HIS MAIDEN EFFORT.

Congressman Loud Attracts Attention by His First Speech in the House.

Although a new member, Congressman Loud created a most favorable impression by his first speech in the house, in opposition to the Cuban reciprocity bill. For the benefit of his constituents we print it in full, as follows:

Mr. Chairman, I would that it were possible for me as a new member to follow the unwritten precedent of this body, that I might remain in my seat and drink in the wisdom of those older in service. To remain silent; however, at such a time as this would be disloyal and unfaithful to those who sent me here and cowardly to my own convictions.

I represent, in Michigan, a district 200 miles in length and 100 miles in width, made up of fifteen agricultural counties. Only a few years ago the lumbering industry was paramount in this part of Michigan; but now, the timber largely removed, the settlers or farmers have taken up lands and by their industry and energy the forests have been replaced by fertile farms.

To say that our interests are now agricultural is an assertion of importance. On the walls of our magnificent Congressional Library we find many trite sayings full of thought and wisdom. Among them there is none more axiomatic than this quotation from Andrew Jackson:

The agricultural interest of the country is connected with every other, and superior in importance to them all.

There is no interest which demands more careful consideration at our hands than that of agriculture.

When, a few years ago, it was found that a new product—beet sugar—was possible to us, the republican party, quickly recognizing its importance, applied the life-giving principle of protection. The St. Louis platform of the republican party (June 18, 1896) has this declaration upon which capital could rely as a basis of investment in this sugar industry:

We condemn the present Democratic Administration for not keeping faith with the sugar products of this country. The republican party favors such protections as will lead to the production on American soil of all sugar which the American people use, and for which they pay other countries more than $100,000,000 annually.

That protection was needed there is no doubt. Tropical Cuba has the richest soil known in all the world; the sugar cane needs replanting but once in ten to fifteen years; labor is cheap and content to live in a shack or hut worth not more than $10—a laborer with clothing not exceeding a dollar in value, content to live on a little rice, lentils, salt fish, and fruit. Surely our well-housed, well-fed, well-clothed, and well-paid American laborer could not compete on even terms with such conditions as these.

The protection so promised and so given by the provisions of the Dingley bill on the instant when the republican party returned to power in 1897 has harmed no one, for sugar is as cheap to the consumer to-day as it has been on the average for the past ten years. Indeed, for the past three years granulated sugar has been one-half cent per pound cheaper than it was in the four years immediately preceding. While this protection harmed no one, it was a benefit to the thousands who entered this new field of industry. It has been thus far a grand industry for our country, for since that plank was inserted in our party platform, in 1896, we have produced at the close of this year over $16,000 tons of beet sugar, paying out in its production to American labor (at 44 cents per pound) upward of $82,250,000, which, with the cost of the 55 factories now in operation—$36,500,000—makes a total of $118,750,000, most of which has been paid out to our own farmers and to our workmen. Our present factories required 13,000 laborers to operate them, 65,000 laborers on the farms to produce the beets to run them, or a total of 78,000 laborers employed. There are a great many more farmers in the United States to be hurt than there are planters in Cuba to be benefited by this change of tariff proposed. Twenty of these factories are located in my own State of Michigan, five of them within the district which I represent.

It is difficult for the people in my district and in my state who are engaged in this industry to understand why it is necessary at this time to tamper with the protective conditions which up to this time had proved so successful not only to themselves, but to the whole country as well. Were it the Democratic party and free-trade theorists who were about to alter these successful conditions it would be easy to understand; but for this proposed violation of faith from our own party who made us such promises as those contained in the St. Louis platform, we can not discover a justifiable cause, and we protest against it.

You tell us reciprocity with Cuba is desired, and this is your idea of reciprocity? We do not believe those great statesmen of the past, James G. Blaine or William McKinley, would sanction such reciprocity as this. The foundation of the reciprocity idea as laid down by Mr. Blaine and repeated in our national platform of 1900 can not be misunderstood. "We favor the associated policy of reciprocity, so directed as to open our markets on favorable terms for what we do not ourselves produce." We do produce sugar, and we want no reciprocity which gives or intends to give aid to our Cuban competitor in this very industry which we have labored so vigorously to establish.

IS IT NECESSARY? Two years ago the reason urged for this same measure being passed was charity, for it was contended that the Cubans were in dire poverty, and their sugar industry would be surely ruined if we did not aid them by lowering our rate of duty. Charity is no longer urged; indeed; it was abandoned in the opening speech by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE]; neither is ruin to Cuban sugar interests discussed, but the cause now urged for this strange sample of reciprocity is our "duty to Cuba".

It is rumored that by some one, we know not whom, some intimation, hardly a promise, was made to Cuba.

We know of no one authorized to make either vague or definite promises binding upon this Congress or the American people. We believe that no promise by any person or persons duly authorized has ever been made to Cuba which can now be urged as a basis for a 20 per cent reduction in our import duty on sugar.

WILL IT BENEFIT CUBA?

To what extent will a 20 per cent reduction of our import duty on sugar benefit the sugar producers in Cuba? Taking our importation of sugar from Cuba last year as a basis, the 20 per cent reduction in duty will make a saving to the importer $8,073,597.97. All sugar being imported by the sugat trust, this sum of over $8,000,000 is primarily theirs, and you will have legislated this great sum safely into the capacious pockets of the sugar trust. Do you claim that the trust will advance on raw sugar in its sympathy for Cuba? It is well known to all who have heard this subject discussed that the price of raw sugar is controlled and fixed in Hamburg. From what course of reasoning are we led to expect that the sugar trust will raise the current price fixed in Hamburg? If in some mysterious way your proposed action should cause the price of raw sugar to advance, a portion of this eight millions, say one-half, may perhaps escape from the trust and arrive in Cuba. This portion of perhaps four millions will then be controlled primarily by the owners of the centrals, the Cuban manufacturers. If they advance the price of sugar or sugar cane to the estate owners, the estate owners may then get perhaps, one-half of the four millions, or $2,000,000. If the estate owner sees fit to advance the wages of his laborers a little, then the laborers of Cuba may get from this 20 per cent reduction of duty on sugar perhaps a little benefit, of say, $100,000,000, and that seems to be about all the benefit the Cubans can derive from it.

IS IT GOOD POLICY FOR US? We note that the total imports from all countries into Cuba in 1902 were $60,584,000 (381). Total imports into Cuba from United States for 1902 $25,000,000 (about 42 per cent of the whole).

If reciprocity meets all your hopes our imports into Cuba can not increase over $25,000,000, or double what they are now. The possible profit on this amount of business can not exceed $5,000,000.

To succeed the matter up, we believe: First. To obtain this $5,000,000 we will jeopardize our home sugar industry, amounting in the past year to $88,600,000 (p. 121, report 74)—475,463 tons of sugar produced in United States, at 4 cents, is $42,601,484.80; 514,000 tons from dependencies is $46,054,400; total, $88,655,884.80.

Second. We will retard the present rapid growth of our home sugar production or stop its growth completely from a lack of confidence in the proposed conditions. Business confidence is a wary bird and scares easily. You scare one and the whole flock flies away.

Third. We will lessen our United States revenues by the 20 per cent reduction in duty by over $8,000,000 on sugar, with $2,000,000 on tobacco and other imports, or a total of $10,000,000, with the probability of a loss of $1,500,000 per year additional United States revenue from alcohol now distilled from refuse of sugar factories.

As a business proposition it seems to be taking unseasonable chances to secure only $5,000,000 as a net result. The fable of the dog and the bone repeats itself. To secure a $5,000,000 bone, we lose $10,000,000 United States revenue, and perhaps a portion of all of the $88,000,000 we now have firmly in our grasp.

I do not assert that this measure will run the sugar industry of the United States, but I do know it will not help it. I know it will surely retard its growth. The beet-sugar producers of the United States believe this measure is but the entering wedge, and that further reductions in the tariff will follow later, to the complete ruin of our beet sugar industry. The building contractors for beet-sugar factory machinery, while they completed nine new factories last year, have no new orders on hand today, because of the agitation of this proposed measure.

This young and healthy industry stands as one threatened with a surgical operation. It may sound well for you spectators to assert that it will not hurt, but if no good or adequate results is expected, the patient has good reason to shrink from the cut of the knife and protest against the operation. Your assertion that the operation is for the good of the family gives us no comfort.

FINALLY, IS IT OUR DUTY? There was a time when we had a "duty to Cuba." The whole nation realized it. That duty was to free Cuba from the galling yoke of Spanish cruelty and oppression. Our nation engaged in war with Spain with no cause of our own, but solely to give freedom to others. A sacred declaration was made that we would not seek to acquire Cuban territory.

By other nations that declaration was scoffed at and ridiculed as an impossible and un-heard-of proposition. The fulfillment of that declaration the keeping our faith with and the doing of our "duty to Cuba," will be a page in our nation's history which our children will read with pride. And at what a cost was this duty performed? No one knows better, what it cost than our Chief Executive, who in leading his men up San Juan Hill was the admired and idolized soldier of that hour.

The flower of our young manhood gave their lives to the cause. Lawton, Capron, Fish, Tiffany, and hundreds more shed their blood or gave their lives to maintain our honor and to keep the trust.

Our Congress freely voted the moneys to maintain our Army and Navy, and never were war taxes more willingly paid by the people of any nation. Three hundred million dollars it cost us to keep the faith and to do our duty to Cuba.

The war over, the victory won, for a short time we acted as Cuba's guardian, purifying her cities, guarding her sanitation, and making the island indeed both healthful and attractive; and then, a stable government assured to them, we withdrew our flag and our troops, and a new nation was made by us—the Independent Republic of Cuba. If, after this blood-bought freedom and independence which we have given to Cuba, a duty still remains, I believe it to be solely a paternal duty.

If Cuba needs help as our ward, it is our duty to help her. If money is needed, Michigan will gladly pay her portion. If 20 per cent reduction in duties of $10,000,000 must be annually given, it should go in some way directly to Cuba and not be placed in the pockets of the sugar trust, as your measure in effect provides. It is with the greatest regret that I am unable to agree with the President in this measure. I am a republican; I believe in republican principles; I believe in protection to American products and to American industries; I believe in true reciprocity, but I do not believe in reciprocity that stifles the life or the growth of any American industry.

I yield to no one here present in my admiration for and loyalty to President Roosevelt. As a citizen, as a soldier, or as a president I love and respect him. I feel certain, however if he represented the Tenth district of Michigan, or any other district in which this new industry has gained a foothold, in this Fifty-eighth congress to-day he would with all his magnificent ability oppose this measure. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]
