From a letter received from Miss Rozella McKenzie, we learn that she has been engaged to teach at Whitney, Ore. She informs us that teacher's wages in the west are much better than in Michigan, as she gets $50 per month for a school with an enrollment of only ten scholars.

About 75 were present at the social evening given by Grip Tent K. O. T. M. last Monday evening and a most enjoyable time was had. The company were favored with several excellent recitations by Harriet Perkins Stark, of Detroit, which were rendered in a most charming manner.

The superintendent of public instruction announces that the apportionment of primary school money this fall will be on a basis of about $2.60 per capita. In view of the fact that the school census is to be taken this month and the apportionment will be distributed on the census figures, it is important that in taking the census every child of school age be enumerated, as every pupil on the roll means $2.60 of primary school money to the city. Too much care cannot be taken in the enumeration.

Principal Philip J. Wilson of the Adrian high school has come out with an unequivocal statement that he will vote for W. N. Ferris for governor next November, in spite of the fact that he has been a republican all his life and has never before voted any other ticket. He says he will not only vote for Mr. Ferris, but will work for him and aid his campaign in every way. Prof. Willson was formerly principle of the Tawas City schools.

Democratic Nominees.
The democrats of Iosco county met at the court house in this city last Saturday and nominated candidates for county officials. While the attendance was rather small, only about half of the cities and townships being represented, the convention placed in nomination on excellent ticket, and one which the people of the county can support with confidence.

The convention was organized at 10 o'clock in the forenoon by the election of T. J. Armstrong, of this city, as temporary chairman, and Geo. C. Anschuetz, of Tawas, as temporary secretary. After the appointment of the usual committees a recess was taken until 1 o'clock.

On re-assembling the reports of the committees were received and the convention then proceeded to the nomination of candidates, and the following ticket was placed in the field, Probate Judge—Geo. D. McKay, Oscoda. Sheriff—William West, Grant. Clerk—George C. Anschuetz, Tawas. Treasurer—H. E. Nunn, Plainfield. Register of Deeds—F. C. Baker, East Tawas. Circuit Court Com.—N. C. Hartingh, Tawas City.

Surveyor—Peter J. Hottos, Burleigh. Coroners—A. F. McDonald, AuSable, C. D. Geer, Plainfield. The nomination for prosecuting attorney was left blank until it could be ascertained whether or not Attorney A. W. Black, of East Tawas, would accept the nomination or not, he being out of town. Since his return he has consented to make the run and will be placed on the ticket by the county committee per the instructions of the convention. Mr. Black is a republican, and the nomination was tendered him with the understanding that his political views were not those of the nominating convention. He has accepted the nomination and will make an active canvas for the election.

Iosco's Population.
Secretary of State Warner has favored us with the census figures for Iosco county, the tabulation of which was completed Wednesday. Below we give the figures, also those of the census of 1900, which shows the loss and gain of the various cities and townships. It will be noticed that most satisfactory gains have been made throughout our farming country:

TAWAS CITY, MICH., Aug. 19, 1904.

The democrats of Iosco county have placed in nomination a set of candidates for county officials who are well qualified for the respective positions, and who are all worthy of the support of the people.

The German emperor possesses a cane which belonged to Frederick the Great, who always carried it on his many battlefields. Frederick died in his armchair, having refused to take to his bed when dying, and he held this cane in his hand at the moment of his death.

The formation of sand dunes and sand bars along the shore of Saginaw bay is being studied by W. F. Cooper, of the state geological survey, and his observations will soon be published. Mr. Cooper will also report on the formation of sand bars along the bay shore, his work extending to the "breaker" line.

The Roscommon News asks why all the abuse of Senator Doherty has ceased since his renomination. That's easy. About nine out of every ten newspapers in the 28th senatorial district are republican, and since the "bell cow's" renomination, they have "got in line," while before fully one half of them were opposing him.

In 1902 this country produced more than a quarter of a billion tons of bituminous coal valued at nearly $300,000,000; anthracite coal worth more than $76,000,000; copper with a valuation above $71,000,000; gold of a coining value exceeding $67,000,000; iron ore reached a total of nearly $67,500,000; silver at coining figures surpassed $70,000,000, and the petroleum total was more than $71,000,000.

Michigan at the World's Fair

St. Louis, Mo., August 12, 1904.—It is no little gratification to Michigan people to find the Wolverine state ably represented at the World's fair, and is no less a pleasure to enjoy the hospitality which prevades the beautiful state structure bearing the title "Michigan".

It is no light task to forcibly display the wealth of resources Michigan can boast of, yet every exhibit of the state is comprehensive and emphasizes the fact that Michigan is one of the foremost states in the Union.

Situated on the main avenue leading to the plateau of states and facing the United States government and fisheries buildings, the Michigan building claims the distinction of occupying the most advantageous and the most commanding position to be accorded a state building.

The structure in itself is appropriate to this honor and presents a most pleasing appearance. There are more splendid state edifices and more elegantly furnished, yet none possesses to a greater degree the homelike qualities and conveniences for rest and comfort, which is so essential to a state building. It is this characteristic which has made the Michigan building a favorite at the exposition.

The Grecian style prevails in the architecture. Broad porticos surround the sides and front, and furnished with a multitude of willow chairs, rockers and porch seats, the building is inviting indeed. The interior with its parlors, writing rooms, offices and reception rooms is decidedly attractive. The furniture and appointments are products of Michigan and are in harmony with the building, emphasizing comfort and ease, and yet not making an attempt at elaborateness. Surrounding the building is a rose hedge whose wealth of flowers and foliage forms a pleasing contrast to the ivory white of the building.

With the established record of Michigan as a mineral state, it is but fitting that the exhibit in the Palace of Mines and Metallurgy should be one of the finest presented by the state. This display is one of the most interesting to be found in the building and most convincing in its detail and scope. The leading and most prominent feature is copper. Models of the No. 2 shaft-house of the Tamarack Mine, and a shaft-house stamp mill of the Calumet & Hecla mine never fail to interest. Pyramids of cast copper cakes, wire bars, ingots, ingot bars, together with samples of stamp rock, mineral, photographs of mines, copper tubing, sheet and wire, complete the display of this metal. A mass of copper weighing 6375 pounds and assaying 95 per cent copper is evidence of the richness of Michigan's mines.

With a hundred samples of ore, including hard, soft and magnetic, and an extensive collection of photographs of mines showing both the surface and underground workings, the iron industry of the state is well displayed, while another of Michigan's leaders, salt, also receives conspicuous attention. Enclosing the entire exhibit is a handsome wall of cement, which forms only a part of an interesting display of this product. Over 1500 rare and valuable specimens characteristic of the minerals found in Michigan are shown in glass cases. No state is able to make as comprehensive an exhibit as the Wolverine, the great variety of minerals found in large quantities giving it prestige over the other states.

Through the efforts of a special commission, Michigan is able to claim a very creditable exhibit in the palace of forestry, fish and game. Enclosing the exhibit space is a rustic fence and arch of Norway pine, from which the birch-bark baskets filled with northern ferns are hung. The foreground is occupied by a long table on which trade products manufactured from wood are shown. The exhibition table is of interest in itself, as its front is of various ornamental woods to be found in the state. The variety is surprising, more than seventeen woods being shown. Woods for flooring also receive attention. The sides of the booth are formed of slabs both in rough and dressed condition. The rustic background supporting large mounted photographs is supplemented by planks of sundry varieties of wood both in a rough and finished state.

A number of interesting facts are brought out in the exhibit. Salt finds its place for the reason that 4,387,982 barrels of salt are evaporated with refuse fuel from the saw mills. From 222 pounds of refuse fuel, 280 pounds of salt can be made, and were it not for this cheap fuel the cost of securing the salt would be far too great. A huge piece of hemlock bark bears the inscription that 125,000 cords of this bark are peeled in Michigan every year. As evidence that Wolverine timber is not without knots, a birch knot measuring four feet in diameter is shown, while "the pine that made Michigan famous" is represented by an immense cross section of a tree.

The fact that Michigan is not a "one-product" state is brought to attention by the agricultural display. But few states are able to exhibit as great a variety of agricultural products as Michigan. A triumphal arch forms the entrance, while "Michigan" in grain adorns the arch and the same word in seeds ornaments the bases. The decorations are clusters of grains and these prevail also to a great extent in other portions of the exhibit. Occupying the center is a small office with straw-thatched roof. Above a frame of potatoes spelling "Michigan" is a wolverine making a pretty conceit.

A novel feature is the arrangement of small display cases in tiers, which are constructed from the corners of the office. One side is devoted to wool, the other to grains. The distinctive feature of the exhibit is the extensive display of wool, which far exceeds any other similar display made in the building. Various kinds of grains, ornamental grasses and seeds show the products in the natural state while displays by the many pure food companies in the state illustrate a few of the uses of these products. Interesting features of the display are peppermint and beet sugar exhibits. A complete model of a peppermint distillery, plants and oils are shown, while every phrase of beet sugar manufacture from the seed to the finished product is explained.

That Michigan's reputation as the finest apple-producing state in the union is not in danger is exemplified in the Horticultural exhibit. Nearly eight hundred plates of as superb fruit as has ever been grown, and embracing 140 winter varieties, are shown on the tables. The splendid keeping qualities of Michigan's apples is evidenced by the fact that although placed in cold storage last October, they rival even the apples of this season, and some have been on the tables since May, yet show no signs of decay. Besides all the commercial varieties, many new ones from the experimental stations of South Haven and the Michigan Agricultural college are to be seen. The former includes especially choice desert apples in prime condition, the northern spys measuring 14 inches in circumference attract considerable attention. The display will be supplemented by prize fruit displays from the state fairs.

Yet not alone in apples does the exhibit excel, as the largest gooseberries are to be seen on Michigan tables, while only the fancy cherries from Oregon can rival those sent by Paul Rose, of Frankfort, yellow Spanish and Schmidt's Bigearreau being the varieties. Pears, plums and kindred fruits will be shown in season and a special effort for prize-winners in peaches and grapes will be made.

The booth in the Palace of Education erected by the University of Michigan is a credit not only to the educational institution but to the state as well. Both in design and execution the booth shows originality and artistic taste.

The prevailing idea through the exhibits made by the Commission is quality rather than quantity, and the creditable showing is due to the fact that little attempt was made at elaborate decorations, but all efforts were devoted to securing the finest products of the state. One should not come to the Fair and expect the displays of Michigan, with the meager appropriation of $50,000 to equal or even make a favorable comparison with such states as Missouri, Indiana, Virginia, Pennsylvania and California, whose appropriations range from $250,000 to $1,000,000. Considering the difference in the appropriations, Michigan makes the best display on the Exposition grounds, and while it is to be regretted that not a larger amount was voted by the Legislature, Michigan visitors should feel a pride in the showing made.

Michigan Day, to be celebrated October 12, will be followed by Detroit Day, October 13 and the Michigan State Commission will not only make an effort to have these days observed in fitting style, but the Exposition company will lend its aid in making these special days memorable ones in the Fair's history.

Potatoes seem to be an excellent crop this year, but the best we have so far heard of is that of Alderman Schlechte. Will says he went out the other day to dig a mess of a new variety which he got last spring, and he solemnly declares that before he could plug up the hole two and a half bushels rolled out of the first hill.

The time for securing the Iosco county exhibit at the state fair is becoming short, only four weeks remaining. Are you doing your part? Remember that the committee in charge must receive assistance from one and all in order to make this the success it should be. Our county secured the second prize last year on its first exhibit. Now let's all unite and secure the first this year. Anything that grows on a farm or in the garden helps. Contribute your share.

The residence of Michael McGary, on Miller street, was partly wrecked by fire and water Monday. The fire originated in the cellar, where Frederick Buchanan, an employe of the Alpena Gas & Heat Co., was making a connection. Some gas escaped and he investigated with a lighted candle.

The gas exploded and caused the fire. Buchanan's hands were badly burned. The furniture was moved out, but several pieces were smashed in the moving. The loss is about $250. covered by insurance. The gas company will have to stand the damage—Alpena News.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

The Story of a Camel Which Showed Almost Human Intelligence.

New and wonderful stories of animal sagacity are constantly being told, and people never appear to tire of them either. Dogs and horses seem to possess more sense than any other animals, but here is a little story of a camel that is very interesting:

A valuable and high bred camel working in an oil well in Africa was severely beaten by its driver. The man noticed that the animal was sulky for some days after, so he kept a sharp watch upon him, feeling sure that the beating would not go unavenged. The camel in his turn knew his master was watching him, so he, playing possum, as it were, was quiet and obedient, and the driver soon forgot all about it.

At night the man slept on a raised platform in the mill, while the camel was stabled in a corner, and after several weeks had elapsed the driver woke up suddenly one night and by the bright moonlight was able to see quite clearly everything in the mill. He saw the camel get up, look cautiously around and steal softly to a bundle of old clothes that were thrown carelessly on the ground and looked exactly like a sleeping figure. The animal suddenly threw itself violently upon the clothes, rolled upon them with all its weight and began to tear and bite them with its strong teeth. Thinking itself avenged at last, the camel was quietly returning to the corner when its master sat up and spoke to it. At the sound of his voice, and instantly perceiving the mistake, the animal was so mortified at its failure and the discovery of its scheme that it made a wild effort to dash its brains out against the wall and would have done so had it not been for the interference of the driver.

Sweeping the Cobwebs.

There must be an old woman of the sky with her broom, and two of the players must each hold the end of a skipping rope. The other players must stand in line.

The old woman says:
 I want a helper to sweep the sky
 Who can jump high. Who can jump high?

She looks down the line and points with her broom to one of the players, who comes forward and stands in front of the rope. Holding out the broom, the old woman says:

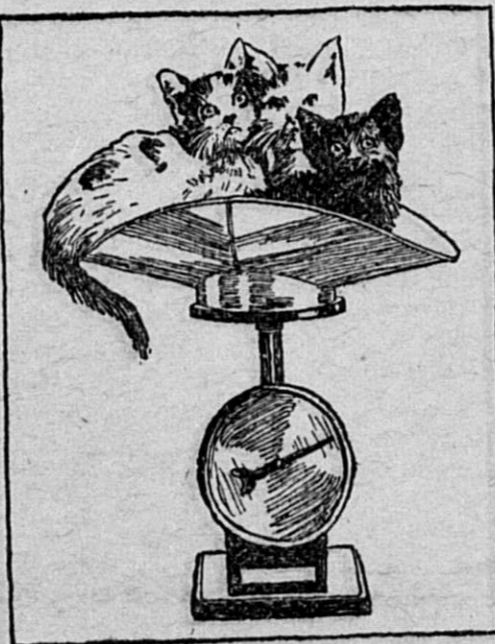

Take this, take this.
 Be sure you don't miss.

The player takes the broom, holding it horizontally with both hands, and the rope is held for him to jump. He has three trials. Each time the rope is held a little higher. If he takes them all he stands on one side. If he fails, the old woman beats him with the broom, and he is out of the game. When all the players have been tried those who have been successful have a final trial, and the one who can take all the jumps is selected to help the old woman sweep the sky.

This game is specially adapted for out of doors, and the more players the merrier.

The Weighing.

Now, Midnight and Spot, do be quiet,
 Or we'll never know how much we weigh.
 Miss Bessie is losing her patience,
 And we really ought not to play.

There, Spot! Hold your tail still a minute.
 Hush, Midnight! Don't purr quite so loud.

Four pounds and a little bit over?
 My goodness, won't mother be proud!
 —Julia Darrow Cowles in St. Nicholas.

A Beastly Teacher.

In a certain school in the north of England the head master has recently taken to teaching natural history. The other day when expounding some of the mysteries of creation the master asked one of his boys if he could tell him the difference between himself and a tiger, meaning, of course, the difference in the scale of nature. After some hard thinking the boy replied, "Please, sir, a tiger is an imperfect beast, but you are a perfect beast."
 —London Spectator.

Shelled.

"Do you consider the Japanese to be honorable combatants?" inquired the correspondent of the Russian admiral at Port Arthur. "They worked a shell game on me all right," replied the admiral grimly.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Death Penalty.

A little thing sometimes results in death. Thus a mere scratch, insignificant cuts or puny boils have paid the death penalty. It is wise to have Bucklen's Arnica Salve ever handy.
It's the best salve on earth and will prevent fatality, when burns, sores, ulcers and piles threaten. Only 25c, at G. S. Darling's and J. E. Dillon's drug stores.

Increase Cost of Living.

The bulletins issued by the United States department of labor indicate a heavy advance in the cost of living in the past ten years.

Bulletin No. 51 shows that it takes $149 to buy as much coal as $92 would buy ten years ago.

It takes $118 to buy as many vegetables as $78 would buy eight years ago.

It takes $121 to buy as much lumber and other building material as $90
would buy seven years ago.

It takes $112 to buy as much in a drug store as $87 would buy nine years ago.

In men's clothing it takes $109 to buy as much as $88 would buy seven years ago.

In women's dress goods it takes $106 to buy as much as $88 would buy seven years ago.

And on an average $113 in your pocket today will not buy as much as $80 would seven years ago.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Unselfish Elephant.

The story is still told by circus men of a certain big elephant that did something worthy of being immortalized. A little girl and her father had one day been looking at him admiring-ly. In the little girl's lunch basket were a couple of oranges, and her father asked her if it wouldn't be nice, now, to give that poor old elephant one of them. The suggestion appealed at once and strongly, and forthwith the biggest orange was handed over. The elephant took it in his "hand" with a befitting undulation.

But having relished for a moment
the joys of being generous, the smile began gradually to disappear from that small girl's face. Her nether lip dropped down, and suddenly she went off into a gathering wail.

"But—but now I want it back! I—I want it back!"

"But, don't you see, dearie, you can't get it back now? It's too late."

"No, it ain't, neither. He ain't et it yet."

"No, no, now. You just come along with me."

"I won't. I won't come along. I want my orange back."

Her cries of woe became louder and louder. It was a hopeless embarrassment. But that "poor old elephant" released them from it himself. He reached forward and, with dignity, dropped the orange over the railing again! In one family at least there is a belief in pachyderm understanding and self sacrifice which no evidence to the contrary can ever shake.

Of the group of keepers, however,
who told the story one added an illuminating explanatory note. With elephants, it seems, oranges have never been any great "divarison" anyhow.
But, almost no matter what an elephant is offered, he will generally take and hold it for a time before finally making up his mind to reject it.—Saturday Evening Post.

An Animal Party.

Prepare a little story, using the names of as many different animals as possible. Whisper to each guest the name of some animal; also tell him his number, and that when you call his number he is to imitate the animal in some way, but not to call its name. He must either make the noise the animal makes, walk as it does or show some of its characteristics. Then read the story aloud. As you come to the name of an animal, call the number. The child with the number imitates the animal, and the other children must guess what animal it is. Of course the story must be very simple and one easily kept in mind. Not too much time should be given the children to guess,
but pass right on with the reading.
Then whisper to each child the name of an animal to draw on a child's blackboard, and the others must guess what the animal drawn is. Let each child describe an animal without giving its name, the others to tell what it is. Pin the tail on a donkey or the trunk of an elephant. Give an animal book for the prize and have the ice cream served in forms of bears, lions, etc.—What to Eat.

When Two Rainbows Are Seen.

When two rainbows are sometimes seen at once, one outside the other, the inner or primary bow, as it is called, is always the brighter, and the red band of color is always on its outside. The outer or secondary bow is much fainter in color, and the red band is always on its inside. This is because in the primary bow the sun's rays are only reflected once, while in the secondary bow they are reflected twice, which makes them fainter in color and turns them upside down. In one rainbow we see the rays of the sun entering the raindrops at the top and reflected to the eye from the bottom, while in the other we see the rays entering the raindrops at the bottom and reflected from the top, whence they reach the eye.

A Queer Grammar Lesson.

A consul of the United States in one of the French seaports was asked to preside at an examination in English at a municipal school.

"Jean," asked the teacher of the head pupil, anxious to show him off before the American—"Jean, you will conjugate the verb 'I have a gold mine.'"

Jean arose, floundered mentally for a moment, then plunged in:
"I have a gold mine, thou hast a gold thine, he has a gold hisn, we have a gold urn, they have a gold thiern!"

The consul was speechless with astonishment at the progress the French children had made in the English language as it is never spoken at home!

Staying Out Late.

"Oh, mother, let us stay out late!"
Cried little Tom and Fred.
"Always before it's really dark"
You make us go to bed.
We're sure that we would like the dark,
We want to see the moon.
They say some owls are in this grove—
Don't make us come too soon."

Down sank the sun, up rose the moon,
The tree toads made their noise.
Two little owls began to hoot,
Which scared those little boys.
Eek to their homes they quickly ran,
They heard the watchdog bark.
"Mamma, we want to come to bed.
We're frightened at the dark."

"Oh, mother, let us stay out late!"
Cried little Fuzz and Ball.
"You always make us go to bed
Before it's light at all.
We're sure that we would like the light.
We want to see the sun.
They say two boys come to this grove,
And that will be great fun!"

Down sank the moon, up rose the sun,
Loud crowed the barnyard fowls.
Two little boys began to shout,
Which scared those little owls.
Back to their hollow tree they flew,
Their eyes were big and bright.
"Mamma, we want to go to bed.
We're frightened at the light!"
