TO THE GRADUATES.

An Able Address to the Class of '02, by Rev. E. King last Sunday Evening.

The Methodist church was filled to its utmost capacity last Sunday evening on the occasion of the baccalaureate service for the 1902 graduating class of the Tawas City high school. The singing was in charge of Rev. E. O. Sutherland, and the quartette rendered several splendid selections. The address was given by Rev. E. King, and his theme was, "Making the Most of One's Self." For his text he chose the words of Eph. 4:13, "Till we come unto the perfect man." In part he spoke as follows:

It is very fitting, indeed, that the occasion of the graduation of this class be marked in such a manner, and that by this gathering the friends of these young people express their commendation of the labors of these six graduates and their teachers.

There is nothing which makes men rich and strong but that which they carry inside of them—wealth is of the heart and not of the hand. Various methods of computing a man's value have been used. One is to estimate the cost of the individual to the family and the community. The other is of computing his value according to his productiveness. Statisticians estimate that the average wage-earner receives about $600 a year and thus at a 6 per cent rate of interest is equivalent to a $10,000 plant.

The value of brains can be seen from man's ability to convert raw material into articles of high commercial value. When the mechanic causes the ton of pig iron, worth $20, to be made into horseshoes at $90, or into knife blades at $200, or watchsprings at $1,000, in the latter instance brains are valued at $980. Or when Millet buys brush, canvas and colors at the equivalent of 60 cents and produces the Angelus, which sold at $105,000, we conceive that wealth is not in wood, stone or raw material; but in the skill that fashions it. This ability does not come through heredity, nor idleness, but the schooling of monotony, arduous labor and effort. If we could converse with the Santa Barbara vine and ask how it manages to produce a half ton of delicious sweet juice in a single summer it would tell us because for two hundred summers it has been storing in trunk and branch.

Thus men and women of greatness were not made so in a day; but through patience and diligence have come to their present state in life. But not only has the man body and mind value, but also soul value. To but few is this fact comprehensible and only he, who by a careful tracing of the process of man's redemption from man's earliest history, appreciates this truth. If man's redemption from sin required the best thing or person ever given to the world it surely was no idle thing to redeem.

Thus to every man is entrusted soul, mind and body. These are not for keeping but for use and development. Never in the world's history was there such a time of privilege and corresponding responsibility. We are decidedly different than when Columbus found us. The opening days of the new century see men traveling to and fro with speed surpassing the flight of the bird, hear men's voices flash around the world with the rapidity of the lightning, and behold men harnessing the forces of nature heretofore unfriendly but now servants.

In the midst of such conditions these young people stand looking toward the threshold of life and usefulness, and fittingly ask, "How shall I make the most of myself?" Like the great locomotive standing on the turntable waiting to be adjusted to enter one of the several tracks surrounding it to carry its freight of rich ores from the north, luscious fruits from the tropics, grain or cattle from the west or merchandise of the east; they stand before many opening paths of usefulness by their own volition to choose the most suitable. That they may accomplish the most in life it is necessary for them to observe the necessity of several things.

First—Use what you have. While men are waiting for new kingdoms to conquer there are realms at their feet untouched. The man of average intelligence and wealth is not particularly in need of greater knowledge or riches but rather sense to appropriate and use what he has. It is not so much the need of that which men have not, as lack of contentment with that which men have, that makes them unhappy.

The story of the discovery of the famous Goleonda diamond mines illustrates the mistake of many persons. Ali Hafed sat with his wife looking out on the river that flowed past their farm. Soon the children approached accompanied by a stranger carrying in his hand a diamond. He told the owner of the property the value of the gem and that a mine of diamonds would buy him a kingdom. Said he 'diamonds are much more valuable than copper, silver or gold.' That night Ali Hafed retired a poor man for discontent is poverty. He sold out to the stranger to find diamonds. Years later he returned to find that his family had died in want and penury. He also found that the peasant who had bought his farm was now a prince for he had found many diamonds in the white sand in the stream at the foot of the garden. Had Ali Hafed dug in his own garden, instead of starvation, poverty and a broken heart, he would have owned gems that made nations rich.

This legend reminds us how youth constantly throws away its opportunities. Each day some man exchanges a farm in Pennsylvania for the prairies of Dakota only to find that the hills he despised have developed oil that made his successor rich.

Use your talents for blessing others and despise not the smallest service. Not only do others receive benefit from our sacrifice and service, but the reflex action is always good. The Russian reformer and novelist who said to the hungry beggar in reply to a request for alms when he had turned his pockets inside out to find he had none, "My brother do not be angry with me, but I have not a penny," received a smile as recompense for his sympathy. Asking why the poor man seemed so pleased he said "But you called me brother." An hour later the lips that spoke the words were blue with cold and the face frozen white in death. This is the use we can make of the opportunities which we have. Humanity needs sympathy more than any other thing.

Second—Have right and high ideals. A purpose in life is like the mark to a sportsman or a port to the sailor. Our ideals cannot be too high. The image of Offero in Cologne Cathedral is of one who would serve the strongest master he could find. He first attached himself to a king, then hearing the name of Satan mentioned at a banquet, inquiring he was told by the king that Satan was stronger than he. He immediately set about to serve Satan and was not long in finding his master. One day proceeding along a highway they came to where the roads forked and where stood a crucifix. There Satan fell trembling and refused to pass on. "Why are you afraid?" asked Offero. "Because this represents Christ, who rules in Heaven and suffered on the cross for men and He is mightier than I." So Offero gave himself to the service of Christ and never needed to change masters again for he had found Him who is Lord over all. So in serving this strongest and best of masters guidance will be given in the formation of right and true ideals.

Therefore know His life, the spirit of His mission and serve Him. You shall not always attain that which you desire, but your failure is no excuse for low living. For the day when neighbors carry out of your house some deceased friend is not nearly so sad as when man breaks troth with the soul's ideal. The sadness that gathered around the latter days of Daniel Webster was not caused by his failure to receive the nomination for president, but from the fact that he sinned against his better self and conscience, and God. The speech he made favoring sending the escaped slaves back to their masters in the South was against his conviction, yet done with a view to becoming the president of this great republic. The consciousness of having done our duty will sustain us under any sorrow.

Third—Take your place as a citizen in the community. Not everyone who is a voter is a true citizen. Sometimes a whole ballot-box full of voters' tickets does not contain the common sense of the days of Hamilton. It is not the aggregation of seventy-five millions of the United States population that gives her value as a nation. It is the government and worth given by the gems of humanity—great, good men—that we are proud to be called fellow-citizens of. We need men and women—not those things going about dressed as human beings, who constantly compromise with evil. Devilry cannot be overcome by diplomacy. Men and women of integrity can have but one attitude toward corruption, drunkenness and gilded iniquity—that of uncompromising hostility. No man has a right to be friends with iniquity. In a wicked world the only people who are justified in peaceable living are the people in grave yards. For a man to so live that his friends may truthfully inscribe on his tombstone, "He never had an enemy," is for him to be eternally disgraced, for he had better long before have been dead. In an age and land like ours only men of mush and moonshine can be friends with everybody. Our nation has loved not wisely but too well. Men want artists, not boot-blacks, to paint their pictures; architects, not chimney-sweeps, to build their houses; yet when they have lined their streets and avenues with factories, beautiful homes and trees, they turn to the saloon-keeper to govern their city. It is like passing Gladstone by and asking the African ape to advise and speak instead.

Entering the sculptor's studio we see many block of marble deserted by the artist because in this one there is a flaw, or in that a color mark, making it defective. Looking out upon the world are specimens of humanity in abundance, abandoned by their fellows because besotted and sinful. Christ is not known ever to have deserted any of such; but binds up the broken hearted and lifts men heavenward. We are here to repeat Christ's life. He is here to partnership with men so that they may make the most of themselves and help them till they come unto the perfect man. When we grow tired and discouraged he adds the necessary touches to life's picture to make it perfect. Then one day the scene occurring in the Sistine Chapel shall be repeated in our lives. After many days of wearisome labor Michael Angelo finished one of his masterpieces, but the ropes, litter and scaffolding still obscured the view. These were removed and men beheld the glory of angels and seraphs faces. This but suggests how that some day death shall remove life's scaffolding and set forever in the sunlight that structure built of acts and thoughts, the stately mansion reared in the soul, the building not made with hands, the character, eternal in the heavens.

Spring Fever.

Spring fever is another name for biliousness. It is more serious than most people think. A torpid liver and inactive bowels, means a poisoned system. If neglected, serious illness may follow such symptoms. De Witt's Little Early Risers remove all danger by stimulating the liver, opening the bowels and cleansing the system of impurities. Safe pills. "I have taken De Witt's Little Early Risers for torpid liver every spring for years," writes R. M. Everly, Moundsville, W. Va. "They do me more good than anything I have ever tried."

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Favors a Boer Colony.

Among the Cape Colony Boers there is reluctance to accept the terms of the peace settlement and return to their old homes. The Cape Colonyites assisted the South African Boers in their war against England, and as the British government proposes rather severe treatment for these men, who were subjects of the crown, there is a movement on foot to establish colonies in other lands where they may make a new start. Many of the Cape Colony Boers are now in Portugal, where they have been awaiting developments, and some of them are at present in this country. Among the latter is W. D. Snyman, who fought with the Boers as a commandant until near the close of the war. Mr. Snyman says that if proper encouragement is received colonies of Boers will be established in some of the western states and territories of the United States. He thinks this is the best country for them and also affirms that the Cape Colony Boers would make good citizens of this country and that "no one would have occasion to be ashamed of them."

William's Joke.

An amusing story is going the rounds in artistic circles in Berlin about the German emperor. A certain portrait painter had executed a remarkably good portrait of his own little son, representing the latter as sitting on his mother's lap, very much the same as the child in the painting by Rubens. Every one admired the portrait immensely. Not so the little boy, however, who was teased so much by his school-fellows for being painted "with nothing on" that he came crying to his father and besought him, with many sobs, to paint a shirt on to him. The painter was so tickled at this that he told the story to the emperor one day while his majesty was paying a visit to the studio. The kaiser was extremely amused and when giving instructions about a portrait of himself said, "But not in your little son's costume."

A Shrewd Woman.

Stories told of Mme. Humbert, one of the pair of French swindlers who borrowed $10,000,000 on a mythical inheritance, make her out a most extraordinary woman. One story tells of how she outwitted a sheriff's officer who called upon her with a seizer warrant in behalf of a pressing creditor. Mme. Humbert was very gracious to the officer and offered him a pearl necklace worth 150,000 francs in satisfaction of the claim. It was 5:30 p. m., and the legal day in France expires at 6 p. m. To gain time Mme. Humbert fastened the necklace around her neck that the officer might "see how well it looks upon a woman." Then by the merest accident she snapped one of the threads, and the beautiful pearls were sent rolling over the floor in every direction. While she assisted the officer in securing the scattered pearls she watched the clock. As they arose from the search the clock struck 6. On madame's face the amiable expression gave way to a look of triumph as she said: "Monsieur, it has struck 6. The legal hour is past, and I shall feel obliged if you will take your departure." That night Mme. Humbert left France, and the beautiful necklace went with her.

Are Your Trees.

The supreme court has decided that the shade trees in front of a man's residence belongs to him, although they may be located on public property. The case in which the decision was rendered was one in which a property owner sued a telephone company for cutting off the limbs of the trees. Under this decision house movers, telephone and telegraph companies, etc., who so ruthlessly lop off great branches are liable to damages unless the consent of the property owners is secured.

A Paying Game.

A new swindling game has made its appearance in the southwestern part of the state, and is liable to spread. A stranger offered a farmer $7,000 for his place, and paid $25 down "to bind the bargain," and then he went away. Along came another stranger who offered $9,000 for the farm. He was told to come around in a few days. Back came the first stranger. The farmer paid him $275 to give up his option, and is now patiently waiting for the second stranger to return.

The Celebration at Alabaster.

So far as completed the arrangements for the Fourth of July celebration at Alabaster are as follows:
At 10 a. m. the calathumpian parade and base ball games, followed by a basket dinner at noon. Lunches with hot tea and coffee will be served by the ladies of the church.
At 1.30 the games and races, including wheelbarrow race, sack race, jumping contest for men and boys, running race for girls, men and boys, potato, tub and bicycle races, sledge throwing, climbing greased pole and tug of war. Prizes will be given to successful contestants.
Patriotic address by our Prosecuting Attorney, C. A. Jahraus. Rev. H. A. Sheldon and others will also speak.
At four o'clock the corner stone of the Presbyterian church will be laid by the pastor and visiting clergymen. An account of the organization, with the names of the charter members and officers of the church will be deposited and sealed in the stone. Thus religion and patriotism will be combined in this celebration, as they always should be, with a little nonsense thrown in for spice.
Refreshments of all kinds, fire works, etc., will be sold by the young people, the profits to be used in building the church.
Yachts will sail for Alabaster from Tawas City dock at 1 o'clock and will carry passengers at 25c for the round trip, the fares to be donated to the Alabaster Presbyterian church.

No Occasion For Worry.

"You won't find any beef trust at this shop," interposed the butcher blandly. "My terms are cash."

"Have you a good ear for music?" asked the inquisitive guest.
"No," answered Mr. Cumrox; "but I am not unpopular in artistic circles. My ear may be deficient, but I have a good pocketbook for music."

A Real Friend.

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines to no avail. One of my friends persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave me immediate relief. I can eat almost anything I want now and my digestion is good. I cheerfully recommend Kodol." Don't try to cure stomach trouble by dieting. That only further weakens the system. You need wholesome, strengthening food. Kodol enables you to assimilate what you eat by digesting it without the stomach's aid.
