A treatment highly recommended by a scientific magazine for poisoning from ivy is to wet a slice of bread with water, dust it with common washing soda and apply to eruption, keeping the bread wet from the outside. Half an hour of this treatment is said to be a sure cure.

Mother First of All.

Many notable women who have interested themselves in the progress of the world have still been the best of mothers in the home. A recent writer recalls certain women as examples of this truth. Victoria was not less a mother because she was a ruler. Marie Theresa was a great empress and great mother too. Julia Ward Howe has been a faultless mother as well as woman of affairs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton never failed in her motherly duties while advocating suffrage for women, nor did Lucy Stone or Mary A. Livermore. Margaret Sangster, the editor, public speaker and poet, has been a glass, as shown in figure; cut off the mother first and most of all. Genius, talent, learning, may be requisite for the paths of the outside life, increasing with their use, but character, the lasting and important thing, increases with a faithful mother until it becomes the very apotheosis of itself.

The Frenchwoman's Dressing.

The great difference in dressing in France and dressing in America is that the Frenchwoman, whose gown is her religion, will elect only for the styles, fabrics and colors which individually suit and compliment her. She never puts on a gown or selects a certain style of coiffure because her relative, her neighbor or her best friend looks charming in it. "Know thyself" is her motto, and this is why she is always and ever a pretty and interesting figure in art to study and her gowning a liberal sartorial education to those who elect for what they see is the latest fashion whether it is suited to their particular style, figure and surroundings or not. This is, of course, far from being true of all our cultured and accomplished Americans; but, taken as a nation entire, the women who are always perfectly, appropriately and artistically gowned are in coln had three sons-namely, Robert, the minority, even though they number Willie and Thomas. Neatness In Girls,

Neatness is a good thing for a girl, and if she does not learn it when young she never will. It takes a great deal more neatness to make a girl look well than it does to make a boy look passable-not because a boy, to start with, is better looking than a girl, but his clothes are of a different sort, not so many colors in them, and people do not expect a boy to look so pretty as a girl, says Woman's Life. A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty and her eyes excellent remedy for burns. Apply it | bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek and her finger ends are black with ink and her shoes are not laced or buttoned and her skirt is torn she cannot be liked. Learn to be neat, and when you have learned it will almost take care of itself.

How American Women Travel. Most American women abroad work hard. They travel in all sorts of discomfort, rising "while it is yet night," walking through miles of picture galleries, visiting ancient churches and cathedrals and "doing" all kinds of places in which they take no interest. They go to so many cities and see them so superficially that they know nothing about any of them really. How can any one know anything of a country, its people, institutions, language, art, architecture, morals, schools or anything else just by racing through it with a party of nervous, hurried strangers, each member of it tired and worn to a frazzle?-Woman's Home Companion.

Woman's Trials. Thinking of desserts and neckwear, according to one woman, is the most arduous part of the average woman's daily round of duty. The whole subject of ordering meals is wearing, but desserts are the worst. To provide variety and to please the various members of the family with the end of the dinner is a task the difficulty of which only women who have tried to live up to it can appreciate. As for neckwear, no other part of a woman's dress can give her so much concern. Being next toher face, it requires special consideration to insure its being becoming. It must always be fresh, and the style ought to be changed frequently.

Good Mousetrap.

A good mousetrap can be arranged by turning a bowl over a dinner plate with one edge lifted upon a bit of wood an inch across, about one-half of which is whittled to a point. Upon this point a bit of roasted cheese is placed, and the edge of the bowl is raised on one side and held up by the stick. As the balance is very easily disturbed, the mouse in taking off the cheese is certain to let the bowl down upon the plate in a way to imprison

The Children's Stockings.

A suggestion that any home darner may appreciate was got recently by watching a class of little girls at work at a sewing school. For the big knee | holes of children's stockings a piece of strong net was first basted over the hole, the darning then being accomplished with great neatness and strength and in a much shorter time than in any other way. The same method was applied with equal success to the mending of woven under-

Fanny Mendelssohn.

It is now known that some of Mendelssohn's "Songs Without Words" were composed by his sister, Fanny Mendelssohn. She published them under her brother's name because it was considered discreditable for a woman to compose music. This historical fact suggests one possible explanation of the scarcity of woman composers.

Have Plenty of Hot Water Bags.

We do not sufficiently appreciate hot water bags. The amount of comfort in one of them cannot be known except from actual experience. There should be if possible half a dozen bags of various sizes in the sickroom, easy of | access and ready for use.

Cheap Floor Stain.

A cheap floor stain is made by dissolving two ounces of permanganate of potash in a gallon of water. Use hot water and stir with a stick, and your stain will soon be ready for use. Apply it with a painter's brush, using two coats of the stain. (N. B.—Do not leave your brush standing in the stain or it |. will destroy it.) Next day the floor may be varnished or, better still, polished with boiled linseed oil and the third day with beeswax and turpentine. After two or three polishings the floor will be in excellent condition.

Browned Flour.

Browned flour is almost as necessary to keep on hand in the store closet as white flour. To brown put a thick layer of flour into a baking pan and place it in a hot oven. Watch it and stir with a spoon until the flour is well browned all through. When it becomes cold, put How large ought our sleeping room | It into empty preserve jars and cover | money if it fails to cure. E. W. to be? Not less than fifteen feet them closely. #### POLITICAL PALAVER.

The republican county convention, to nominate county candidates has been called to meet August 4, at the court house in this city.

The democratic county convention to elect delegates to state and district conventions will be held at the court house in this city, Monday, July 21.

Of all the dirty, mud-slinging political sheets in Michigan the Detroit Journal take the lead, and its presen campaign against mud-slinging is the most ridiculous farce it has yet perputrated on its readers.

The democrats of Michigan will make no mistake if they nominate Judge George H. Durand, of Flint, for governor. He is a man of such sterling qualities as to commend the support of all men, of all parties, who desire to see an able and honest administration of state affairs.

If the democrats of Michigan have any sense left they will nominate men for state offices who have the ability to fill the positions with credit to the state, and honor to their party. It is very evident that the people of this state are ready to oust the "machine made" administration if they are pleased the old as well the young these, ye did unto me," bestow on you given an opportunity to do so by hav- folks. The house was nicely decoring a chance to vote for men and not ated with flags and bunting while Jappoliticians.

The republican county convention for the nomination of candidates for county officials, promises to produce less excitement than any held by that party, in this county, in several years. So far as now known there will be no contest for any nomination. With the exception of County Clerk Mark, all the important officials are serving Mich. their first term, and John A. has given such satisfaction in the clerk's office that the third nomination is conceded | train.

Another politicial campaign is at hand, and we are to select officials to serve us for another two years. If we have the best interests of our state and county at heart, we will do a little thinking for ourselves between now and next November, and if we do this we will have less complaints because of incompetent and dishonest officials. Do not walk up to the poles and vote from a visit with friends south of for any man just because he is on your | Whittemore. ticket. Look up his record as a public official, if he has one. Look up his private record. Look well to his fitness for the position which he seeks. Look up his business record. A man who is dishonest in business affairs will be dishonest in public affairs. A man who cannot make a success of private busines cannot make a success of public business. A man who will use corrupt and dishonest means to secure the nomination for an office will use dishonest means to reimburse himself for the money spent in securing that nomination. Lay aside your political prejudices and exert your manhood as an American citizen, and assist in electing men and not parties to administer state affairs. Think for yourself and not as some paid "heeler" tells you. The future safety of our Nation rests with the man who votes as his honest conviction dictate and not as he is told by the political boss.

CONDENSED STORIES.

The Unkind Insinuation of Mark Twain's Jealous Acquaintance.

Mark Twain tells the following story in the North American Review: "Once was received in private audience by an emperor. Later I was telling a jealous person about it, and I could see him wince under it, see it bite, see him suffer. I revealed the whole episode to him with considerable elaboration and nice attention to detail. When I was through, he asked me what impressed me most. I said: 'His majesty's delicacy. They told me to be sure and back out from his presence and find the doorknob the best I could do. It was not allowable to face around. Now, the emperor knew it would be a difficult ordeal for me, because of lack of practice, and so when it was time to part he turned with exceeding delicacy and pretended to fumble with things on his desk, so that I could get out in my own way without his seeing me.' He struggled along inwardly for quite awhile; then he said, with the of Illinois in the Popular Science manner of a person who has to say something and hasn't anything relevant to say, You said he had a handful of special brand eigars lying on the table?' 'Yes. I never saw anything to match them.' I had him again. He had to fumble more policemen are off duty, more around in his mind as much as another minute before he could play; then he said in as mean a way as I ever heard a person say anything, 'He could have been counting the cigars, you know."

Didn't Want the Cookbook.

In the senate cloakroom a senator from the east told a funny story. He is boarding, with his wife, at an uptown apartment house. His wife is a great reader. A day or two ago she sent her nursegirl to the Congressional library with a list of three books. "Get any of these," she said to the girl, "but if all of the books are out you can bring me any good novel."

The girl went to the library. When she returned, she brought a copy of "Unleavened Bread."

"I told the fool man," explained a foothold in Russia." the girl, "that you didn't want any rookbook, because you were only industries might be developed wonboarding,"

"What did the man say?" asked the senator's wife, laughing. "He only said, 'Go along,' " replied the girl.—Washington Post.

THE GREEK IN GOTHAM.

Greece redivivus! There begins another cycle. Within the last ten years the Hellenists have driven the Romans (Italians) nearly out of the pushcart business and captured their corner fruit stands, says the New York Press. Now the "guineas" are facing another danger—the Athenian peril. Entering a palatial bootblacking parlor, I cheerfully saluted Romulus in Italian, but, lo, it was not Romulus at all, but a Greek Æneas, who had supplanted him. "Me no Ital. Me Greece!" he exclaimed. He then explained that the difference between Italian and Greek bootblacks is that the former have wooden chairs outside, while the latter have leather upholstered sofas on marble pedestals inside. His own outfit had cost $1,100. He had been in America three years, in which period he had saved $1,000 from peddling peanuts and bananas.

Weather and Morals.

Wind and storm have a great and direct influence upon morals, says Professor Dexter of the University Monthly. He has carefully tabulated a long series of experiments and finds that when the wind does not blow harder than four miles an hour children stay at home from school in three times as great numbers, errors are made by bank clerks and more people die. He discovers also that women and children are more susceptible to storm and calm than men and that fewer serious crimes are committed during calm days, and he interprets his statistics as follows: "During calms those life phenomena which are due to depleted vitality are excessive and those which are due to the excessive vitality are deficient in number."

A Joke on Lord Kelvin.

It is said that in one department of his life Lord Kelvin, the eminent English scientist who was recently in America, did not materially men have frequently proved to be poor teachers—that is, teachers of the elements of the science whereof they were masters.

On one occasion Lord Kelvin, then Professor Thomson, left Glasgow to receive the honor of knighthood. A substitute professor named Day took duty for Sir William. He amply satisfied the students. When Sir William returned as the new knight, some wag had written on the board, "Work ye while it is called the Day, for the Knight cometh, when no man can work!"

A Generous Backer.

Sarah Bernhardt is the silent partner of her niece and another young Frenchwoman in a projected millinery shop for London. The famous actress lent these two young women a good many thousand francs a couple of years since, when they opened a shop in Paris, where they recently became bankrupt. She did not scold them, however, for their bad luck, but, with a tender smile, exclaimed: "You are both pretty and winning little Parisians, the land of millions. Bravo, my our luck in London?" And she threw a bundle of banknotes into

Two Odd Ads.

OLAF F. LIEN. Another curious advertisement appeared the other day in an English paper. It was as follows:

True Hospitality. A certain amount of social intercourse is absolutely necessary for those who desire to lead happy, contented, useful lives. "But our means are so limited," says some young housekeeper, "that we cannot afford to entertain." And she is right. But there is a great difference between hospitality and entertaining. True hospitality is never ambitious of doing or having anything beyond what our means will allow. If you have a friend or a few friends in to dinner, let your menu be made up of those things that are in season, and you are sure that they will not be expensive and yet they will be good. A plain dinner well cooked is far preferable to any number of elaborate dishes badly prepared and illy served. Young married people who have just started housekeeping are not expected to entertain lavishly, but they can be hospitable and see their friends quietly without any great expense being incurred. True hospitality means the doing and giving, freely and heartily, the best we can and of the best we have, but it does not mean having shine. This was his professorial anything the size of our purse will not work at Glasgow. The greatest permit or attempting more than our household is capable of accomplishing.

Measles Causes Death.

Measles is one of the eruptive fevers usually recognized by its peculiar catarrhal symptoms and characteristic

Its specific poison or infection is produced in the rash, which, contrary to common opinion, invades the membranes of the nose, throat, lungs and bowels often more severely than the skin. It escapes first in their secretions and afterward from the eruption on the skin. The first is the most virulent and abundant and most difficult to control: the last is the least virulent and more readily destroyed.

Most people and many physicians advise "that children be permitted to catch the disease and be through with it, as the risk is slight and the mortality trifling." The time has passed to advocate the "catching" of any disease.

Neither diphtheria nor scarlet fever causes so great proportionate mortality under two and five years of age as does measles.

Lights and Small Rooms. The apparent size of a small apartment may be considerably increased by removing the chandelier and introducing side lights. In a narrow parlor, and you have become bankrupt in for example, a six arm chandelier set in its plaster medallion, the arrangement repeated perhaps in a mirror over the mantelpiece, adds very perceptibly to the furnishing of the room. Take it away, make the ceiling plain, and you have gained an effect of space that cannot be realized till the experiment is tried. Side lights are understood now to be much more artistic 'n lighting in any but very large and lofty apartments as well as more converient. A pair may be near the piano, another over a corner seat or against a bookcase, and so on, to give the light where specially needed.

The Baby's Position.

Uncomfortable positions often cause prolonged crying in healthy babies. Their stock of ignorance is exceedingly large. They will lie in a crib in a eramped, even painful, position and cry apparently for ages and yet not know enough to turn over. It is a standing rule among trained nurses when a child cries in the hospitals to turn him over to his other side, rearrange the bedclothing, pat him a moment, and it is surprising to see how often the baby drops off again into peaceful slumber.

How to Care For Pearls.

An old fashioned receipt to prevent pearls from losing their brilliancy is to put them away in a box with a piece "Yes," answered the count, "but of ash root. Wise men-in their own suppose he organizes an alphabet | estimation-will probably laugh at this advice, but it is just as well to let them laugh and not have one's beautiful jewel become dull and dead. #### Baked Bananas.

Baked bananas are nutritious food and can be eaten by those with whom the raw fruit disagrees. They are specially nice for breakfast.
