An Eloquent Editorial.

Recently an editorial appeared in the Cleveland Press which attracted so much attention that it was read aloud in every school room in that city by order of the board of education and it is one that might be read with good results in every school room in the land.

It was captioned "Where God Has Put the Song Birds," and was as follows:

The song birds of Ohio are to stay where God has put them, in the woods and fields. He who notes even a sparrow in its fall has not forgotten the little troubadours of the sunny skies. He has raised up an agency for their defense in their virgin sweetness—their native liberty. There is at least one statutory law in which the hand of God is visible. And it is being righteously enforced. No longer—in Northern Ohio, at least—will the hedges and trees and skies be robbed of their richest treasures to adorn human vanity.

It is a baffling psychological question why a woman wants a bird on her hat. It is a confession, carried aloft like a banner, that she needs unnatural aids to make her beautiful. For the birds adorn a woman—no woman adorns a bird. To refined minds the woman is prettier without the bird. The bird in the woman's hat is a mark of murder the most cruel and useless that the mind can conceive. And it is a mark of even more than that. It is a constant reminder that the vanity of woman can ruthlessly throttle the sweetest music that ever kissed the soul, enslave the most perfect type of freedom, mar the purest thing of beauty in the world, and then place the evidence of her heartless crimes above her brow and ask us to look and think her more beautiful.

Is it, then, to be wondered at that humanity has sickened of it, and has said through the laws and game wardens, that the song birds shall stay where God put them—in the fields and woods.

There in their native element, the song birds are man's first and holiest inspiration. They taught him his first note in music, and gave him his first dream of liberty. They are the greatest optimists in the world, teaching always cheer and hope. They croak no melancholy dirges, but sing only the songs of love and joy and praise. They bring into the heart of man naught but brightness and take from it naught but gloom.

Near to nature's heart, where men and women have souls, the song bird suggests all that is best in life or to be longed for in eternity. They whisper to the child his first message from the infinite, and carol to old age of glories beyond the vale. From dawn to night, from birth to death, they flood our days and lives with melody and cheer with inspiration.

And let them stay where God put them—in the fields and woods and in human souls!

Too True.

We do not know who the author of the following from an exchange, may be, but we do know that the item contains a great amount of truth, and applies to the conditions in this city.

One of the obnoxious features of this otherwise pleasant village is the totally unambitious character of some of its boys. Boys, who should be in school absorbing knowledge and allowing themselves to be cultivated, are lingering around corners smoking dirty, filthy cigarettes, the inhaling of which will ruin their lungs, chewing, talking in vulgar language and addressing girls in familiar language. This should be stopped. They can not be compelled to attend school after they have reached a certain age; but there is a law against public nuisances and those laws would apply well to them. This should be stopped for their own benefit. They are growing up ignorant, useless and lazy men, knowing only vice, and unfit to enjoy the liberties of our free country.

Hale Lake.

Rev. Fr. Kinney, of East Tawas, was in the village Tuesday.

N. B. Ballard was at Bay City on business Monday.

Our farmers are busy with their spring work, and report it difficult to secure sufficient help.

Hammond mill is running full time and with a full crew. A steady run is assured, which is a big help all round.

Mrs. Maurice Moore is seriously ill, her recent trip to the Saginaw hospital seems to have done her no good.

John King and W. A. Long, of Augres, are rapidly completing the carpenter work on Dr. Cowie's new home. It is a decided improvement to our village.

Frank Kelly and Miss Delia LeClair were united in marriage Tuesday, Rev. Fr. Kinney officiating. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride.

An editor in addressing a Sunday-school class the other day uttered a homely truth which is just as pertinent in Tawas as in Missouri. He said that "Fame had taken men from the forge, the plow and the carpenter's bench, but she never was known to reach over a picket-fence and snatch a dude out of a hammock."

THE PINES OF MICHIGAN.

Oh, ye giant pines of Michigan, ye tall and stately trees,
That stood upon a thousand hills, and o'er all the valleys east
Twice ten thousand flitting shadows, in the summer's cooling breeze,
We shall know no more your glory but in records of the past.

Oft beneath your shadows wandered, in the ages that are gone,
The red children of the forest, and among your branches heard
Whisperings from the Great Spirit, at the coming of the dawn,
Or at evening when the landscape was with sombre shadows blur'd.

Long ago the hills resounded with the echo of your fall,
After all the forest children had been driven far away,
And the hillsides no more echoed to the music of their call—
Ye have vanished from the landscape, and thy children, where are they?

Of thy greatness sad mementoes we on every side may see,
Where the woodman's axe did fell thee from thy lordly, high estate;
And thy gnarled and twisted rootlets speak a language strange to me
Of earth's moving panorama, and the cruelty of Fate.

Tall and stately trunks have vanished, but the palace on the deep,
As its engines churn the ocean into silver clouds of spray,
In its beams and timbers tells me, as the waves against them sweep,
That thy form and fashion perished, yet thou livest still today.

TAWAS CITY, MICH., Apr. 28, 1903.

People who believe that all deeds of heroism are confined to times of war should read Henry Irving Dodge's article on "Heroes Who Fight Fire," in the May number of the Woman's Home Companion. It will give them greater respect for the common, everyday man.

Herr Most, the anarchist, celebrated his release from Blackwell's island, by one of his usual speeches in which he characterized John Mitchell, King Edward and others as fools and knaves, and his own class as high-minded, gentle and pure people. The sooner Most gets another trip, the better it will be.

A young man recently applied to the clerk of a certain northern Michigan county for a marriage license, which was duly granted. Nothing surprising about this, but the surprise of the clerk may well be imagined when the license was returned to him, some days later and he found that the ceremony had been performed by a notary of public—an officer with no authority to perform a marriage ceremony. The parties were promptly notified and hustled around and had another ceremony.

John D. Rockefeller, his son declares, has recovered his health. The oil king's rebellious stomach has been conquered, and stewed prunes and dry toast are no longer the only articles on his bill of fare. Furthermore, hair has begun to sprout on his erstwhile shiny, and completely bald head. Most of the credit for the renewed health of Rockefeller, his son attributes to golf. California sunshine he admits may have had something to do with revivification of the Rockefeller hirsute adornment, as he played golf without any head covering, thus permitting the semi-tropic sunbeams to get in their full work as hair invigorators.—Ex.

The attraction at East Tawas opera house, Thursday, May 7, will be the "Joshua Simpkins" company. It is a strong rural comedy drama, opening with a realistic scene of rural home life, showing Skinner tavern with Uncle Josh's Wild Briar farm in the distance. The play progresses, abounding with interesting situations, until the climax is reached, in the third act, when a human being is helplessly bound to a log to be cut in twain by a mammoth buzz saw, and is only saved by the timely arrival of Uncle Josh. "Joshua Simpkins" was written with a view of keeping an audience thoroughly amused, and it fully carries out the author's intention. The plot is not allowed to interfere with the comedy parts to any extent, thus producing a play that is thrillingly interesting and said to contain many laughs.

Critical Ann Arbor has the following to say about "Joshua Simpkins": "Two large audiences attended the performance of "Joshua Simpkins" at the Athens Theatre Saturday afternoon and evening, and, judging from the laughter and applause, the play and company gave good satisfaction. Geo. Flower made a good Uncle Josh and both his singing and dancing was well received, as were also the specialties of other members of the company. The Joshua Simpkins orchestra played several standard and popular numbers and added greatly to the enjoyment of the performance.—Ann Arbor Daily Times, April 6th, 1903.
