the remedy that cures a cold in one day.

Just Remember.

Every week we get called down by some one because they failed to see an item in print in which they were interested, but of which we were ignorant. We should have liked to have printed the item, and suppose we should have known all about it, at least these people think so. But did it ever occur to you that the editor is kept pretty busy at times separating the news he has gathered during the week, to find out what he shall print and what he shall not? It's a fact. You see we have to run all our news through the office fanning mill, and once in a while one of those items that are not worth telling the editor about, are so light that they get blown over with the chaff and are lost, but, it ain't really our fault.

Birds in Winter.

To see all our birds in their winter homes we should have to travel from the middle states down to the Argentine Republic. We could see a great many, though, by making a mid-winter trip to the gulf states. In Florida, for instance, we should find enormous flocks of robins whirling through the trees and alighting here and there to feed upon the berries of the chma-tree and holly. Many birds we should find only along the coast, and many others we should have to search for in the silent cypress swamps of Louisiana and Mississippi. The herons love the solitude of these swamps, where in the numerous springs and streams they find the fish and frogs on which they feed.—September Woman's Home Companion.

Weekly Bulletin.

U. S. Department of Agriculture, climate and crop bulletin of the Weather Bureau, Michigan section, for the week ending August 25, 1902.

The mean daily temperature for the week was 63.3 degrees, or 2.3 below the normal; the average total precipitation was 0.52 of an inch, or 0.02 above the normal; the sunshine averaged 60 per cent of the possible amount.

Moderately heavy showers, which were of great benefit, occurred in the Upper Peninsula and northern counties; in the central and southern counties the rainfall has been lighter; generally, the week has been too dry and cool for the maturity of fall crops. Corn, although earing nicely, remains small and has made very little growth during the week; it is so backward that it will require from three to five weeks of favorable weather without frost to mature. Late potatoes have improved, but their present condition is only fair and does not indicate good yields. Beans are setting fairly well, but the cool weather has prevented very much growth and at present the condition of the bean crop is rather poor. Sugar beets continue to do well. Buckwheat is filling nicely and looks promising.

Oats are nearly all secured in the more northerly sections and fine yields are reported from all counties. In the Upper Peninsula pastures have been improved by the showers; in the lower peninsula pasturage continues very good.

The condition of apples, pears and late peaches continues to indicate fairly good yields; plums have rotted badly and some rot is reported in grapes.

Fall plowing is general in most counties, but in spite of the heavy rains of June and July the soil is rather dry and lumpy.

His Sight Threatened.

"While picnicking last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. "He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for a while we were afraid he would lose his sight. Finally a neighbor recommended DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The first application helped him and in a few days he was as well as ever." For skin diseases, cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, insect bites, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a sure cure. Relieves piles at once. Beware of counterfeits.

The Newspaper and the Town.

The effort of any newspaper to build up a town is practically nullified unless it is backed up by the business men of the town. A stranger turns from the new columns, and if he fails to find there business cards of the merchants and professional firms he comes to the conclusion that the editor is not appreciated, in which case it is a good place to keep clear from. No town ever grew without the active assistance of its papers. Nor can papers grow, and build up their localities without the assistance of their town. Business men should realize this and remember that in lending support to their local paper they are not only building up their own business, but are helping to support that which is steadily working for the growth of the whole town.—Press and Printer.

An Able Man.

Woodbridge N. Ferris, the Democratic candidate for superintendent of public instruction, enters upon the campaign under most favorable auspices, so far as having the active and personal support of admiring friends is concerned. Hundreds of young men and women in Michigan now enjoying pleasant and lucrative positions, owe all to the kindness and generosity of Mr. Ferris. They know him not only as a thorough and energetic educator, but as one ever ready to help him who would help himself, and in the hour of their deepest despair, when for lack of funds they felt compelled to give up the struggle to gain an education that would fit them for the activities of life, Mr. Ferris promptly came to their rescue and made it possible for them to finish the work. The farmer boy in homespun receives the same care and attention at the hands of the Ferris Institute as does the city student with football hair and golf hosiery. The Democratic candidate for the important position of superintendent of public instruction believes in education that is of practical, everyday use, and should the people of Michigan choose him there will be a shaking up among the faddists and cheap politicians that now control the normal schools of the state.

There Are Others.

In an interview published in the Detroit Journal last Friday, the veteran newspaper publisher, James E. Scripps, of the Tribune, in discussing the question of his candidacy for the republican nomination for the state senate, says:

My republicanism has been questioned. It has been said that I was a mugwump. I think that is injustice. I have voted for every republican candidate for president from John C. Fremont in 1856 to Wm. McKinley. I heartily approve of President Roosevelt's policy and I am an admirer of his administration. But, aside from that, my citizenship rises above republicanism, and I never voted and never will vote for a bad man because he is a republican. As an American citizen, I claim this course is not only my right, but my absolute duty. In the coming election, state not national questions are the only issue.

"Yes, I am aware that some persons might say, if I should be a candidate, that while I was running on the republican ticket, the papers I own would be attacking other republican candidates on the ticket with me and fighting the re-election of Gov. Bliss. I think Gov. Bliss should be defeated. I think that his defeat would help the republican party. Heretofore Michigan has had excellent republican governors,—Baldwin, Bagley, Luce, Rich, Pingree—but when a party has reached such a stage that money will procure nominations, I think that that party should be defeated and be purified by its defeat. That's exactly my position.

Billions of Stamps Used.

Twenty-four billions of stamps is what the officials of the third assistant postmaster-general's office estimates will be printed for Uncle Sam during the next four years under the contract just let to the bureau of engraving and printing. This includes ordinary stamps of the various denominations, postage-due stamps, special delivery stamps, and stamps in stamp books.

The number is so great that it loses its significance to the human intelligence. The ordinary stamp is one inch in length. If all this vast number were printed in a single row on one long strip of paper, that paper tape would be more than 385,000 miles in length and would girdle the earth 15 times with something over. Stacked upon each other, these 24 billions of bits of printed paper would make a stack almost 2,000 miles high. Each of the stamps placed upon a letter of ordinary size, say, six and one-half inches in length, would pay the postage on a string of letters more than 2,500,000 miles long.

There were a few over 15,000 post-offices in 1847, when stamps were introduced. There are people yet living who remember that time. To-day there are something over 75,000 post-offices. The gross revenue of the postal department in 1847 was a little under $4,000,000; last year it was more than $111,000,000.

The department is planning to bring out a new series of stamps to be known as the issue of 1902. The head of Martha Washington will appear upon the eight-cent stamp, which will be the first instance of a woman being thus honored in our postal history.

President Harrison will appear upon the 13-cent stamp. This is a new denomination, intended to pay postage and registry fee on a foreign letter. There will be some changes in some of the other denominations, but they have not yet been determined. An effort will be made to procure better original portraits for all the heads, and it is thought by the authorities that the series will be the most artistic yet issued.

Upon each stamp the family name of the subject will be made to appear under the portraits, with the year of birth printed upon the left of the name and the year of death upon the right.—Washington cor. N. Y. Sun.

Whittemore Whittlings.

We all may hear the wedding bells ringing once more.

Belle Dunham is going to Petoskey to teach school the coming season.

C. Dillenbeck and family went to Cranberry Lake picnicing on Tuesday.

The Catholic mission in progress here was well attended and lively interest manifested.

Ed. Williams has a car load of grain drills from Cassopolis standing on the track.

The station agent reports ninety-two tickets sold at this point on Tuesday morning.

Father Golden threshes his wheat to-day. He has two large stacks grown on the Cody place.

Nearly everybody went to the picnic at Tawas Beach Tuesday, nobody staid at home worth mentioning.

William A. Speer is home from Onaway for a few days. He intends taking a team back with him.

John Mooney has had a car load of coal unloaded at the mill. He says it is impossible to get wood sufficient to keep up the steam required these days.

T. G. Leslie, Frank Earnby and the postmaster went to the lakes fishing Tuesday. We advise the Herald to reserve space for fish stories in next week's issue.

There was a heavy thunder storm here Wednesday. Lightning struck a tree near the Morgan house and Mrs. Morgan was knocked down by the bolt but fortunately no serious damage was done.

John Campbell is improving nicely and hopes to be able to open school on Tuesday next. Miss Clara Stephens expects to be on hand to take up her duties in the lower room again.

Two prominent citizens went trout fishing Saturday and the cows eat the sleeves off their coats. The coats were not on their backs however but left in the buggy. No casualties and the trout suffered but very little.

The Detroit & Mackinac Ry. will run an excursion from Bay City to Alpena Sunday August 31. Fare from the Tawas is $1.00 for round trip. Children one-half fare. Train will leave Tawas City at 9:00 a. m.

South Branch Siftings.

Dan Stewart and wife spent a few days this week at Tawas.

Bark peeling has hung on a long time this season, but is now over.

A large number of our people attended the Maccabee picnic at Tawas Beach, Tuesday.

Jerry Cox estimates that he will sell $400.00 worth of pork this fall without feeding his drove of porkers a particle of grain.

Fine crops are everywhere about us in this goodly land. Oats are an exceptionally fine crop. Henry Legacy had some heads which were 13 inches in length.

If you need a good spring wagon, one or two seated, to go to the Tawas with, see them at Jas. Murray & Co., East Tawas.

The farmers in this locality are rapidly going into the stock business, as the thousands of acres of plains and stump lands are covered with the finest growth of timothy, clover and blue joint, furnishing an inexhaustible supply of pasturage. This country cannot be beat for stock raising.

Last spring Chris Irer turned a cow and calf out and this fall he rounded up and sold the calf for $15, without a cent outlay. Joe Bell wintered 15 head of stock over last winter without feed and they were in fine shape in the spring.

BALDWIN NOTES.

Grain harvest is about completed.

Hans Carlson lost a valuable mare last Monday.

Come, Elmer, don't disappoint us about that wedding!

Nelson Johnston, Sundayed with the main division of his family in Sherman.

Peter Anderson, who is working at Anable, spent last Saturday and Sunday with his family.

The apple crop hereabouts this year is the greatest in many years, and scarcely a wormy or knotty apple to be found.

Peter Pierson and family, of Anable, spent last Saturday and Sunday at the home of his brother, Svan Pierson, in this township.

If you need a buggy or light spring wagon James Murray & Co., East Tawas, will sell you one. Cash or time.

Unless some of the boys in our neighborhood quit rubbing orchards and destroying fruit, they will spend a night in "croop" instead of the comfortable home of their father.

The yield of grain in this town will be the best in many years, and of most excellent quality, but we are nowhere as to be compared with our friends at Whittemore, as reported in last week's Herald. They simply can knock the spots off anything we can produce, but we can't believe all they say as we know something of their country.

SHERMAN SHOTS.

About 40 from here attended the Maccabee picnic Tuesday.

Earnest Anderson was caught in the sluffing at the U. S. Gypsum Co.'s mill at Alabaster, early last Monday, morning and had a very narrow escape from death. His clothes were torn from his body, but fortunately he escape with a dislocation of his right shoulder and some bad bruises. He was brought to this city and Dr. Darling dressed his injuries.

Mrs. Catherine F. Fisher, wife of Frederick E. Fisher, deputy state game warden, of Detroit, died very suddenly at the Holland hotel last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher came to East Tawas last week Wednesday, and the lady seemed to be in normal health until Saturday evening when she felt poorly. Her condition did not become critical until after breakfast Sunday, when she complained to her husband that she could not see. He immediately sent for a doctor, but her death came at 10 o'clock from acute indigestion. The deceased was 32 years of age. The remains were taken to Detroit Monday for burial.

One of the special features of the coming fair will be the county school exhibit. In place of a small cash premium as heretofore, the society has purchased two handsome silk banners, one of which will be awarded to the district or ungraded school making the best exhibit, and the other to the city school making the best exhibit. Any school winning these banners for three years become owners of same, but until won three times they can be held only from year to year and must be returned to the society before each annual fair. The banners will be handsome and should prove an inducement to every school in the county to make an exhibit.

Wanted.—Girls to work in silk factory. Good wages, permanent employment and nice, clean work. Write us for full particulars.—Belding Bros. & Co., Belding, Mich.

Julian Blair was a lawyer without practice. He had proposed for Alice Howard, but had no hope that her father would overlook his poverty.

One night while lying in a sort of delirium a man came into his room who introduced himself as a lawyer from London and told Julian that his uncle had died and left him $500,000.

"I must leave in half an hour for New York," he said, "but you may expect me in a week or so, and then the necessary arrangements will be completed for placing you in possession of your inheritance."

With this the stranger vanished, and Julian Blair, as he raised himself on his elbow and looked about the room, asked himself whether he was awake or dreaming.

A sudden drowsiness overcame him, and when he again opened his eyes it was morning.

"Was it a dream?" he cried as he dressed himself. "No. It is impossible. There is the chair the man sat in. I remember his features distinctly and every word he said and even the tone of his voice. Thank God, it was no vision! It was a reality."

Julian found after making his toilet that he was still a little feverish, with a strange fullness in his head, but a glance at the mirror showed that he was looking unusually well.

One thing startled him not a little in the course of the morning. After a brief interview with one of the bankers of the town he walked out on the street with $500 in his pocket.

A sudden doubt struck him as he reached the sidewalk. Had he made a mistake in telling the banker of his good fortune? If the whole thing was only a dream, as he sometimes suspected, he had done a very bad thing.

"Pshaw," he said to himself, "I am sick and nervous! How can it be a dream?"

By degrees his confidence was restored, and later in the day, when he saw Mr. Howard, his manner was well calculated to impress the millionaire. He told the story of his legacy, and the rich man took him by the hand and told him that no man in the wide world would suit him better as a son-in-law.

A week passed away delightfully. Blair found himself the lion of the town, but he spent most of his leisure time with his affianced.

One morning the young lawyer arose, cool and clear-headed, without a trace of fever. He looked back upon the events of the past week in amazement. He no longer had any belief in the visit of the man from London. It was a dream and nothing else.

"I am in a disgraceful fix," he groaned. "I have lied to Mr. Howard and to Alice. I have borrowed money under false pretenses. Nothing will ever convince people that I am not a swindler."

The card in Julian's hand bore the address of Henry Morely, solicitor, Middle Temple, London, and as the owner of the card was ushered into the office the young lawyer looked at him in blank surprise.

It did not take long for Mr. Morely to state his business.

"My young friend," he said rather pompously, "it is a genuine pleasure to me to be the bearer of good tidings. I have been two weeks in the country looking you up. Your uncle, John Blair, died recently in Liverpool, where he left a large estate, and there is half a million for you."

"Is it another dream?" whispered Julian.

"I don't understand," said the Englishman, somewhat mystified. "This is no dream. It is business."

Then he went on in his matter of fact way to make everything clear.

"You have never called on me before, have you?" asked Julian.

"Certainly not," replied the visitor. "I have just found you, and it was no easy matter, I can tell you."

"All of this is very hard for me to believe," replied Julian, "and it will take time to convince me of its reality."

"Well, money ought to be tangible enough," said the lawyer. "If you feel like drawing for a few thousand now, I'll arrange it for you."

Such a proposition was not to be refused, and in the course of the day Julian had $10,000 to his credit in the bank.

And then he broke down under the strain.

For long weeks he lay either unconscious or delirious, and the watchers by his bedside wondered at his talk.

When he recovered, Julian, warned by the tricks his imagination had played him, lost no time in obtaining his legacy and converting it into substantial investments.

When this was done, he led sweet Alice Howard to the altar.

Once he said to her that he was indebted to a dream for his greatest misery and his greatest happiness.

This was all that he could be induced to say.

He had passed through a terrible crisis, and during the remainder of his life his greatest desire was to forget all about it.

A Doubter.

A little boy four years old was very much taken up with his Sunday school teacher, but, returning from school the other Sunday, he went crying to his mother and told her the teacher had been telling stories.

"What has he told you, then, my darling?"

"He told us that angels watch all round our bed at night."

"So they do," was the mother's reply.

"How can they, mamma, when my side is against the wall?"

"Miss Meredith's Present." The tragic death of the novelist Paul Leicester Ford has recalled to those who knew him many anecdotes of his ways and somewhat quaint sayings.

Kate Douglas Wiggin, who was one of his most intimate friends, both of them being associated in work in the college settlement and the day nurseries, says:

"I remember when Mr. Ford first moved over to New York. Before that he had lived at his father's home in Brooklyn, where I have frequently entered the great book-lined library only to think the servant must have been mistaken who had told me that the master of the house was at work there. He was so diminutive that it did not take a very high desk to hide him completely from view. Well, when he moved over there it was Janice Meredith that had made him the money sufficient to build the house on Seventy-seventh street, and he always referred to that home as 'Miss Meredith's present to me.'"

Another of the man's queer habits was that of having three or four desks in the room where he did his writing. Whenever he grew tired of his work, or when perhaps the inspiration ceased to move him, he would get up, light a cigar, move over to some other desk and go ahead with fresh interest and success.

Grant and Pettus.

An interesting war time story is told by Senator Bacon of Georgia. It is about Senator Pettus of Alabama.

A sudden doubt struck him as he reached the sidewalk. Had he made a mistake in telling the banker of his good fortune? If the whole thing was only a dream, as he sometimes suspected, he had done a very bad thing.

"Pshaw," he said to himself, "I am sick and nervous! How can it be a dream?"

By degrees his confidence was restored, and later in the day, when he saw Mr. Howard, his manner was well calculated to impress the millionaire. He told the story of his legacy, and the rich man took him by the hand and told him that no man in the wide world would suit him better as a son-in-law.
