He figured out on a shingle one rainy day that he walked 362 miles in cultivating one acre of corn, and that he carried 289 gallons of swill to slop his hogs. He moved to Detroit where work was easier. After two months in that city he did some more figuring. #### THRIFTY FRENCH PEASANTS Nearly 10,000,000 Live Upon Their Own Land.

The proportion in which the occupations of French society are divided between agriculture, industrialism, the professions and the arts is natural and right. Practically half her population is immediately dependent, as is a considerably higher percentage indirectly, upon the cultivation of the soil. Above ail, nearly 10,000,000 members of families live upon their own land, and the employers are more numerous than the employed, a thing unique in the world, says the Nineteenth Century.

The salient fact in the social structure of France is that she numbers no | nold number just thirty-two today, less than 3,500,000 proprietors who are their own men, with the dignity of labor added for the most part to that of independence. #### Ownership of Street Trees.

Should street trees be owned and controlled by the city or by the abutting property owners? The weight of opinion among those entitled to speak with some authority on the question is that municipal ownership of street trees is necessary for the best results and is besides the natural condition of things. Washington city is a familiar example of a systematic and successful development of street shade trees on all the thoroughfares where trees are desirable. Street trees through private ownership are necessarily a thing of shreds and patches and subject to the caprice of uninstructed ed." owners and the barbarous butchery of tramp pruners. Nevertheless there are under private ownership some good results in wayside trees here and there, while public ownership is not always A success.

City ownership and control of trees is the best if that control is enlightened and sympathetic.-Philadelphia

High Rents In Gotham.

The wonder is how can a man do business in Broadway and expect to make a profit considering the extraordinary rents that are exacted, says the New York Press. The profits in cigars must be stupendous, for tobacconists pay more rent than liquor dealers. A cigar company has leased a lot thirtyone feet front on Broadway for $40,000 a year for twenty-one years. Not a stone's throw from the city hall is a corner shop hardly big enough to take a long breath in for which the annual rental is $11,000. For the basement beneath it, used as a restaurant, $7,000 of sixty plumes and was worn by her is paid.

The Smallest Town In the State of Massachusetts.

Gosnold, the smallest town in Massachusetts, comprises those little specks of land which, beginning at Wood's Holl, at the "shoulder" of old Cape Cod's right arm, extend seaward till they terminate in that fatal reef of the Sow and Pigs. Geographlands and their euphonius names are found in that old nursery jingle:

> Great Naushon and Nonamessett Uncatena and Weepeckets, Nashawena, Pasquanese, Cuttybunk and Penikese.

It is a remarkable fact that the smallest of Massachusetts town meetings should be on the identical spot where almost to a day 300 years ago Bartholomew Gosnold planted the first European settlement in America. When Gosnold spent the winter on Cuttyhunk, his company numbered thirty-two souls. The voters of Gossays the Boston Transcript.

Origin of the Feather Boa.

It has long been a popular impression that the feather boa originated in Paris, the birthplace of so many fascinating creations for enhancing woman's beauty.

The cradle of the feather boa; bowever, was a feather factory in Third street, in New York city, and it first saw light in 1887, when a girl employed there in sorting over a lot of plumes that had been sent back damaged strung them together for her own amusement.

A member of the firm chanced to see the fesult, pronounced it good, and the feather box was born.

The first boa sold was bought by Lillian Russell. It was pink, formed on the stage in that year .- New York Times.
