As to the future we can promise our best efforts. It will ever be our constant endeavor to give our readers the best paper possible and to improve it whenever the opportunity is offered. With our best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year to each and every one of our patrons, we are

The prisoner waived his examination and was bound over to the circuit court.

The bill for the dance is $1.00; supper extra.

From a copy of the Tacoma, Wash., Daily News received last evening from Miss Rozilla McKenzie, we learn of the death of Ed. Amiot, and the serious injury of his brother Will, in a street car accident in that city last Saturday morning. The boys were on their way to their work on a car which was running at a high rate of speed when it left the track on a curve, and Ed was crushed to death under the trucks, being thrown from the front platform on which he was riding. In its mad career the car plowed across the street burying poor Ed's body in dirt and wreckage in such a manner that it was two hours after the accident before it was known that he was killed. Will received a dislocated shoulder, a bad scalp wound and other injuries, and several other passengers were injured. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Amiot and their sons Edmund and Will moved from this city to Tacoma about two years ago, and the sad news of their misfortune will be received with much regret by their many friends here.

A Good Man Gone.

On Sunday evening, Dec. 24, Rev. Adoniram Waterbury passed from this life to a well-earned reward. He had been assisting Rev. John Pierson, of Onaway, in mission work in and around Onaway since in the summer and it was at Mr. Pierson's home that his last sickness occurred and from whence he took his departure. His remains were brought to Tawas City to the home of his cousin, J. M. Waterbury, Monday afternoon and the funeral exercises were held at the Baptist church in this city, of which he was formerly the pastor. In the absence of Rev. E. B. Griffith, the pastor of the church, the exercises were in charge of Rev. B. H. Thomas, of Bay City, assisted by pastors of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches of East Tawas and Tawas City, Rev. E. Draper, of Harrisville, and Rev. L. Severance of the Hemlock Road. The attendance was large, comprising residents of both cities and the surrounding country for a considerable distance. The clergymen in attendance acted as honorary pall bearers and were Revs. Kay and Pearse, of East Tawas, Hastings and Diekov, of Tawas City, Draper, of Harrisville, Severance, of the Hemlock Road, Pierson, of Onaway and Thomas, of Bay City. The attendance of so many of his co-laborers called to mind the verse of Scripture:

"And devout men carried Stephen to his burial and made great lamentation over him."—Acts 8:2

The presence of so many of those who knew and loved him, whose sad faces and reverent attitude proclaimed that a friend had been taken, made the exercises peculiarly impressive and emphasized the fact that the influence of his life had gone far beyond the membership of his own denomination and permeated into every walk of life. Rev. Mr. Waterbury was born in Nassau, Rensselaer county, N. Y., in August, 1833. He came from sturdy New England stock, his ancestors coming to Connecticut from England in 1639. They were identified from the first in the active development of the county, both civil and religious, and the history of the state gives them a place in the councils of state, the deliberations of ecclesiastical bodies and an active participation in Indian wars, the French war and the war for Independence.

He commenced his life work at an early age and from start to finish he turned neither to the right nor to the left, but with a steadfastness of purpose seldom equaled and never surpassed, he strove for but one end and that the betterment of mankind. He resided in this community for about ten years and the list of his friends comprises all who ever met him or heard of his worth. His enemies—there are none.

He went to Malvern, Arkansas, about two years ago, where his wife died on the 15th of May of the present year, shortly after which he returned to this seat on of the state for a short sojourn before going to the home of his brother and sister in Seattle, Washington. His work was finished before he expected and he has entered into his rest.

Laidlawville.

May Graham is quite ill at the present writing.

George LaPierre spent a few days last week at home.

Frank Laidlaw spent Christmas day with relatives here.

Elze Laidlaw was at Whittemore on business Wednesday.

Sandy Kennedy spent Sunday with friends in our neighborhood.

Will Kobs left Tuesday for South Branch to remain for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruel spent Christmas with Mrs. R's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Colby spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wood.

Mrs. George Culham spent a few days last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McLeod.

George Lake, who has been suffering from a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, is improving.

Mrs. Wallace Barrett and little son Allan, who have been spending the past few weeks with her parents, returned to their home at Montrose Tuesday.

Henry Fashet, Julius Hartman, Edwin and Ferdinand Anschuetz, who have been at South Branch for the past few months, are home for the holidays.

The entertainment at the school house Friday evening was quite well attended and the program was much enjoyed. The tree was loaded with fruits for both the children and teachers, and Santa Claus left a few little tokens for some outside the school.

In Mad Chase.

Millions rush in mad chase after health, from one extreme of fadish to another, when, if they would only eat good food, and keep their bowels regular with Dr. King's New Life Pills, their troubles would all pass away. Prompt relief and quick cure for liver and stomach trouble. 25¢ at Dr. Darling and J. M. Waggazer & Co. drug store; guaranteed.

Reno Ripples.

The people of Reno said to Rev. Severance, "If the coat fits you wear it," and then Santa Claus and Superintendent Thompson presented him with a fur coat of excellent value and also a pair of gloves and a purse of money.

The Christmas exercises were attended by a large audience. The program was given in a most enthusiastic way. The children had been trained by the teachers of the public schools of both districts and with honest pride each school challenged the other to do its best, resulting in an excellent program well rendered, reflecting much credit on those who took part and those who trained them.

Pastor and Mrs. Severance wish to thank the people of Reno for their generous Christmas gifts, not only for the comfort which they bring but most of all for those gifts as tokens of your esteem and thoughtful regard for us, and we shall seek to show our appreciation by striving to prove ourselves more and more worthy of these generous and hearty expressions of your love and confidence.

Card of Thanks.

With hearts overflowing with appreciation we desire to express our sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends who so kindly aided us by their many acts of kindness, words of sympathy and hours of assistance lent us in our recent time of sorrow and affliction, the sickness, death and burial of Adam Cataline, a beloved husband and father.

TAWAS CITY MICH., DEC. 29, 1905

A happy and prosperous New Year to our readers.

The indications are that it will soon be demonstrated who is the big man of the republican party of New York state—Boss O'Dell or President Roosevelt.

The Detroit News prints daily a picture of some eligible bachelor of that city. What a sensation it would create if it began the publication of the eligible old maids.

With thirty million tons of coal carefully stored away for emergencies the rail roads of the country are not worrying over any prospective general strike by the miners.

Some of the mining and lumbering companies of northern Wisconsin are discriminating in the matter of wages in favor of married men with families hoping thereby, to promote the settlement of the country and the scheme seems likely to work.

More than 1,000,000,000 herring were packed in tin cans as domestic sardines in 1905, the first time in the history of the Maine sardine industry that the figure has been reached. The value of the little fish in cans this year exceeds $5,000,000, making the industry one of the most important of the Pine Tree State.

Now that the inside history of the cost of running for president of the United States is being made public, in connection with the insurance investigation, it is more than probable that a whole lot of fellows who have had designs on the White House for some time past will buy a pick and shovel and get a job on the grade somewhere instead.—Ex.

The wagon roads of any county are the fountain heads of trade and commerce: they are the avenues over which pass the main agencies for the dissemination of knowledge and the increase of intelligence, as well as the enjoyments of social intercourse in rural life. They provide the means for the performance of public duty, of reaching schools and churches and local markets or shipping points on railways.

There are in America today more than 200 fraternal beneficiary orders with a combined membership of over 5,000,000, who are protected to the extent of more than $7,500,000,000, and have distributed benefits to disabled members amounting to more than $325,000,000. In 1904 alone they distributed $65,000,000, or at the rate of $1,250,000 per week, besides paying over 4,000 death claims last year. Sixty-four of these orders have a membership of over 10,000 and the others from 5,000 to 7,000.

The state supervisors' association is planning for a warm meeting at Lansing February 6, 7 and 8. The executive committee has outlined a program that will bring out for discussion the vexed problem of taxation, and it is expected that some of the most prominent men of the state will be present and take part in the discussion. One of the subjects most likely to engender sharp comment is the new law creating the state tax commission. There is strong opposition to that portion of the law giving the tax commission the power to review assessment rolls and fix valuations without giving the power to appeal to persons deeming themselves aggrieved.

A Fearful Fate.

It is a fearful fate to have to endure the terrible torture of piles. I can truthfully say," writes Harry Colson, of Masonville, Ia; "that for blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles Bucklen's Arnica Salve, is the best cure made." Also best for cut, burns and injuries. 25c. at J. M. Wuggazer & Co. and Dr. Darling, druggist.

ANCIENT ENTERTAINMENT.

Description of One Given by Xenophon's Army of Greeks.

In his "Anabasis" Xenophon describes an entertainment given by his army of Greeks on the shores of the Black sea during the retreat from Persia after the battle of Cunaxa, about twenty-three centuries ago. "Two Thracians first rose up," says the soldier historian, "and danced with their arms to the sound of a flute. They capered very high and with great agility, then made use of their swords. At last one of them struck the other in such a manner that every one thought he had killed him, but the stroke was given with art. The other, having despoiled him of his arms, went out singing a song of triumph. Then other Thracians carried off the man as if he had been dead, though indeed he was not hurt. After this some Eleans and Magnesians rose up and danced in their arms what they called the carpean dance, the manner of which is as follows: One of them, having laid down his arms, sows and drives a yoke of oxen, looking often behind him, as if he were afraid. Then a robber approaches, whom the other perceiving, he catches up his arms and, advancing, fights with him in defense of his oxen. All this these men performed in time to the flute. At last the robber binds the plowman and carries him off with the oxen. Sometimes the plowman overcomes the robber and, fastening him to the oxen, ties his hands behind him and so drives him away.
"After this Mysus entered with a buckler in each hand and danced sometimes as if he had been engaged with two adversaries, then used his bucklers as if engaged with only one. Sometimes he whirled round, then threw himself head foremost and fell on his feet without parting with his bucklers. This made a fine sight. Last of all he danced the Persian dance, striking his bucklers against each other and in dancing fell on his knees, then sprung up again, and in all this he kept time to the flute. He was succeeded by some Mantineans and other Arcadians, who, being dressed in the handsomest armor they could provide, rose up and advanced in time to a flute that played a martial air. They sang the paean and danced in the same manner that is practiced in solemn processions.
"On this one of the Arcadians led forth a woman dancer, dressed handsomely and carrying a light buckler. She danced the Pyrrhic dance with great ability, on which there was great applause. That caused the Paphlagonians who were present to ask whether the woman also charged with the troops. Then the Greeks said that it was the women who drove King Artaxerxes out of the camp. This was the end of that night's entertainment."

Alebiades.
The brilliant, witty and dissolute Alebiades had one of the most extensive experiences in exile that ever fell to the lot of man. While in command of the Sicilian army he was recalled to stand trial for the destruction of the busts of Hermes, an outrage that had taken place just before his departure. Knowing that his death had been determined on, he escaped to Sparta, where, by adopting the manners of the people, in strange contrast to his former style of luxury, he became immensely popular. He engaged in military operations against the Athenians and succeeded so well as to excite the envy of the Spartan leaders, who expelled him, whereupon he went to Persia and lived there with a magnificence that astonished the Persians themselves. He was recalled to Athens with the same capriciousness that marked his ostracism and was appointed commander in chief of all the Athenian forces, but, failing in an important expedition, he was again sent into exile and was finally assassinated in Persia.

Taciturn Carlyle.
It is not recorded that William the Silent was contemplating his chances of heaven when he won that title, though Thomas Carlyle, to whom some writer applies the paradoxical phrase "the roaring apostle of taciturnity," might be accused of wanting to go where there are no women. The same writer once rode with Carlyle in a Chelsea omnibus and endeavored in vain with questions to induce the great man to break his golden silence and coin a few sentences of silver speech. Carlyle preserved a moody silence. But the defeated questioner had his revenge when, affecting not to know Mr. Carlyle, he asked the conductor as they got out who the gentleman was and received the following reply:
"Oh, yes, sir; I know him well enough. 'E's wot you call a literary gent—writes books wot nobody can understand. 'E's a bit off his chump, like many of those gents, but he ain't a bad sort if you take him the right way."

Do the Next Thing.
Don't live a single hour of your life without doing exactly what is to be done in it and going straight through it from beginning to end. Work, play, study, whatever it is, take hold at once and finish it up squarely. Then do the next thing without letting any moments drop in between. It is wonderful to see how many hours these prompt people contrive to make of a day. It is as if they picked up the moment you dawdlers lost. And if you ever find yourself where you have so many things pressing upon you that you hardly know where to begin let me tell you a secret: Take hold of the very one that comes to hand, and you will find the rest will fall into line and follow after like a company of well drilled soldiers, and, though work may be hard to meet when it charges in a squad, it is easily vanquished if you can bring it into line.
