His throwing is chiefly marked by its rapidity of execution. He seldom fails to nail the would be base stealer at second or third, and this is due to his ability to use with effect the "snap" or wrist movement instead of drawing his hand back for a full arm sweep. In this manner Bergen saves several seconds.

Young Corbett Is Grateful.
Young Corbett is truly an appreciative youngster, and to the man whom he claims assisted him materially to win the featherweight championship he wants to make a practical acknowledgment of his good will. The man is Bill Crowley of Hartford, Conn., who managed the McGovern-Corbett fight last Thanksgiving day.

the west, unbroken and almost without a friend in the east, even to the extent of paying my fare from Denver to Hartford. As far as I am concerned, you are the only man to be considered when this match is arranged. I want you to continue my friend, to make an effort to have the bout brought off in the east, and you can depend upon it that I will not agree to have the bout take place elsewhere if I can help it."

Fitz Talks About Jeff.
When asked recently how he felt and what he thought about his chance of winning against Jeffries, Fitzsimmons said: "I feel fine just now, and with a few more weeks' work I am certain I will be as strong as a lion when I enter the ring. I am extremely confident I will beat Jeffries. I know I will have to fight the battle of my life to win, as Jeffries is a powerful man and besides has improved wonderfully in his fighting since he fought me. If I am defeated, I will have no excuse to offer and will acknowledge Jeffries the better man."

Wagner and Lafaje.
"I suppose the National league public, almost to a man, considers Hans Wagner the greatest player in the game at the present time," says McAleer. "The Teuton is certainly a rare performer, but Lafaje is his superior. I don't think baseball has ever offered a player who could tie the Frenchman. He is almost in a class by himself when it comes to hitting and fielding, and he has rare speed in getting down to first and making the circuit of the bases."

Barr and Columbin.
It is said in yachting circles that, although Charley Barr has been engaged by August Belmont to sail his seventy footer Mineola this season, it will not prevent his taking the Columbia to England in the event of J. Pierpont Morgan receiving a challenge. Mr. Belmont would at once, it is said, release the little skipper and give him a chance of again beating Sycamore or Wringe, and in their own waters.

Charter Oak Track.
Mart Demarest considers Charter Oak park at Hartford, Conn., "the finest track in the country" and would like to race Prince Alert, 2:03 1/2, against Anaconda, 2:01 1/2, or any other contestant for $5,000 to $10,000 a side. Trainer Curry, who drove Prince Alert last season after the accident to Demarest, thinks Alert has a good chance of equalling the record of Star Pointer, 1:59 1/2.

"Lanky Bob's" Gloves.
The gloves which Bob Fitzsimmons will wear in his fight against Jeffries were made in Chicago under the direction of Charles T. Essig. Fitzsimmons secures nearly all of his training paraphernalia there.
