TAWAS CITY, MICH., Oct. 4, 1907

The magnificent monument erected by the people of the nation to the memory of President McKinley was dedicated last Monday at Canton, Ohio. This beautiful memorial was built at a cost of $500,000.

The production of oleomargarine in the year ended June 30 rose to 68,983,850 pounds, an increase of 15,842,191 pounds over 1906. The government derived an income of $687,641 from its tax on the article.

Many democrats of West Virginia want ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, who was candidate for vice-president in the last presidential campaign, to run for governor. Despite his 83 years, Mr. Davis is hale and hearty and is the wealthiest man in his state.

This matter of newspaper subscription reminds us of the Greek philosopher whose poverty began to pinch him. One of his friends sent word to the men of the city that each one should take one bottle of a certain kind of wine and on a certain day go to the philosopher's house and pour the wine into his empty wine vat. And so they did, but each thought that one bottle of water would not be noticed in so much wine and the vat was filled with water. Thus the philosopher received no aid. It is somewhat the way with subscriptions. One fellow thinks he owes only a small amount and so he neglects to pay it. The other man thinks the same and, so the editor fares almost as poorly as the philosopher.—Bancroft Commercial.

Nature Fakirs.

While the president is denouncing nature fakirs he still clings to Alexander Hamilton, the greatest nature fakir to be found among American statesmen. Hamilton thought that the average man was a dangerous beast and that only the "well born" could be trusted with power. He put property rights above human rights and wanted the United States senate patterned after the House of Lords. He thought that democracy had to be strained through several official sieves before it could be used. To him the government was safest when it was farthest from the people. The trouble was he never got near enough to the people to get acquainted with their ambitions, habits and methods of thought. He distrusted the people because he did not know them.

The president has taken Hamilton for his guide and has naturally fallen into the same mistakes. He wants to do something for the people, but it does not occur to him that the people can act for themselves better than any one can act for them. If the president had Jefferson's faith in the people he would advocate the election of senators by the people, but in all of his many speeches he has never once suggested this reform, although three republican houses have voted for it and something like half the republican states have demanded it. Why does the president ignore it? For the same reason that he recommends national incorporation, namely, because he accepts Hamilton's ideas of a centralized government. He pictures the government as a benevolent despot generously guarding the people's interests while Jefferson regarded the government as a thing made by the people for themselves a thing not only made by the people for themselves but a thing controlled by the people in their own interest.

It is the more strange that the president should subscribe to the doctrines of Hamilton when it is remembered that his popularity has been greatest among the masses. He ought to be willing to trust the judgment of those who trust him. If he will make a close study of the animal, man—the common man—he will find that he is the surest defender of human rights, the safest custodian of property rights and the real bulwark of the state. "The proper study of mankind is man" and Jefferson was the highest authority on man. If the president would sit at his feet he would avoid the dangers into which Hamilton will lead him.—ie Commoner.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Our Fault That Our Idle Lands Are Not Inhabited.

The editor of an aggressive agricultural paper has been making a trip through northern Michigan. He has seen the riches with which nature has so liberally endowed the soil, and he has also seen the vast acreage as yet untouched by the plowman.

His observations call for serious thought on the part of every loyal citizen. He says our greatest need is progressive settlers. Very well, how shall we get them?

It is known that thousands of settlers, men of the right stuff, pass by annually, giving to northern Michigan little if any thought.

West and north they go, eyes lifted too high to see the agricultural wealth at their very feet.

Surely this condition should appeal to those of us who sat idly by last spring and allowed the proposed immigration bill to come to an early legislative death.

Why, we ask, do not more high-grade settlers come to northern Michigan?

Simply because no effort is made to get them.

Michigan, amid its surrounding states, sits like the storekeeper who does not believe in advertising, and who is convinced that electric lights in his store window are a useless extravagance.

So Michigan sits idly by watching with complaining air the procession of desirable newcomers go into the states which bid them welcome.

Minnesota spent five thousand dollars in the first year of its successful campaign for settlers, and the auditor of the state says that the sale of state lands was increased during those first twelve months to the enormous amount of a half million dollars.

Here is material for deep thought on the part of every Michigan legislator, for herein lies the opportunity to turn into profitable farms the idle acres throughout the state, both north and south of the straits.

If, as has been feebly suggested, the private land owners benefit in their farm sales by the advertising proposed to be done by the state they should be made welcome to the benefit, for they make but one profit in their sale, while every year thereafter Michigan makes money from the new taxpayer and producer.—Soo Evening News.

Preaching Beyond Our Practice.

We should always preach more than we practice. It is not dishonest to do this. Is it inconsistent for the officer who trembles with physical fear each time he goes into an engagement, to urge his men to be steady under fire? Did we advocate only what we have attained, we should never lead any one even as far as we have gone ourselves. We must ever hold before ourselves and others a higher standard than our own achievements. Our lives should never reach the limit of our ideals, for our ideals should never be lowered to the level of present or past attainment. Our goal must forever be far in front. As we develop, it must advance. But we cannot teach, with any hope of success, more than we believe and earnestly strive after.—Sunday School Times.

Lemon Juice For Catarrh.

"Lemon juice, when snuffed in the nose will cure the most obstinate case of catarrh," said L. R. Ower, of Springfield, Ill., at the Hotel Duncan. The operation is a painful one, but if one can stand it a cure, will most assuredly follow. Of course, the tart juice burns for a second like wild-fire, and the patient must be nerved or the remedy will cause much bad humor. Five years ago I took a trip to Europe. On my way over I suffered terribly from nasal inflammation. The ship's steward took a great interest in me. He had been traveling the waters for forty years. He said he first learned of the remedy on the island of Sicily. He insisted that I snuff lemon juice up my nostrils. I did so, protesting, but in three days I was in a normal condition, with all inflammation gone. I used it several times since, with excellent results."—Nashville Tennessean.

TOO MUCH SURGERY.

Opinion of Many People Voiced in a Recent Discussion.

Of all the sciences, none has made such progress during the last twenty years as surgery, says Dr. Latson. It has left medicine far, far in the rear. But the surgeon does more than theorize—he actually does things; he acts. A man breaks an arm—the surgeon sets it and saves the arm. A workman cuts an artery and is due to die in a few minutes—the surgeon ties up the artery, and saves the life. A poor sewing girl is able by hard work to make a bare living for herself and her old widowed mother. The girl's right arm becomes paralyzed—the surgeons opens her skull, cuts out a little lump of bone which was pressing on the brain and in a fortnight the girl can work as well as ever.

All this is fine. It is more than fine, it is great, godlike. But there's too much surgery. The surgeon has gone too far. What would you think of a chiropodist who said: "Ah, you have a bunion on your toe. We must amputate the toe, and then the bunion will give you no more pain." How reasonable! Sure cure for headache; cut off your head.

Now it would often seem, even to those in the profession, as if the surgeon were sometimes animated by the same spirit. If a woman have a sciatica (inflammation of the sciatic nerve), the excruciating pain of which makes life a burden to her, the surgeon's remedy is easy—cut out the nerve. If a man have a pain and tenderness in the right groin (thing which may be due to any one of half a dozen different conditions), again the surgeon speaks—the veriform appendix is cut out with much skill, alacrity and jocundity. There's too much surgery. The thing has gone too far. I have no quarrel with my brother, the surgeon. God speed him. But let him remember that the knife is, or rather should be, the last resort, justifiable only after every other method has been tried, and let him avoid the surgical operation frenzy.—Jackson Citizen Press.

Hard Times in Kansas.

The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Codell, Earl Shamburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief till I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. It took less than one bottle to completely cure me." The safest and most reliable cough and cold remedy and lung and throat healer ever discovered. Guaranteed at G. S. Darling's and J. M. Wuggazer & Co's drug stores. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
