From the Sunny South.

MALVERN, ARK., May, 24.
MR. EDITOR:—If you can spend a few moments, please invite me to a seat. Thank you, it is 11 A. M., mercury 80° on the back porch, screen-enclosed, away from sun, was 85° yesterday in the afternoon.

Cotton and corn have been needing more warmth than we have had and not quite so much wet in the river-bottoms. New potatoes and peas have come in from the garden, also reliable beets. Corn is two feet or more in height. A new grown peach pie met us at the noon-tide meal.

Two Lord's days spent with the Second Baptist church at Little Rock, made me the guest of Ex-Attorney General W. E. Atkinson, a dinner-guest with Ex-Governor J. P. Engle, at his city residence; and brought me into most pleasant contact with lawyers, teachers, doctors, one judge of the state supreme court, and others, brethren and sisters of fine culture and most devoted piety. To worship with them was delightful, to speak to them was a pleasure, so attentive and appreciative were they. They let me into touch with their hearts, as much as they could had I been born among them.

Another pleasure was mingled with those referred to. Two grand daughters of Rev. P. W. Ambler, the man who baptised me, and the purchaser of my father's farm in York state, and daughters of S. W. Ambler, who died some years since at Ithica, Mich., who was my teacher for a number of terms. One, I found the wife of a prosperous druggist. These were all esteemed members of the church being supplied. The younger sister, on the last afternoon of my stay, was united in marriage to D. J. Waterbury, now of Chicago, but until lately of Ithica, Mich. Thus this Fanny Ambler became Mrs. D. J. Waterbury, like as her aunt Frances was wedded in 1869, in the home of my boyhood, to the groom's uncle, Chester R. Waterbury, by nearly the identical formula used in this last service.

Little Rock, the capital of the state, has a population of some 50000, lying on the southern bank of the Arkansas river, it has quite a diversified surface some deep depressions and a few elevations which may be called hills. The river frontage is about six miles, depth back from the river is said to be four miles, giving to the city an area of some twenty-four square miles. When Argenta, on the northernly bank, was in the incorporation, the area was computed at thirty-six square miles. A little up stream from Argenta is a high hill which shows a face of rock toward the river. This the Indians called "Big Rock." On the summit, including a plateau of considerable size, is now a military post. The former military grounds within the city have been transformed into a city park. Time, labor and skill will give this beauty, and make it a pleasant retreat in the summer heat. A cool breeze is said to always circulate where the present army post is.

Where the city is located, a lesser rock of a like kind, shows to passers along the river or on the northernly shore. This the Indians called "Little Rock." When the city grew up, it was very naturally called by the same name. Whose lips first spoke the name is unknown.

A new state capital building is in process of erection, on a slightly elevation. Native stone will be employed. The cost is problematical. It is being built against the opposition of the present governor, over his vetoes of different measures.

A great number of Jews are in business here. They have the dry goods trade almost entirely, and are laying hold of the grocery business and other lines. They have a new temple.

There is rapid advance in its prosperity, helped forward by the incoming of northern capital, men and methods. An excellent system of electric car service is giving wide satisfaction.

But you are growing nervous, a little weary perhaps. Then I will release you, I may wish to call another day. Still it must be told you, Mrs. W. says, that we have a great profusion of the most beautiful flowers. Their tints are peculiarly rich in coloring. Please believe this, for she is not the least given to exaggeration. More roses abound here than in any other place we have known.

A confession is due you. I have a new "Oliver", it is a tricky machine, it will run words together, separate others into parts when they should remain entire, misplace letters in the most awkward way, use wrong punctuation marks, and do many other things most strange, much as though it had no care or thought or brains. Well Mr. Editor, you please supply the needed thought and brains, and bring this whatever you call it, before your readers without one error.

May you farewell 'till I see you again.
A. WATERBURY.

C. E. Convention at Lake Orion.

One of the largest gatherings of its kind in the state this year will be held at Lake Orion, Mich., from June 28 to July 1, the occasion being the biennial convention of the Michigan Christian Endeavor union. Lake Orion is Michigan's leading Christian conference resort, and the entertainment or the delegates there will devote on the Endeavorers of the First district, comprising Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and Monroe counties, who have constituted themselves hosts for the week. A rate of one fare for the round trip has been granted by the Michigan Passenger Association from all parts of the state.

The convention's first session will be held Tuesday afternoon, June 28, and in the evening addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Ernest G. Hildner of Detroit, and Dr. W. F. Wilson, of Hamilton, Ontario. During the following day speeches will be delivered by Von Oden Voght, of Boston general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, and, aside from "Father" Clark, the most prominent man in the Christian Endeavor world today, Don O. Shelton of New York, Young People's secretary of the American Missionary association; the Rev. Ernest Bourner Allen of Toledo, President F. W. Chamberlain of Detroit, the Rev. C. Jacques, of Albion, the Rev. Carl S. Jones of Chelsea and dozens of other workers who are prominent in the Michigan society.

A feature of the convention will be the large number of conferences along lines of practical work. One entire evening, that of Thursday, will be devoted to a missionary conference under the leadership of Mr. Shelton. Friday afternoon will be devoted to recreation, sports and athletics, and the convention will close Friday night with an address on "Personal Work" by Mr. Allen.

Starting Evidences.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption coughs and colds to be unequalled. A recent expression from T. J. MacFarland Bentorville, Va. serves as example. He writes: "I had bronchitis for two years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all lung and throat troubles consumption, pneumonia and grip. Guaranteed by G. S. Darling and J. E. Dillon, druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c and $1.00.

Special Notice to Teachers.

A special set of questions on the annual will be prepared for the June examination. The usual examination in "Theory and Art" will be given. Teachers should make a special preparation along this line.

Commissioner.

Adsit, of Grand Rapids, are suggesting his name in connection with the Democratic nomination for one of the places upon the supreme bench, and it is possible that it may be presented to the state convention. The convention has not yet been called and up to this time there are no candidates in the field. William G. Howard, of Kalamazoo, is being mentioned for one of the places and Geo. W. Weadock, of Saginaw, for another.

The Ideal Entertainers, now on their 6th annual tour, are to play here June 4 for the benefit of Tawas Bay Camp No. 11353, M. W. of A. Their motto is the saying of Joe Jefferson: "If a play leaves its audieezes better, happier, gentler and more alive to the tender, higher things of life, it has accomplished its best possibilities." The goal is high and any company that puts that motto on its banner and travels the same territory for six years in succession, must possess solid merit or it would have been driven from the country.

WASHINGTON LETTER

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

GREAT POWER OF COCKRAN

He Is a Giant Among Orators—Moved All Members of the House—The Leadership of Allison.

Washington.—The closing days of congress developed the fact that oratory is not dead in the house of representatives and that under proper leadership a body may be expected to assume once more the proud position it formerly held in the scheme of government. It was shown that given the occasion the floor of the house may well become the arena for dramatic scenes equal in intensity and interest to any of the great days which once made the popular branch of congress the center of attraction for those who throng the capitol.

Bourke Cockran, of course, is a giant among popular orators. It is doubtful whether in all American history there has been any man who could exceed him as an overpowering oratorical personality before a popular assembly. He is big of body, big of head, big of voice, big in magnetism, with a genius for phrase-making and a wealth of invective with which no man of the present generation can compete.

It is doubtful whether in all the history of American politics there has been a more impressive oratorical triumph than that which Cockran won in the Democratic convention of 1892 at Chicago. In that year Cockran attended the convention as a member of the Tammany delegation from New York who were bent upon defeating the nomination of Grover Cleveland, and who united in a written appeal to the delegates from other states against Cleveland's nomination on the ground that it would surely involve the loss of the Empire state to the democratic party. The convention was in continuous session in the great wigwam for hours during the day and far into the night. The rain beat upon the roof, the great crowd of 20,000 people surged and howled and altogether it was an unruly mob. The sentiment for Cleveland was dominant and the democratic managers under the lead of William C. Whitney had completed the arrangements for his nomination. For hours the most effective orators in the party had been appealing from the platform, some in favor of Cleveland, others against him, but no matter who they were or whom they favored they were drowned in the fury of the crowd. Their oratory was a voiceless pantomime. Then at three o'clock in the morning Cockran rose and plowed forward to a place on the platform. He had not been speaking two minutes before he had the great auditorium silent under the spell of his eloquence and he held a hostile audience there for an hour, while he marshaled argument after argument against the former president, who was as he described it "popular on every day except election day." Then after he had concluded his speech the convention went calmly to work and placed in nomination the man against whom he had let loose the floods of his eloquence.

Cockran in the House.

The scenes in the house during the closing days of congress were not unlike those in the Chicago wigwam in 1892. There again Cockran had a hostile and critical audience with the legislative cards stacked against him and a certainty that if ever a vote was taken any proposal which he might make would be defeated by a substantial majority. Yet again he dominated his audience by the force of his overwhelming personality and while he held them under the spell of his eloquence seemed to be carrying everything by storm. He roused cheers of frenzied enthusiasm from his democratic associates and from the galleries; and even those on the republican side of the house could hardly restrain themselves from expressions of involuntary approval.

The glamour of a dramatic occasion disappeared in the cold gray dawn of the morning after, and even some of the democratic representatives who had indulged in the most frenzied exclamations of delight began to wonder seriously what it had all been about and to recall that Bourke Cockran in the past had lent his eloquence fully as often to the opposition as to them and that he had only rarely been on the winning side. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, whose interruption of the Tammany orator was the occasion for stirring Cockran to his great burst of eloquence, is physically so inferior to the Irish leader as to make his attack seem almost ridiculous in the retrospect. He has a slender figure of medium height, a head which tips perly to the right at an angle of several degrees, and a voice which is thin and piercing almost to the point of racking the hearers' nerves. He is lacking in magnetism and in popular qualities and, though he is recognized as possessing great ability, he has never been able fully to secure the confidence even of his own political associates as a parliamentary leader. Yet in cold type his encounter with Cockran reflects no discredit on him.

How the beautiful hymn "Abide with Me" came into being is recalled by the efforts which are being made to complete the rebuilding of the Lower Brixham church, England, which was begun 30 years ago in memory of the author of the hymn, the Rev. Henry Francis Lyte. At the age of 54 he found himself doomed to die of consumption. In sorrow at having to leave his work unfinished he prayed that it might be granted to him to write something which would live to the glory of God when he was dead. His prayer was granted and he wrote "Abide with Me" on the last evening that he ever spent at Brixham, after preaching to his congregation for the last time.

When a soldier or sailor is told a gun is of a certain caliber he knows exactly what the words mean, but the average boy does not, and, therefore, when he read some time ago that the largest gun in the world had just been finished at Watervliet arsenal it is very doubtful if he was able to form any precise idea of the magnitude of the new weapon. If so, he will surely be interested in the picture which represents two children sitting in the very breach of this monstrous gun and thus shows at a glance its great dimensions. The children are nine and ten years old and there is ample room for both. Our cut is from the New York Herald.

IT'S HARDLY WORTH WHILE.

Many Women Wreck Health and Happiness in Vain Endeavor to Be Popular.

A man and a woman in the seat back of me were talking earnestly. "Yes," said the woman, "Emma only does these things for the praise she gets. She is wearing herself out working for fairs, bazars, church teas, receptions, and such things, because people tell her how smart she is, and how cleverly she manages. She needs rest a lot more than she does praise. She begins to look haggard and worn, but of course one can't tell her that she is doing all this for the sake of other people's approval, so I suppose she will go until she drops."

Yet this is what is happening around us every day. We ourselves can probably plead guilty. We cannot be sufficient unto ourselves. We are not satisfied with the approval of our conscience. We are not content to stay at home, and so manage our financial affairs that we can afford a generous contribution of money. No, that does not always attract attention enough. We must have people tell us how clever and how smart we are. Does this pay? What strength we have do we not owe to our home and our loved ones? Is it not cheaper in the end to sacrifice a little cash and save our strength, than in the end to be laid aside, a nervous wreck and a martyr to our own desire, that our left hand should know what our right hand doeth?

Of course there are exceptions to this where money is not to be had, where time is of little value, where leisure is one's stock in trade, but to the ordinary housekeeper and homemaker or a woman employed in town in an office, would it not be better to look to the future, and restrain our desire to shine? Let us carefully consider where our best energies are due, then "do our best and leave the rest."—Brown Book.

CONVENIENT HOUSE APRON.

It Enables a Housekeeper to Go from Kitchen to Parlor Without Change of Dress.

Every housekeeper thoroughly understands the value of a good, well-fitting apron as a protection to the clothing. It is almost indispensable in the kitchen, and though no longer worn as an ornament one has only to look over the assortment at a fair or bazaar to realize that the apron, if no longer the fashion, is still useful in a large variety of our modern occupations.

A busy housekeeper of this city occasionally strays from her kitchen to the sitting room, or even to the front door, wearing a simple but convenient apron which "fills the bill" better than any with which we are acquainted. Arrayed in it, and with the half sleeves which cover the lower part of the arms, she can if necessary, go into her kitchen and prepare a meal and, doffing the apron, present herself daintily and freshly dressed before her guests at the table. The apron should be made of wide goods if the following instructions are followed; otherwise it may be necessary to piece small gores on the front breadth and to allow extra for the half sleeves:

Take two full lengths of cloth, measuring from the armpits, or where the top of the bib would come, to the bottom of the dress. Cut the half sleeves (which reach from waist to but not over the elbow and have rubber bands run in top and bottom) from one length, and tear the remainder in two lengthwise. Slope the other length from the full width at the bottom to the width desired for the bib at the top, and from the gores cut the pockets and the shoulder straps and also the binding for the back breadths, which are gathered to fit the waist. The dotted lines represent two darts, which take out the fulness and shape the front.

Hem the shoulder straps and stitch them to the top of the bib, taking care to place them so that the edge of the front breadth and the strap slope the same way, so that the straps will fit well when crossed on the back. Make a buttonhole at the end of each strap and either use one large button to fasten the binding and hold the straps, or place a button about an inch from each end of the binding. Hem, and your apron is done. With the aid of the machine the work is quickly finished.

Some who have used this pattern finish round the bottom with a ruffle a quarter of a yard deep, as a protection to the bottom of the dress, the idea being that the fulness of the ruffle will catch any drops, etc., that might otherwise fall on the dress. But if the apron is made quite as long as the skirt, as it should be, this is not likely to happen.—Detroit Free Press.

cake is wanted. The acid in lemon juice sets free carbon dioxide, in a large measure, upon contact with the soda in the baking powder. It is best to restrict its use to cakes in which a close texture is desirable. Bear in mind also that cakes in which the yolks of eggs are used require less heat than cakes made with the whites of eggs, as the yolks of eggs are so rich in fat that they burn quickly.—What to Eat.

The Place to Found a Colony

Are you looking for a place to found a colony—a little haven far from the noise and bustle and nerve-racking competition of the city, where surrounded by your friends, you can put into practice the doctrines you believe in?

If you are, you should investigate Arkansas. Land is cheap there—$5 an acre and up. The soil is rich and rainfall abundant. Grapes, pers, peaches and apples grow as nowhere else. Cotton is profitable. There is money to be made in hogs and poultry. A great deal of the State is well wooded, offering a good field for small factories—spokes, hubs, wagon tongues, oars, etc. The country, especially the western half, is not very thickly settled, and so it is quite an easy matter to find a tract of land where ten, twenty or thirty families can settle in a body.

Almost all of Arkansas is—or at one time was—covered with timber. The country west of Little Rock, traversed by the Rock Island System, is hilly and broken, and for that reason is not particularly adapted for ordinary farming. The hardwood timber still stands, and, in many cases, its value is greater than the price of the land.

Lands having a southern exposure are excellent for grapes. They ripen early, and are, it is claimed, as good as any in Europe.

The Rock Island System is anxious to increase the population of Central and Western Arkansas, and will gladly render any assistance in its power to those who are interested.
