No man ever got rich by trying to make people believe that he was "the only," or the only one who knew anything. You cannot climb the ladder of success by treading on others' Keep off the corns and don't knock. You're not the only. There are others and they have brains and know something as well as you do.

There are two little words, simple enough in themselves, that introduce untold trouble into the world and are responsible for more gossip, scandal and harm than any two words in the English language. These two words are nothing more than "they say. They have done more to ruin reputations than all other things. If you never quote what "they say" you may be quite certain you are not a gossip.

President Roosevelt sent the folowing nomination as members of his cabinet to the senate last Monday. Secretary of treasury, George Courtelyou; attorney general, Charles Bonaparte; postmaster general, George Von L. Meyer; secretary of navy, Victor H. Metcalf; secretary of interior, James R. Garfield; secretary of commerce and labor, Oscar S. Strauss. The name of William H. Moody was also sent as associate justice of the supreme court.

There are times when purse strings are tightened when there is a proposition of a public nature calling for contributions. Men will talk of their past contributions, of the failure of this and the other project, and will refuse to pay money for further plans which they say will not bring money to their pockets. There are some of these men to be found in every community, just as there are small potatoes in every hill. But when this condition becomes general, when men to whom the community has a right to whom the community has a right to look for a slight return for the benefit and the prosperity which they benefit and the prosperity which they enjoy, refuse thus to discharge one of their plainest duties and when the number of such men becomes so great as to threaten the success of movements in the public interest, that condition is an evidence of a species of dry rot which, if not speedily removed, will land the community in the commercial graveyard.

More than 300 people are engaged in the enactment of this religios-historic ramance.

Usually one approaches a play made on a really powerful novel with misgivings, but with "Ben Hur" this is different, and herein lies one of its greatest charms. In this wonderful production, when they essay to show you the inside of a galley with a Prince of Hur at one of the oars, it is a stage picture that suggests the every environment and takes on a semblance of reality. The same goes with all the other pictures, from the allegorical one in the prologue, showing the Wise Men discovering the Star of Bethlehem, and onward through those stirring scenes of Jerusalem, preceding Hur's arrest to the galley, the rescue and the Grove of Daphne, which is a-picture of Oriental splendor and pleasure combined, as beautiful as has been set for the gaze of theatre goers in many a day. Then comes the great chariot race, the acme of stage mechanism, and the great scenic triumph of the piece. It goes off with a whirl and pictures the Circus at Antioch, with the struggle between Messala and Ben Hur that fires the interest of the spectator to the highest pitch.

The last scene of this great series of pictures is one that will live in the history of the American drama as the best scene of the kind ever shown on the American stage. It shows the reunion of the mother, daughter and son, after five years of suffering, the great white light from Mount Olivet, which signified their healing at the hands of the Master. The
