

ABOUT BLOUSES.

Hints to the Woman Who Makes Hers at Home.

Crepe de chine of the new washable make and oriental satin can be entrusted to the laundress, and on that account they are valuable for the unlined summer silk waists, which are so cool and useful. They really wear better and are cheaper than the cheap er-muslins and pongee silks. The successful blouse must be worn over a properly made silk or satin slip. This is infinitely more becoming than the lined blouse and commends itself to practical women on account of the two being far easier to wash or clean when separate.

Another thing which should not be forgotten is that the success of the blouse depends largely upon the ad-

POINT D'ESPRIIT RUFFLE.

Justment of the same, and as an aid to this the importance of the proper kind of belt cannot be overestimated.

The long waisted girl should wear a belt which is wide in the back, and her short waisted sister should adopt the merest thread of a girdle. Soft mesh belts give an illusion of smallness to a common sense waist line. The tendency of fashion at present is to shorten the waist excessively in the back and make it correspondingly long in the front.

This charming neck ruffle is of tinted point d'esprit, with a lace edge. There are three graduated frills, which form a cape effect. The long ends reach to within a few inches of the bottom of the skirt.

SILK SUITS.

Smart Effects in Taffeta Jackets and Skirts.

Taffeta or moire silk is just now considered very smart when used for suits.

Taffeta is our old friend glace silk, but with a softer finish, which adds to its durability without destroying the bright surface. The most useful form of a taffeta suit is a well trimmed skirt and a sack bolero. The bolero must be extremely smart, with large collar, the new underfronts and undersleeves and many tabs of velvet and tiny steel or paste buttons.

A pretty taffeta skirt is made tucked on the hips, and it has a separate godet founce which is cut plain for the lining and overlaid with three founces cut in the same shape and without fullness for the top. Stitched bands of satin decorate the founces and form a border above, in which is inclosed a black gimpure lace insertion over a lining of white satin.

Another skirt model is all trimmed with bands of chantilly lace set in perpendicularly. The silk is cut out under these insertions in order to show glimpses of a white silk lining.

The sketch shows a dainty corset cover made of fine nainsook. The straps are laid in fine tucks and are bordered with tiny beadings; the rest of the corset cover is laid in squares formed by bands of insertion and filled in with tucks and embroidered wreaths.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Short Story.

"Just a short one, Uncle Vance—a weenty, teeny short one," coaxed the children. And Uncle Vance laughed.

"Well, then, just a short one, cucks," he said. "Once there was a short boy who wore very short trousers indeed. He belonged to the Short family, and everybody called him 'Shorty' for short. He went a short distance to school, and, dear me, how fond he was of his pretty, short teacher! I expect that was because she gave him short lessons and held only short sessions of school.

"Shorty liked short things—you see, it ran in the Short family—unless it was something to eat. He didn't like short pieces of shortcake. He was very fond of shortcake. Sometimes he couldn't tell which he liked best—that or his pretty, short teacher.

"One day, a short time after this short story opens, something happened. Little Shorty missed a word in his spelling class. He couldn't spell short. All the other short boys laughed, but Shorty cried.

"You must stay in at recess, I am afraid," the teacher said shortly. "Short boys must study their lessons. There is no short cut to knowledge."

"Poor little Shorty! He was short-stop on the baseball nine, and they were short of substitutes. What would they do without him? There was a short shower, and then shortly it cleared off.

"I won't cry," Shorty said. "I'll learn to spell short. I guess that's the shortest way out." And it was. So the trouble was short lived, for Shorty was not short witted. That was not one of his shortcomings. In short, he could spell even a short word if he set about it. So in short order he was out 'short stopping' a grounder from the Shortest Boy of All's bat. It takes a boy who is not short witted to play baseball, you know, and Shorty could run as easily as a deer. But he was shortsighted. That was a drawback.

"When Shorty got home from school that night, Grandmother Short was just shortening a batch of doughnuts and Mamma Short was giving Big Sister Short her lesson in shorthand. There was nobody to amuse him, so he decided to go up stairs and amuse the Short baby. He sang a short meter hymn and danced a short waisted rag dolly in short dresses up and down and round about until somebody—either he or the Short baby or the short waisted dolly—was short of breath. And that is the end of my short story," said Uncle Vance.

The children clapped their hands with delight. The oldest child said it was a splendid "short story."

"Yes," the tiniest one said gravely, "and then it was such a nice long one too!"—Annie Hamilton Donnell in Youth's Companion.

A "Pig Book."

Any clever boy or girl can make "Ye Pigge Book" of drawing paper or any unwrinkled paper about 5 by 6 inches in size and containing about fifty pages, says the Philadelphia Press. Cover it neatly with brown linen on which can be painted in black or gilt or colors fanciful designs together with a picture of a pig in the lower left hand corner.

This book can be strapped with a broad elastic or tied with ribbon, and a pencil holder of a loop of ribbon can easily be fastened to one side.

On the inside cover of the book are the directions, which must be followed accurately to see the fun: You may be clever and you may be wise. But can you draw a pig with tight shut eyes? Now, take up your pencil and try your skill! And after it sign your name with good will.

This can amuse a roomful of people, for the pig is very hard to hitch together, and the eye and the tail seldom secure their proper places.

The various results are simply side splitting.

Are All Men Murderers?

Says a student of human nature: "Half the men you meet have homicidal tendencies at times. It is the nature of man. Nothing but civilization and the self control that comes of it prevents our killing each other on slight pretexts. The so called crime waves are probably the result of general conditions that tend to throw men off their mental guard and reduce them to natural savagery."

SAVED FROM MURDER

Just as the curtain fell upon the second act I felt my arm grasped spasmodically and, turning round to my companion, Earl Hannathon, from whom the grasp proceeded, saw with surprise that a dark, angry flush was growing upon his forehead, while his usually calm eyes were lurid and blood-shot.

"Let us go home," he said hurriedly. "Let us go home at once, Arthur." And as he spoke he arose from his seat. Seeing that he was in no mood to bear questioning, I followed him in silence, and in a few minutes afterward we were in our cab, being driven rapidly toward the Astor House.

It required but few words to explain the cause of his sudden emotion.

"She was in the house," he said, "in the parquet seats, with Delavau beside her."

I had been Hannathon's groomsman on the occasion of his ill-fated marriage. Never did wedding bells chime for a nobler bridegroom, a lovelier bride. He was tall and dark, like a young Spanish hidalgo, and she, small and exquisitely beautiful, a peerless English girl, with a face that came nearer to my conception of an angel's than anything which I had ever before seen in nature.

It is not my intention to dwell upon the painful and disgraceful details preceding and attending the divorce, which took place in less than four years after the marriage. Suffice it to say that in Martin Delavau, an old and trusted friend, Earl Hannathon found the destroyer of his honor and happiness.

A duel took place between them. Earl escaped unhurt, but Delavau received a wound which was thought at first to be mortal. He recovered, however, and in a short time after the granting of the divorce took himself off to parts unknown, accompanied by the partner of his infamy. When informed of this flight, Earl was heard to say:

"I should have shot him down without mercy and thus have saved her from further sin. Well, well, he has escaped me once. Let him ever cross my path, and I will write myself murderer in his blood."

These words recurred to me as I witnessed the smothered yet terrible wrath with which he spoke of his wife's and Delavau's presence in the theater. I forebode evil, and ere I went to rest that night my mind was fully made up to rise early upon the following morning, seek Delavau and warn him to leave the city. This I should do not from any kindly consideration toward the villain or his paramour, but to save my friend from the commission of crime.

Until the clock struck 12 Hannathon walked the floor of our room, never once looking toward me, but talking aloud in one long, passionate strain. He talked on until midnight, when I succeeded in persuading him to seek his couch. At 1 o'clock he had fallen into a troubled slumber, and my last remembrance as I, too, fell asleep was that of hearing him muttering his dishonored wife's name, coupled fiercely with that of his false friend.

He had made no threats respecting Delavau, but I felt assured that he would do him harm, and so my aforesaid resolution was carried into effect upon the ensuing morning.

I found Delavau, as I had anticipated, informed him of his danger in a few brief, cutting words and advised him to leave as speedily as possible, which he assured me, with an attempt at thanks, that he would do at once.

An unforeseen circumstance delayed my return to the Astor until 11 o'clock. I had left it at 6. I found that Earl had just risen and was making a hasty toilet.

His revolver lay upon the bureau. I took it in my hands.

"It is loaded," he said, with a strange smile.

"When did you load it?" I asked.

"A few minutes ago."

I did not ask for whom he had intended its contents. I knew that full well.

"Earl," said I, looking him steadily in the eyes, "you may be angry with me now, but at some future day you will thank me for what I have done. I have seen Delavau and warned him. He is by this time many miles away from New York."

A storm of curses burst from his lips, but at 12 o'clock he had cooled down sufficiently to eat his late breakfast with satisfaction and appetite.

It is worthy of note that upon the evening of this day he was presented to the young girl who eventually became his wife, brightening his shadowed heart with the gladness of a second love.

Thus my ruse had a double success—that of preventing a murder and being instrumental in securing Earl's lifelong happiness.

His gratitude to me is boundless. His firstborn bears my name, and my place at his table is always that of the honored guest.

Nearly a year ago I pointed out to him the notice of his first wife's death in one of the great western cities.

His eyes grew filmy as he muttered: "It is better so, better so. God have mercy upon her soul!"

A Pupil of Sousa.

One morning after the band organs got hold of his "Washington Post March" John Philip Sousa ran across an Irishman playing the march at a dirgelike pace, which set his teeth on edge. Snatching the handle of the organ away from him, Sousa exclaimed angrily: "My heavens, man! Why don't you play it with a little energy? There's nobody dead on this block!" The Irishman stood by, open eyed with wonder, as Sousa dashed through the measures of the march at a rattling pace. "And who are you anyhow?" he exclaimed at length. "I am Mr. Sousa," explained the bandmaster. "I composed that march. Don't mind my giving you a friendly pointer." The Irishman retired with his features wreathed in smiles.

"WHY DON'T YOU PLAY IT WITH A LITTLE ENERGY?"

Next morning an enormous placard appeared about his neck. It was printed in red ink and ran as follows: "A pupil of Sousa."—Chicago News.

A Real Friend.

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines to no avail. One of my friends persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave me immediate relief. I can eat almost anything I want now and my digestion is good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure stomach trouble by dieting. That only further weakens the system. You need wholesome, strengthening food. Kodol enables you to assimilate what you eat by digesting it without the stomach's aid.

John Love drove over to Whittemore Tuesday.

The Baptist church is being repapered and painted.

Otto Summerville paid us a short visit last Saturday.

N. C. Hartingh, of Tawas City, was in town Wednesday.

S. B. Yawger has commenced work on his new residence.

Elmer Odell, of Siloam, is loading lumber here this week.

The loading of ties has been suspended for want of men.

Oliver Ferris and wife spent Sunday with friends at Whittemore.

A number from here attended the dance at Joe Lindsey's Monday evening.

Miss Brookway, our popular school teacher, spent Decoration day at Oscoda.

Rev. Pearson, of Tawas City, filled the pulpit at the Baptist church last Sunday.

John Love's team made a lively runaway last Friday, but did very little damage.

Miss Minnie Mosier has recovered from a severe illness and is again seen in our village.

Fred Humphry is slowly recovering from a lingering illness, but is yet in very poor health.

A. H. Phinney, of Turner, spent a few days here this week, looking after his land interests.

Miss Ollie Graves returned to Saginaw last Saturday, after a weeks visit at Homer Smith's.

Miss LaClare is assisting Mrs. Harry Mansfield attend to the many patrons at the Mansfield hotel.

H. S. has had the doctor remove the lint from his teeth, and says he won't "chew the rag" any more.

James Daily has added bicycle repairing to his blacksmith business, and is kept very busy these days.

C. Southerby arrived from Flint last Saturday, with a fine colt. He rode the entire distance on horseback.

The family of L. E. Seymore have arrived from Ohio, and are located on their farm, one mile north of town.

Robert Stevens was confined to the house a few days this week as the result of a horse stepping on his foot.

Dick Weisluhn is building an addition to his hotel. Homer Smith is also giving the house a coat of paint.

John Herford, of Whittemore, performed a very successful operation on a horse owned by Mr. Grim, which will save the animal's life.

Hale is going to celebrate the 4th in grand style this year, and as we always have a good time, we expect the largest crowd that ever helped us make the eagle scream.

We don't claim to have city airs, but we do know positively that we have the best town in Iosco county. Esmond & Nunn employ 12 men, R. H. Boyer 6, A. Soper 4, and Fred E. Hess 9, in the lumber business alone.

There is talk of a new saw, planing and flouring mill being built in our village, backed by Alva Wood, of East Tawas. We hope to see the project successfully carried out as it is a much needed industry, and would no doubt prove a paying investment.

RENO RUMBLINGS.

Jim Robinson is again at Odell's store this week.

Noble Wilkins, of Prescott, spent one day last week with E. E. Odell.

Randall and Odell, with a crew of men, are loading lumber on cars near Hale.

John Metcalfe met with an accident last Friday. His hand came in contact with an axe.

A. W. Decker has accepted a position at Cheboygan and left for there last Monday evening.

The last prayer meeting at the Baptist church was attended by only seven persons. Is that the number of Christians in Reno?

Rev. John Pearson will assist at the dedication of the Reno church on Tuesday, also at the one in Hale on Wednesday of this week.

SHERMAN SHOTS.

Plenty of rain, thank you.

Geo. Bessie drove to Tawas City Tuesday.

The products from two shingle mills are being shipped from our station.

Mrs. Geo. Faw, of East Tawas, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Jas. Rhodes.

Misses Kate Pavelock and Josephine Schneider visited Tawas friends last Sunday.

Mesdames Pringle and Smith attended the decoration day exercises at AuSable.

G. A. Pringle leaves Friday for Marquette to attend the K. O. T. M. convention.

Our township was visited by a severe windstorm on Monday last. Trees were blown around promiscuously and considerable damage was done to out-buildings.

The R. R. Co., has lifted the quarantine against our township. Now if they would have their south-bound excursion trains stop here occasionally we would like their way better.

Women's Clubhouses.

The first clubhouse ever erected for women was built at Grand Rapids, Mich., the cornerstone being laid July 31, 1887. Indianapolis seconded the movement with the Propyleum, built in 1888. Following these two pioneers in quick succession came the Athenium, built by the Woman's club of Milwaukee, and the clubhouse of the New Century Club of Pennsylvania, which was dedicated in 1892. Since that year women's clubhouses have increased rapidly all over the country, some of them costing hundreds of thousands of dollars.

He Chose to Be the Littlest.

One day mamma told Milton that he was older than the baby and must let the baby have his toys if he wanted them because the baby was the littlest. Milton was very good and went in search of other amusements all day.

The next morning we heard a cry from the children, and, going to find the cause, Milton was found endeavoring to collect all the toys in the room and at the same time keep the baby away from them. Upon inquiring the trouble, Milton said:

"I let him have my toys and be the littlest yesterday, and now I'm going to be littlest today."

Raising and Trading Animals.

Hudy Burditt, Buel, Tex., is a fifteen-year-old trader. Two years ago he picked cotton in spare hours, and with the money earned he clothed himself and saved $3. With this $3 he bought a pig, kept her for some time and sold her for $11. He worked on holidays and Saturdays and saved $4, which added to the $11, gave him enough to buy a Jersey heifer. In a year he sold her and a calf for $40. He then bought a four-months-old colt for $5 and sold her later for $15. He now has $55 loaned at 10 per cent interest.

A Question.

They say a tiny little stream Helps make the mighty sea. But do you think that Lincoln once Was just a boy like me?

I know a small black apple seed Can make a tall, straight tree, But do you think a Washington Can be made out of me?

And if I grow and grow and grow And do the best I can, Do you suppose I'll ever make A celebrated man?

A representative of the Herald spent a day driving through Plainfield township during the past week, and found a decided and gratifying change taking place in that locality. Nearly four thousand acres of wild land have been purchased by settlers during the past year, and many people from West Virginia, Ohio and Indiana have located near Hale village. That more will follow there is no doubt, as there is yet ten thousand acres of fine farming land for sale in that township, at from five to seven dollars per acre. The indications are that Hale village and Plainfield township have a prosperous future before them.

A Nerry Thief.

On Thursday of last week a man giving his name as Joseph W. Holler, of Hillman, accompanied by his wife and a nephew came into East Tawas in a covered wagon. They claimed to be on their way to California, and were making it a profitable by giving a show and lecture at the different towns on the route. It seems that a two-year-old colt belonging to Eugene Sauve, of Hale, had strayed away and had been put in the pound at East Tawas, and was advertised. Holler seeing the notice, went to the pound and claimed the colt, paid the charges and took it away. In the meantime Sauve had learned the whereabouts of the colt and came down after it but found it was gone. He swore out a warrant for Holler and Sheriff Johnson overtook the outfit at Pine River Monday and arrested his man. He was arraigned before Justice Kelly and his examination set for Thursday. The prisoner later admitted his guilt and was bound over to the circuit court.

It was also developed that he had stolen a valuable dog belonging to Fred Yockey, of AuSable.

Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels, means a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such symptoms. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. "I have taken DeWitt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years," writes R. M. Everly, Moundsville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried."
