LAY OF THE CANDIDATE.

I sing the lay of the candidate,
The candidate who is laid
On the upper shelf by the hand of fate,
For quite a while, I'm afraid,
Oh, he was bland as the summer breeze
Ere the votes were counted out,
But now his looks would an image
freeze,
And he does not sing or shout.
Why should he shout and why should
he sing,
Or why make believe he's gay?
The voters to him didn't do a thing,
He hasn't a word to say.
Oh, the candidate, poor candidate;
Our country is surely lost,
Since he cannot guide the ship of state
That so oft is tempest-tossed.
Oh, he told us all what he would do
When our votes should him elect;
Now, voters, the question is up to you,
Why did you his plea reject?
Why did you leave the candidate out,
When you promised him your vote?
He's out, I should say, or thereabout,
A good fifty dollar note.
But it often happens so, you know,
Somebody we have to beat;
If it isn't John, or Jake, or Joe,
It is likely Bob or Pete;
But in two years, or in four at most,
He is bobbing up again;
For he's hard to lay as Banquo's ghost
And he soon forgets his pain.

TO BETTER RURAL ROADS.

Postoffice Department's Scheme For Highway Improvement.

The postoffice department has a scheme under consideration which, if adopted, will help to do away with the bad roads to be found in many parts of the country. The plan is to have inspectors appointed in the rural free delivery part of the service whose duty it shall be to determine whether the roads over which it is proposed rural carriers shall travel are fit.

At present the department is swamped with the complaints of the rural carriers about the condition of the roads over which they are expected to carry the mail, says the Kansas City Star. In parts of the country the rains have converted the country roads into seas of mud. It is next to impossible for man or beast to get through them. The department has had no way of making the road supervisors better the condition of the roads. Now it is proposed to ask congress for authority to abolish the rural routes that include parts of bad roads and not to re-establish them until they have been so repaired as to make it possible for an ordinary horse to drag an ordinary vehicle over the roadbed in the fall and spring months.

The duty of the proposed inspectors shall be to examine all the roads about which complaint is made. If they find the allegations to be true, it shall be their duty to notify the supervisor of roads for the township through which the road passes that unless it is put into condition within the fixed time the carrier service will be discontinued. There are about 14,000 rural free delivery routes and on three-fourths of them the roads are in a bad condition for about half the year.

TEACH HIGHWAY BUILDING.

Uncle Sam's Office of Public Road Inquiries.

It is now ten years since the popular demand that Uncle Sam do something to help out of the mud led to the establishment of an office of public road inquiries in the United States department of agriculture, and if the roads in most parts of the country remain bad it is not for the want of information as to how they may be improved in the best and most economical manner, for Uncle Sam's "good roads" office is a veritable "information bureau" on the subject. The work of this office was intended to be purely educational in character, but it did not stop here. The educational idea was carried further, and during the past three years the object lesson feature has assumed greater importance.

The idea as carried out is very simple. When the people of some progressive community or the authorities of some educational institution want a piece of road built to illustrate the benefits of good roads and the methods of building them, application is made to the department of agriculture, and whenever possible a government expert is sent to supervise the work. Object lesson roads have been built under government supervision in twenty states, and so great has been the demand for national aid of this kind that a large number of applications have to be refused every year because the funds appropriated by congress are insufficient to employ and pay this expense of enough experts to do the work.

It should be borne in mind that all the work of this kind done by the government is in the nature of national aid. There is therefore nothing new in principle in the bill recently introduced in congress by Colonel Brownlow of Tennessee providing for national aid of a more extensive and substantial character. It is proposed that the government shall no longer confine its assistance to educational work; that it shall furnish not only information and supervision, but financial assistance. Under certain limitations the national government will co-operate with states and counties in the improvement of the common roads, each assuming a certain proportion of the expense.

Good Roads in Politics.

The good roads question is coming more into politics than ever, says Good Roads Magazine. This is clearly seen from the late election, where in many cases it was made a party issue, and it cannot fail to have its influence in helping the movement grow and expand. It is encouraging to note that states which are woefully behind the times in the matter of roadbuilding are becoming aroused to the situation.

What Farmers Lose by Bad Roads.

Professor J. A. Holmes, state geologist of North Carolina, in discussing the item of expense chargeable to the fact of farm horses being compelled to idle when they should be profitably engaged in hauling the farm products to market on account of bad roads, places the loss due to this cause in fifty-six middle and western counties of that state at $1,000,000 per annum.

THE NEW MATERIALS.

All Sorts of Wash and Thin Silk Fabrics—Chic Spring Models.

Wash fabrics for midsummer wear are already being shown, and experienced shoppers declare that now is the time when selections should be made, as every line is complete and exclusive novelties are soon exhausted. One of the daintiest of diaphanous fabrics is a light, sheer gauze striped with mercerized lines of more solid weave, also in white. At intervals are ribbon stripes of Dresden pattern and the price is 68 cents a yard. The colors in which this last effect is obtainable include blue, pink and black and white.

Mercerized madras is one of the most serviceable materials for shirt waists, as it washes and wears very well. Nothing looks more fresh and clean than the white grounds with small mercerized stripes of self color set with tiny blocks of the same. Figures, dots or wee little squares of color in broken lines are showered over the entire surface. The price is 28 cents a yard, and the material exceptionally fine and nice. One of the best designs is a triangle of tiny dots in blue, black or red.

French canvas is a new material especially adapted for shirt waists, and has a good, strong body and smart weave. Stripes of color defined with an edge of black are alternately solid and lacy in effect. The price is 55 cents.

Oxford shirting is again to the fore and costs but 18 cents a yard. A good pattern is of tiny squares made of triple half moons centered with a dot. Mercerized chevrot is still another variety of these wash fabrics and can be recommended for shopping or walking costumes in a pretty design of broken checks. The effect is not unlike the shepherd's checks used so much last summer, but yet sufficiently different to be new—price, 39 cents a yard. This comes in different sizes and in black and white or blue and white. Large solid spots are a favorite design for plain materials, a rose silk and linen pongee being patterned with these dots in a less definite shade of the same colors and costing 18 cents. This comes in blue and other light shades as well.

Never was there a greater variety of pretty materials for simple house

dresses or dressing gowns—all wool albatross at 37½ cents a yard and the same quality of henrietta cloth at 65 cents are both good purchases and reasonable in price.

Many of the new foulards show satin stripes and figures in the same shade as the ground and forming a part of it, the patterns scattered regardless over them. However, almost all the higher priced foulards are silk finished, as it is affirmed that the satin finish will no longer be grande mode, except in the very finest quality, having been found inferior in durability when expense has had to be seriously considered.

White foulards patterned with black are again upon the summit of popularity with modish women and certainly are not to be outdone in smartness by any other combination, though next in order is that delightfully soft green known as reseda.

Most chic and beautiful is a black satin finished foulard, scattered with a round moon effect of dots in self color, which are more or less visible as the light happens to strike them. The whole fabric is then showered with tiny pin points and further embellished with undulated stripes of white in different widths. The effect is entirely unusual and remarkably good. The price is $1.75 a yard.

Vogue, the source of the foregoing item, illustrates some taking spring and summer gowns. The first figure shows a dark blue striped summer silk. The three piece skirt has a flounce laid in inverted box plaits and straps and tabs of white taffeta. The natty little shirt waist is smartened with a white taffeta box plait, stock and collar. The belt is of black patent leather. The hat black and white straw, with a bandeau of black moire ribbon.

The spotted black and white pique of the second figure has a circular skirt trimmed with two groups of wide tucks and mitered straps of white linen, a plaited flounce and inverted back. The shirt waist shows four plaits front and back, a box plait, yoke straps and belt of white linen and bishop sleeves with linen cuffs. A stock of red satin and a burnt straw outing hat trimmed with red satin give a lively touch of color to the whole.

Acid For Manicuring.

The best manicure acid is a teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cup of tepid water. This not only whitens and removes all stains from the nails, but it loosens the cuticle much better than scissors do.

There is a great deal to study in color now, and a new tone between gray and green is one charming instance of the new ideas.

A Cheeky Customer.

"I had a unique but tantalizing experience the other day," said a clerk who works in a hair store. "A man came into our place and asked to look at some false beards. Of course he was accommodated, and he spent over an hour going over the lot, trying them on and examining himself in a glass. He took up my time, and after he had examined everything in that line in the store he thanked me and said he was considering whether to raise a beard or not and wished to see how he would look in the different styles."

A Witty Retort.

As is generally the case with people who have nothing to say worth hearing, a conceited drummer talked a great deal, to the evident disgust of a number of his drummer friends who were dining at a country hotel. When cheese was served, it was of a decided "lively" brand, much to the delight of the irrepressible. He attacked it with great gusto, remarking, "I'm like Samson, slaying them by the thousand!" "Yes," replied a quick witted diner at the end of the table, "and with the same weapon too!"

An Alternative.

"Now, then," said the professor of logic, "give us an idea of your knowledge of the question in plain words." "Why—er—I'm afraid," stammered the student, "that I can't just exactly"— "Perhaps then you may give us an idea of your ignorance of it in any old words."—Philadelphia Press.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver, of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at J. E. Dillon and G. S. Darling's Drug stores.
