TAWAS CITY, MICH., AUG. 5, 1904.

Mrs. Miles, wife of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, died of heart disease, at West Point, N. Y., Monday night.

The Harbor Springs Republican the oldest republican paper in Emmet county has bolted the republican state ticket.

The democrats of the 29th senatorial district have nominated James R. Snody, of Onaway, for the state senate. Jim's many friends in Ioseco county will wish him success.

Suppose a newspaper man every time he hears a man criticize him or his paper in public, should retaliate by holding up to public gaze the faults and shortcomings of said fault-finder, what would be the result? The editor may not know it all, but he does not live in a community long without knowing a duceed sight more than he publishes.

"You have something in Cadillac, gentlemen, which is worth more to your city and this section of Michigan than are your climate and soil, or even your progressive industrial possessions, and that is your aggressive expression of home favor and your cordial co-operation in behalf of your city." The above extract is from a speech made by Solon Goode of the American Farmer at a smoker given him by the business men of that city. It states in a very few words the reason for some cities' rapid progress and others' decay.

The famous correspondent, James Creelman, contributes to the August Review of Reviews a character sketch of the democratic nominee for the presidency, Judge Alton B. Parker, which is not only a character sketch of the man, but a calm and impressive presentation of the democratic case. Mr. Creelman points out Judge Parker's Americanism and judicial training, and shows how, in his opinion, the democratic nominee should receive the votes of the people. The article is well illustrated with portraits of Judge Parker and his family, and his home, Rosemont, at Esopus, N. Y.

The farmers of the county should now be looking for contributions for the Ioseco county exhibit at the state fair this fall. Every farmer should contribute something. Remember this important fact: It is not the absolute quality of the article that wins in this exhibit but the quantity and if each farmer contributes something the committee will be able to arrange an exhibit of sufficient quantity and quality to land our county at the head of the list. Do your part. Further information can be had by applying to John Preston, H. L. Drake, Geo. W. Mount, L. J. Patterson, George C. Anschuetz or James A. Jackson, who compose the committee in charge.

Take Your Choice.

It is believed that all of the national conventions have been held. The American elector can take his choice of six tickets all of which are now in the field and bidding for consideration at the hands of the voters. They are:

Socialist—Eugene V. Debs and Ben Hanford, nominated at Chicago May 5.

Republican—Theodore Roosevelt and Charles W. Fairbanks, at Chicago, June 23.

Prohibition—Silas C. Swallow and George W. Carroll, at Indianapolis, June 30.

Populist—Thomas E. Watson and Thomas H. Fibles, at Springfield, Ill., July 5.

Socialist-Labor—Charles H. Corrigan and William W. Cox, at New York, July 6.

Democratic—Alton B. Parker and Henry G. Davis, at St. Louis, July 9.

Just the Spring Fever.
When all the birds are singing
Their cheerful roundelay
And everything proclaims of spring
And tells of coming May,
Oh, then the young man's fancy
Leads him of love to think;
He hums a tune and starts to spoon,
And all the neighbors wink.

Perhaps it is a microbe
That's gnawing at his heart;
A naughty germ may have a firm
Grip on some vital part.
And so he spends his money
For neckties and such trash
And takes the road for her abode
Determined to be rash.

Nor is his errand fruitless,
Nor is his welcome rude,
For in its whirl spring gets the girl
And puts her in the mood
To hear his tender message
And lead him inch by inch,
And so before he finds the dove
The wedding is a cinch.

As in the hazy twilight
He slowly seeks his rest
A heavenly peace has signed a lease
On all beneath his vest.
With joy his heart is jumping
And turning somersaults;
His brain whirrs round, for he has found
A maiden without fault.

Getting Even.
"What is your husband's politics?"
"He hasn't decided yet. When he finds out the landlord's politics it is going to be just the opposite."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Often a man is successful in keeping a diary because no burglar is foolish enough to steal it.

Naturally a grass widow wants to tie up with some one who will enable her to live in clover.

After marriage a man sometimes feels sore when he discovers that he could have secured his wife without spending half as much money on her.

In fighting with a man the bumblebee does not care if the man has the advantage of 200 pounds in weight.

What Would Life Be Without It?
Great Caesar's ghost!
It's almost
Enough to make the most conservative man
Feel like tying a can
To a trust
At this home thrust
On the part of the circus octopus.
Who wouldn't raise a fuss?
One of our natural rights,
Which our fathers sat up nights
To write into the constitution, if I am not mistaken,
Is to be taken
Away.

A royal holiday
That has been handed down from the past
Is about to be cast
Into the rubbish heap.
Truly, it's to weep.
Or to petition congress
For redress.
This cruel, grasping, unjust
Trust
In its rapacious greed
Has decreed
That we must get along without the circus parade.
This first aid
To a good time.
It is a crime,
And they should be fined
For issuing that kind
Of an order in times of peace.
Where are the police?
Life will indeed be a tame and uneventful story.

If the circus parade in all its glory,
With band and open cage and clown,
Is never more to come down
The pike.
The human race would be justified in going on a strike,
Refusing to pay a cent
For admission to the big tent
Until this cruel order is disobeyed
And they give us once more with all its blare and bands and banners our beloved circus parade.

Just Judging.
"Did you find out if the new boarder is addicted to any particular brand of breakfast food?"
"No, but from what I have seen of him I should guess wild oats would strike him."

Acted the Part.
"What part in the show does she take?"
"She must be the leading lady. See how naturally she leads that dog along."

Found Out.
The river slowly journeyed south,
And as it danced in glee
It wondered what was at its mouth.
And so it sent to sea.

Sophisticated.
"I am a little too wise to believe what any man tells me."
"Has one of them been telling you that you are good looking, dear?"

Her One Attraction.
"Did the duke marry her for her money alone?"
"He did if he was acquainted with her."

End of Bitter Fight.
"Two physicians had a long and stubborn fight with an abscess on my right lung", writes J. F. Hughes of DuPont, Ga., "and gave me up. Everybody thought my time had come. As a last resort I tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. The benefit I received was striking and I was on my feet in a few days. Now I've entirely regained my health." It conquers all coughs, colds and throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed by G. S. Darling, and J. E. Dillon, drug store. Price 50c, and $1.90. Trial bottles free.

"When you notice a man digging in the garden very slowly, stopping often to rest," says an exchange, "it is safe to say he is making flower beds for his wife, but if he is working like a Turk, and scarcely stopping to catch his breath, you can bet your life he is digging worms for bait."

An East Tawas man went home the other morning about 2 o'clock. In his arms he carried two boxes of red raspberries and his shoes. He crept softly to his room, and carefully depositing the raspberries under the bed tiptoed out to the kitchen where he guardedly chucked the shoes in the ice-box. Then he went to bed.

The D. & M. team went to AuSable last Saturday and defeated the famous Ioscos by a score of 6 to 3, in an exciting game of ball. Pitcher Norstrom pitched an exceptionally good game striking out eight of the heavy hitters of AuSable and giving no bases on balls. He received the best support. The team was accompanied by about 100 rooters from the Tawas, who gave the boys good support. Manager Ebling and the AuSable people treated the boys right, and everybody from this end of the county came home satisfied.

DREAM OF AN HOUR

Knowing that Mrs. Mallard was afflicted with a heart trouble, great care was taken to break to her as gently as possible the news of her husband's death.

It was her sister Josephine who told her in broken sentences veiled hints that revealed in half concealing. Her husband's friend, Richards, was there, too, near her. It was he who had been in the newspaper office when intelligence of the railway disaster was received, with Brently Mallard's name leading the list of "killed." He had only taken the time to assure himself of its truth by a second telegram and had hastened to forestall any less careful, less tender friend in bearing the sad message.

She did not hear the story as many women have heard the same, with a paralyzed inability to accept its significance. She wept at once, with sudden wild abandonment, in her sister's arms. When the storm of grief had spent itself she went away to her room alone. Facing the open window was a comfortable, roomy armchair. Into this she sank.

She sat with her head thrown back upon the cushion of the chair, quite motionless except when a sob came up into her throat and shook her, as a child who has cried itself to sleep continues to sob in its dreams.

She was young, with a fair, calm face, whose lines bespoke repression and even a certain strength. But now there was a dull stare in her eyes, whose gaze was fixed away off yonder on one of those patches of blue sky. It was not a glance of reflection, but rather indicated a suspension of intelligent thought.

There was something coming to her, and she was waiting for it fearfully. What was it? She did not know. It was too subtle and elusive to name, but she felt it, creeping out of the sky, reaching toward her, through the sounds, the scents, the color that filled the air.

How her bosom rose and fell tumultuously! She was beginning to recognize this thing that was approaching to possess her, and she was striving to beat it back with her will—as powerless as her two white, slender hands would have been.

When she abandoned herself, a little whispered word escaped her slightly parted lips. She said it over and over under her breath, "Free, free, free!" The vacant stare and look of terror that had followed it went from her eyes. They stayed keen and bright. Her pulses beat fast, and the coursing blood warmed and relaxed every inch of her body.

She did not stop to ask if it were or were not a monstrous joy that held her. A clear and exalted perception enabled her to dismiss the suggestion as trivial.

She knew that she would weep again when she saw the kind, tender hands folded in death; the face that had never looked save with love upon her, fixed and gray and dead. But she saw beyond that bitter moment a long procession of years to come that would belong to her absolutely, and she opened and spread her arms wide out to them in hearty welcome.

There would be no one to live for during those coming years. She would live for herself. There would be no powerful will bending her in that blind persistence with which men and women believe that they have a right to impose a private will upon a fellow creature. A kind intention or a cruel intention made the act seem no less a crime as she looked upon it in that brief moment of illumination.

And yet she had loved him—sometimes. Often she had not. What did it matter? What could love, the unsolved mystery, count in face of this possession of self assertion which she suddenly recognized as the strongest impulse of her being?

"Free! Body and soul free!" she kept on whispering to herself. Josephine was kneeling before the closed door, with her lips to the keyhole, imploring for admission. "Louise, open the door. Please open the door. You will make yourself ill. What are you doing? For goodness' sake open the door!"

"Go away. I am not making myself ill." No; she was drinking in a very elixir of life through that open window before her.

How fancy was running riot along those days ahead of her—spring days and summer days and all sorts of days that would be her own! She breathed a quick prayer that life might be long. It was only yesterday she had thought, with a shudder, that life might be long.

She arose at length and opened the door to her sister's importunities. There was a feverish triumph in her eyes, and she carried herself unwittingly like a goddess of victory. She clasped her sister's waist, and together they descended the stairs. Richards stood waiting for them at the bottom.

Some one was opening the front door with a latchkey. It was Brently Mallard who entered, a little travel stained, comportedly carrying his bag and umbrella. He had been far from the scene of the accident and did not even know there had been one. He stood amazed at Josephine's piercing cry, at Richards' quick motion to screen him from the view of his wife.

But Richards was too late. When the doctors came they said she had died of heart disease.—New York Journal.

Congratulating Himself.
 "Dere's one ting I can congratulate meself on," said Meandering Mike.
 "What's dat?" inquired Plodding Pete.
 "By never earnin' any money in de fust place I avoids havin' any cause to reproach meself fur spendin' it foolish."—Washington Star.
