 "The work of the Michigan State Board of Health," is the subject of an interesting article in the May Good Health, the monthly magazine published at Battle Creek, under the editorship of Dr. J. H. Kellogg, head of the Battle Creek Sanitarium. Mr. T. C. O'Donnell, the author, outlines in an interesting manner, the struggle which attended the putting into execution of the plan for a State Board, when it was originated forty years ago, and the progress since made by that department. Every follower of public affairs in Michigan should be intensely interested in this article.
 While Engine No. 25 scheduled to take out the 10:40 passenger train north on the D. & M. Tuesday night, was in the yards waiting to be turned, a switch engine running at a fair rate of speed reentered it, smashing the tender and wrecking the back of the cab. Engineer McRae, of the D. & M. engine, was caught and one leg was jammed between part of the broken structure and a lever, crushing the flesh but not breaking the bones. He was taken off the engine with some difficulty and Dr. Tupper attended him. The fireman was slightly bruised but was able to go on with his work. Engineer McRae lives in Alpena and was taken there last night, another engine being provided for the train.—Bay City Tribune.

E. PLURIBUS UNUM COSTUME.
 Hilda's latest addition to her wardrobe is a gown which is composed of portions of at least six of her previous costumes, the silk of one, the velvet from another, the net of another, the lace from another, the fur from another and the buttons—buttons, you know, are common to all these—were from still another. Hilda speaks of this dress as her E pluribus unum costume, for, is it not, she says, "one composed of many?"

NEW VIEW OF OLD SUBJECT.
 An easy way to choose clothes has been found and will be tested in the much-advertised London and Paris exhibition which is to take place in London. Girls and women will wear the gowns for all sorts of occasions, fat and lean, old and young, and all one will have to do is to pick out one's counterpart and buy the gown that is worn by her. Much worry will then be dispensed of.

THE POET EXPLAINS.
 "But," said the beautiful girl, "you don't look the least bit like a poet."
 "I realize that," replied the bard, "but I can easily explain. I know a barber who is willing to take my books in payment for professional services."

THE PROPER RELATION.
 "I say," said the disgusted old toper, "where's this prohibition business going to end? Is legislation being directed by the grandmothers?"
 "No," said the cackling idiot, "by the ants."—Baltimore American.

HIS FEAR.
 "And don't forget when you go downtown to-day," said the wife of the millionaire who was being tried for juggling with the books of the great institution of which he was the president, "to get 'Three Weeks.'"
 "I'd be mighty glad to do it, Maria," he replied, "but, between you and me, I'm afraid I'll get about five years."

INHERITED.
 "Mrs. Stilson," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "whatever her other shortcomings may be, does not lack aplomb."
 "Well," replied her hostess as she removed her $30,000 dog collar because it had become uncomfortably tight, "I don't see why she shouldn't. Her father was a plumber."

I had one foot in the grave but Electric Bitters put it back on the turf again, and I have been well ever since." Sold under guarantee at G. C. Darling's and J. E. Dillon's drug stores. 50c.

TAWAS CITY, MICH., APRIL 24, 1908

There were 3,381 deaths and 5,136 births in the state during March. The birth list is the highest ever recorded under the new registration law. One death resulted from smallpox.

The democratic state convention to elect delegates to the National convention to be held at Denver, Col., July 7, next, will be held in Lansing, Wednesday, May 29. Iosco county is entitled to two delegates.

The Saginaw Courier-Herald says, and the Saginaw Courier-Herald ought to know, that Bradley's entrance into the race for governor is likely to be followed by more announcements of the same character by various gentlemen whose friends consider them available gubernatorial timber.

Arguing in favor of reducing state expenses and thereby heading off a deficit in the state treasury, the Lansing Journal suggests that the clerical force in the state capitol be decreased ten per cent, and that the salaries of $1,000 be reduced to the amounts paid by private concerns for the same class of labor. The Journal suggests that the state stop paying the railroad fares of state appointees between Lansing and their homes.

If the sun were blue there would be only two colors in the world, blue and black; or if it were red everything would be red or black. In the latter case there would be red snow, red lilies, black grass, a black clear sky and red clouds. There would be a little variety, however, if the sun were green. Things that are now yellow would still remain that color, but there would be no reds, purples, orange or pinks and very few of those cheery hues that make the world bright and pleasant. Besides color the temperature of the earth would be very much changed.—Chicago News.

The tennis girl goes out to play her nerve producing game; the flip-pant girl goes out to lark because her life's too tame; the reading girl betakes herself into a world of books; the scheming girl to the seaside goes to fish with artful hooks; the flirting girl goes anywhere she thinks there is a man; the dressy girl goes to gay Paris to buy a dress and fan; the beauty goes upon the stage to show her handsome looks; but the girl who gets the husband stays right at home and cooks.—Ex

The average housewife will soon proceed to make life a burden to the rest of the inmates of the household. She will wrap around her head and wade into the dirt in a way that will make your head swim. She will tear up carpets, empty cupboards, look sour when you show up for dinner and slam and bang things around to a queen's taste, and if you don't like it you are told that the restaurant is at your service. Spring time is a very unhappy event when house-cleaning is on.

In a batch of official documents from the Philippines recently received appears evidence that some of Uncle Sam's servants over there are not averse to adding a bit, here and there, to their official salaries. An executive order by Governor General Smith calls attention to "reports that municipal officials, in a number of cases, have made it a practice to sell current unused postage stamps at a profit at times when such stamps could not be obtained at the local postoffice." The governor general orders the practice stopped, and adds that violations of this order will be considered sufficient cause for appropriate administrative discipline.

The Growth of the Direct Nomination Principle.

Nothing in recent political events has been more startlingly or profoundly significant than the evidences of the wide-spread growth of the sentiment for the direct nomination system. But a short time ago Illinois, in the teeth of the bitterest kind of opposition from every corrupt influence in the state and a well-trenched machine, adopted a primary law of a most sweeping character, placing in the hands of the voters the selection of their party candidates for every office from United States senator down to coroner. Pennsylvania has but just passed through her first experience under a new primary law, the direct result of the recent revolt in that state against corruption and machine control. New York within the past fortnight saw the beginnings of a fight for direct nominations as the first fruits of the failure of the New York state senate to pass Governor Hughes' anti-race-track gambling bill and other reforms insistently demanded by the people of the state under the leadership of their splendid governor.

Michigan herself has furnished three striking illustrations of the pervasiveness of the primary reform idea. In Ingham county an attempt was made to repudiate the direct nomination principle already adopted which failed ignominiously, failed although all of the activity was confined to the anti-reformers, the friends of the system feeling secure in the confidence that the people once having secured the right to name their own candidates would never yield that right at the behest of professional politicians.

In Tuscola county the issue was clearly drawn, it was primary reform vs. the old convention system, and primary reform won almost two to one. The fight was made the more spectacular since the anti-reformers were led by "Tip" Atwood, principal exponent of the old order of things political, while opposed to him was Governor Warner as the active champion of the reform ideas. However quite the most significant victory for primary reform was that in Van Buren county, where in large measure the organization men were a unit going as far as to publicly condemn and oppose the direct nomination principle in a mass convention. In spite of this the reform movement succeeded by 1,200 majority.

The victory for direct nominations in Michigan is fairly and permanently won.

The Stingy Man's Opinion.

The following article in the Atchison Globe is so apt and touches the spot so nicely in this city as well as many others, that we cannot refrain from giving our readers the benefit of it. "They say I am stingy. All right, let it go at that. I am stingy. But did you ever hear that I was a dead beat? There was a time when I threw my money away, and stood off my creditors, in order that I might be known as a good fellow; but now I save my money and pay my debts. There was a time when I spent ten dollars in an evening, bumping around with the boys, and owed the tailor for the clothes on my back; when I went riding every Sunday with a livery rig, and did not pay my board; when I thought it an evidence of smartness to buy cigars and drinks for other people; but I think it an evidence of sound sense for a man to save the money for which he is compelled to work, in order that he may realize something from it. For this I am called stingy, but I can stand it; in fact, I rather enjoy the title, for there are so many shiftless fools in this town who imagine that they are good fellows, hoping to realize on their wanton waste of money, that I am glad I cannot be classed among them. Ask the bill collectors about the good fellows. The bill collectors will tell you a story worth listening to and they will also tell you that the stingy men pay promptly. There are a lot of good fellows in Atchison who have not money enough to bury them, and there are stingy fellows in Atchison who began life under more unfavorable circumstances than the good fellows, and the stingy fellows are rich. I recommend that the young fellows deserve the name of being stingy, for a stingy man seldom stunts himself or his family, but he often refuses to throw his hard earned money away, and very properly. A stingy man is seldom bothered for donations, and, altogether, I like the name."

County Politics.

County politics are getting quite lively from the republican side of the fence and candidates are becoming numerous for several important pieces on the ticket, although at the present occupants of the court house will endeavor to hold their jobs.

It is conceded that Warren P. Vaughn, of Oscoda, who came within about 70 votes of an election in 1905, will again be the democratic candidate for sheriff this fall. Mr. Vaughn is a strong candidate and would make an ideal official.

It looks as though Judge Wier would have to go some to secure another nomination for judge of probate, there already being four or five candidates for the place. J. M. Walker, of this city, being the latest to "shy his castor" into the ring.

The democrats of the county are showing considerable activity this year, and are evidently going to put up a fight for a change in the administration of county affairs this fall. While they have no candidates who are going out, and fighting for places on the ticket, there are a number of good men in the county who are in a receptive mood, and it now looks as though they intended to give the republicans a run for their money.

Collie Johnson, Geo. H. Hadwin and David Davison are making a lively canvass for the republican nomination for sheriff, and at the present time it is hard to pick the winner.

Watching The Mail.

Postoffice Inspector Eugene Parsell, of Flint, says that when a regulation now being strictly enforced reaps the financial returns reasonably to be expected from it, an enormous sum will accrue to the government. In fact, the postoffice deficit will be materially reduced.

For the past year, a new force of clerks was put on in the postoffice of all the large cities, charged with the duty of opening every unsealed package for examination for violation of the law.

The complaints have become so numerous that the inspectors have been buried in work. Mr. Parsell, for instance, has recently had his district cut from 29 counties to nine.

He has many complaints against people for violating the postal regulations—tintag collectors, farmers, jewelers and other business men. He is empowered by the department to accept a fine of $10 for each violation, without any formality, like publicity or bringing of the culprits, many of whom are innocent of wrong intent, into court.

If a person refuses to pay the fine, the case is referred to the auditor of the postoffice department. There are a good many of unintentional violators who will have to be shown, and the cases are clogging the auditor's department. No action has been taken against those who stand pat, but the auditor is framing a uniform course of procedure against them, and it is expected that prosecutions will soon begin.

JOHNSON AT SHILOH

MINNESOTA EXECUTIVE MAKES NOTABLE ADDRESS.

QUESTION OF STATE RIGHTS

Does Not Approve of Commonwealths Being Made Subservient to Inferior Federal Courts—Would Uphold Constitution.

Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota delivered at the dedication of the Minnesota monument on Shiloh battlefield, April 10, an address that will rank as one of the ablest public deliverances of recent times. Spoken on a battlefield that may be taken as the symbol of the great war for the union, the governor took occasion to tell of the peril that threatens our federal form of government. This peril was emphasized by the recent decision of the supreme court in the railway cases going up from Minnesota and North Carolina, which practically makes the state governments subservient to the inferior federal courts. The significance of these decisions is widely understood, and they have given rise to a general discussion of the question of the rights of the states, and Gov. Johnson's speech will rank as an important contribution to that discussion. The dedicatory address in part follows:

Representing the people of the commonwealth of Minnesota, we are assembled on one of the historic battlefields of the civil war to pay our tribute of respect and affection to the memory of the sons of Minnesota who here yielded up their lives that this might continue to be a united nation. Their sacrifice was not for personal gain, but was in response to duty, and a contribution to the civilization of the age, and for the purpose of perpetuating the institution of human liberty.

I appreciate that nothing which I can say will add to or detract from the glory of their achievement, which in itself is an enduring monument to the patriotism and heroism of the American soldier. Their sacrifice, however, was not different from that which has been made throughout all of the ages by those lovers of liberty who believe in a government which might give to all the people the right to life, liberty and property. The love of liberty was not born in this country of ours; it was cradled along the Danube and about the shores of the Baltic, even when Rome had reached the limit of her imperial grandeur. Increasing in intensity with the passing of the centuries, it found its highest expression in the older countries in the great English charter of civil rights, which forever guaranteed to the people that land immunity from the despotism of those who claimed to rule by virtue of Divine right.

One hundred and thirty-two years ago the great contest of humanity was transferred from the old world to the new, and here, because of the isolation of this country, because of the high character of the man who espoused the cause of liberty, and because of the signal victory achieved by them in that struggle, an opportunity was afforded to crystallize into written law the aspirations of the patriots of all the ages. The men who built the foundations of this government were those who had submitted to the supreme test of patriotism, for those who inspired the constitution of the United States were the same who had pledged their lives, their properties and their sacred honor to the cause of independence.

While the primary object of a written constitution is to define governmental powers, and to limit governmental departments, the overwhelming necessity for such an instrument is to prevent insidious encroachments upon the rights of the individual citizen, both from those in office and from those who by reason of their wealth and power have an influence far greater than that possessed by the average citizen. And so the constitution of the United States was regarded by its framers as an instrument of the most sacred import, an alteration of which could only be made by the people themselves in whom all ultimate power is vested, and then only after the fullest discussion and widest publicity.

Under the beneficent government so established the nation has prospered and the people are happy. One great cloud came upon the nation in the form of an awful civil war, in which two sections of the country were in conflict with each other. The heroes who rest here gave their lives that this nation might be maintained as it came from our forefathers. On another battlefield of that war, Abraham Lincoln said: "It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated to the unfinished work they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion for that cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion; that we highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation, shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that the government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Our concern is not of the past, nor wholly with the present, but much with the future. If the destiny of the republic is in the hands of the American of to-day, then it becomes him to be guided and governed only by patriotic impulse and the desire to do that which will most largely contribute to the permanency of republican institutions. Advancing our civilization so that we will not, by recognizing the false claims of selfish interests, and forgetting the American maxim that our object should be to attain the greatest good for the greatest number, incur the penalty which other people have paid, rather let us hold ever in mind that those who framed our government believed in the equality of the people and that the chief aim of government is to maintain that equality.

Under our system of government the nation has reached a material development hitherto unknown. The people have prospered beyond the dreams of those who lived a century ago. But with the development of the country and changes in economic conditions, and particularly with the growth of great private corporations, performing many of the functions of government, has come the necessity for the exercise of strict governmental control, and a rigid enforcement of all the laws enacted to restrain the rich and powerful from encroaching upon the natural and legal rights of the poor and weak.

The constitution of the ancient republic of Rome, which for 500 years had recognized the voice of the people as supreme, was expanded by executive interpretation and contracted by executive administration, until Rome had so completely outgrown its democratic conditions as to become only a tragedy and a tradition. Let us explore the aid of Him on high to preserve us from the errors which ruined Rome, by the avoidance of which America may travel on to that destiny and realize that fulfillment which will be the inspiration of right-thinking men of all ages yet to come.

Our government is divided into three separate and distinct coordinate branches: the legislative, the executive and the judicial. Danger will surely come to this republic when any of these departments of government attempt in the slightest degree to usurp the functions of the other. And while now and then it may be that a court of the land, in construing the constitution, may nullify a section of it, I have the faith to feel that the people of the country will rise above the fallibility of judicial tribunals and assert and preserve their own rights. Our duty is not to criticize the executive, the legislature or the judiciary.

Very recently there has come from the highest judicial tribunal in the land a decision of vital interest and concern to the American people, because it has established a principle, as stated by one member of the court, which "would work a radical change in our governmental system and would inaugurate a new era in the American judicial system and in the relations of the national and state governments. It would enable the subordinate federal courts to supervise and control the official action of the states as though they were dependencies or provinces. It would place the states of the union in a condition of inferiority never dreamed of when the constitution was adopted or when the seventh amendment was made a part of the supreme law of the land." If this is the result of this decision, it is, to my mind, one of the unhappiest incidents in the history of our republic, because the very theory of our government is based upon the right of the states to control absolutely their own domestic affairs.

If, then, our whole system of government is changed, have we not only retarded the progress of the republic but have we not gone back a century toward a centralized form of government which is not to the advantage of the people? What this government needs is not more power. What it needs to-day is to so distribute the privileges under the government that all citizens will have equal opportunity. America has been called the land of opportunity. But American opportunity should not mean a granting of special privileges to any class, but should afford all alike the means for culture, education, prosperity and contentment.

For nearly a century and a half America has presented to the world the spectacle of a happy, prosperous and intelligent people, maintaining a pure democracy founded upon their supreme will. The hallmark of a democracy are close to the people. Throughout the world, wherever democracy is advancing, its progress is marked by a greater measure of self-government to each community. Will the American people turn to the setting rather than the rising sun? Shall we now, because some laws are found irksome to a class and interfere with their selfish aims, commence to deprive our sovereign states of that measure of home rule which until now they have seen fit to reserve to themselves? I cannot believe it. Upon the contrary I believe that the limitations upon state and federal governments, the nice balancing of the powers of each, and of the different departments in each, which have been so efficacious in the past, will be maintained in their full vigor in the future.

Therefore, discharging all of our responsibilities as citizens of a country, refusing to surrender our rights of citizenship in any degree, let us so live that the heroism exemplified on this and other American battlefields may not be simply a tradition, and the national wisdom of our forefathers a mere legend, but that through us and those to come America will reach her full destiny in the permanent establishment of a perfect union, which shall be not only a glory for us to-morrow, but for us to be so established that it shall be for all of the people, and that their government shall not perish.

SPECIAL PRIVILEGES TO NONE.

Surrender of government functions to private corporations under guise of protecting the national welfare cannot much longer receive the sanction of an intelligent people who believe the government was instituted for the protection of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. As long as government is the fountain of special privileges, powerful interest will dominate legislation. Law will be dictated by the corrupt lobby, corporations will control legislators and even judges, and executives will betray their trusts. As long as the law of the land is made the source of corporate dividends, the campaign contributions of corporate interests will control political conventions and the party machine for the nomination and election of its candidates, and our so-called "public servants" will be private agents for the public undoing. There is just one remedy for official bribery and campaign corruption, and that is, to remove the motive by cutting off all government grants of special privilege. The enforced guaranty of equal rights to all will free the party organization from corporate grasp and restore it to the common people. —GOV. JOHN A. JOHNSON.

County vs. City Press.

There is not a state in the union that has a daily newspaper carrying one-half the influence of its combined weekly or country press! The big city dailies carry great quantities of news, employ high-grade writers and exploit amazing features, they mirror the world's history faithfully, in the main.

But they long ago ceased to expect their opinions to be adopted by their readers as final and conclusive. We believe we do not overshoot the mark when we say: If the entire daily press in the union could be combined in one opinion, and set against the combined country press in another, the verdict of the great majority of the people would be adopted along lines suggested by the latter.—Fourth Estate.

Encourage The Boys.

When a boy labors on the farm all through his minority and comes to manhood's estate and feels that he has nothing that he can really call his own it is no wonder that he has a yearning to get out into the world and shift for himself where he has a chance to know how money of his very own feels. Let the lad have some animal or plot of ground which is really his own, and then let him realize the profits to be made from them. In this way he will feel a personal interest in farm matters and will learn by practical experience the ins and outs of stock raising and farming. This will fit him to the farm as nothing else will.—Tax.

He Got What He Needed.

"Nine years ago it looked as if my time had come," says C. Farthing of Mill Creek, I. E. "I was so run down that life hung on a very slender thread. It was then that my druggist recommended Electric Bitters. I bought a bottle and I got what I needed—strength. I had one foot in the grave but Electric Bitters put it back on the turf again, and I have been well ever since." Sold under guarantee at G. S. Darling's and J. E. Dillon's drug stores. 50c.

Woman's Home Companion

Herman Pfeiffer's beautiful prize cover gives much distinction to the May Women's Home Companion. Another notable feature of this magazine is a full-page reproduction of William Belfour Ker's painting "Memories." An aged Civil War veteran is carrying his colors in a Decoration Day parade, his eyes almost closed in reverie. Behind him crowd the vague, shadowy forms of the gallant youths who followed the colors with him nearly half a century ago.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale gives some good advice to young married folk. In "Are We Ready For Our Children?" Christine Terhune Herrick approaches the problem of the child in the family from an actual new point of view. "Europe on Five Dollars a Day" is the first of a series of articles on the best way to travel abroad. Every person who is married or hopes to marry will enjoy greatly the hot discussion on the marriage question, under the title, "Is there a panic in the Marriage Market?"

Mrs. Sangster talks to the American woman of her duties in entertaining her friends. The Summer Fashions, the Dressmaking Lesson, the Making of Lingerie Waists, are found in Grace Margaret Gould's Fashion Department. The other departments contain: "What to do With the Garden in May," recipes for Merritt Farmer; reviews of books; The Exchange, with its dozen of practical suggestions, and Sam Lord's Puzzle Page.

The May issue is rich in fiction—"Dog-in-the-Manger," "A Heart Specialist," "Pancake Neighbors," "The Gentle Highwayman," are titles which will give some idea of the entertainment this magazine contains.

A Twenty Year Sentence.

"I have just completed a 20 year health sentence, imposed by Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which cured me of bleeding piles just 20 years ago," writes O. S. Woolver, of LeRaysville, N. Y. Bucklen's Arnica Salve heals the worst sores, boils, burns, wounds and cuts in the shortest time. 25c at G. S. Darling's and J. E. Dillon's drug stores.

Encourage The Boys.

When a boy labors on the farm all through his minority and comes to manhood's estate and feels that he has nothing that he can really call his own it is no wonder that he has a yearning to get out into the world and shift for himself where he has a chance to know how money of his very own feels. Let the lad have some animal or plot of ground which is really his own, and then let him realize the profits to be made from them. In this way he will feel a personal interest in farm matters and will learn by practical experience the ins and outs of stock raising and farming. This will fit him to the farm as nothing else will.—Ex.

HIS ABLE DECISION.

Justice as It Was Dealt Out in a Certain Village.

The mayor of a village in a western state, under a law by which the mayor is also police judge, had before him a cattle stealing case.

Two men had stolen two steers and sold them to a butcher in the town for the extremely low price of $37.

Now, the jurisdiction of this mayor-police judge extended in such cases only to the limits of petty larceny, which required that the stolen articles be not of a value of more than $35. Beyond this amount the magistrate had to bind the prisoner or prisoners over to the circuit court, subject to the action of the next session of the grand jury. Likewise, in cases thus beyond his jurisdiction, the judge got no fee, and at this particular time, as at many others, he needed the money.

When the evidence had all been adduced the case was as plain as the roadbed on an elephant seen in profile. The men had stolen the cattle, had sold them for $37. No amount of questioning could make the butcher who had bought them say that it was $34.50 or any other amount short of the originally mentioned sum. Apparently no mayor's fee was in sight.

Then the mayor thus summed up the case:

"We have heard the evidence in this case, and the duty of the court is clear. These men stole the cattle. They sold them for $37. Taking the mere prima facie evidence and the bare letter of the law, it would seem that it was a clear and unmistakable case of grand larceny. But I have decided to allow the two prisoners $1 for driving the cattle in to the market. This reduces the selling price to $36, and I fine the two prisoners each $20 and costs. The court is adjourned."—Chicago News.

His Trouble.

In a small Georgia town live an old negro couple, the support for both being the wife. Uncle Zeke spends most of his time fishing in the brickyard pond, but that he expects to catch any fish, but "des ter hab some harmless 'musement, chile." Aunt Mary takes in washing.

One day one of Aunt Mary's patrons broached the subject to her and suggested that she should not encourage her husband's laziness by supporting him in idleness, but Aunt Mary protested.

"Deed, honey, mah ole man ain't lazy," she declared, "it's des dem scientific notions he dun got when he was a-weakin' at de college."

"But what have scientific theories got to do with his not working?" the lady demanded.

"Got or whole lot ter do, honey," Aunt Mary said, gathering up her basket. "Yo' see, dem ideas what he got was dat hit wasn't healthy ter work after meals, an' he ain't been able ter figger out no way ter 'compish dat, not yet—less he gits up out in, an' course he can't do dat!"—Philly delphia Ledger.

The Literal Victim.

They stood pensively on the platform of the toy railroad station at the beautiful suburb Bensonville.

"I understand you clearly," said the victim. "You told me that the property was but a stone's throw from the station. Where is it?"

"It's just up the road a bit," replied the real estate man.

"But it should be right here. You said a stone's throw."

"Yes."

"Now, see here, sir," cried the victim astutely, "you know damned well that a stone can't throw!"—Harper's Weekly.

How Long Will It Stay There?

There are times when I am blue, And you bet, I hate 'em too. There are times when there's no joy in anything.

When dark clouds come across my sky, When I almost want to cry, When I weep, instead of praise the birds that sing.

But that's when I'm busted flat, When I'm realizing that I'm right up against the commonest of woes.

But it's just the other way, There's no night—it's all bright day— I only have a dollar in my clothes.

There is nothing quite so sad To one almost always glad Than to know his pockets don't contain a cent.

All his cheerfulness will fade, Into deep despair he'll wade, And he'll wonder where on earth his money went.

But the sun will shine once more, Shine as brightly as before, And he'll feel a tinge of joy clear to his toes.

When the time arrives that he Can dig where his coin should be, And discover he's a dollar in his clothes!—Denver Post.

MISTAKEN IN THEIR JUDGMENT.

Prohibition Delegates Unable to Claim Stranger as Brother.

"You cannot always tell from the looks of a man what his business is," said a Chicago drummer. "Many of the jolliest looking men are undertakers, while many of the professional clowns are dyspeptic looking. I was a witness to a rather amusing experience of this kind one time out in Kansas. The train was pretty well crowded and I sat down opposite a party of three men, who afterward turned out to be prohibition candidates to some kind of a convention. At a little station along the way a tall, clerical looking old gentleman got on the train and, seeing the only available seat in one of the double ones occupied by the three delegates, sat down there. As time passed on the four engaged in conversation, the delegates evidently taking him for a brother member. Several remarks were passed regarding the prohibition work and the liquor traffic, and it was a noticeable fact that the new arrival did not warm up to the subject as much as some of the others. Finally one of the trio touched him on the shoulder and said: "Brother, are you truly making the good fight?" "Yes," replied the ministerial looking man, "and the bad ones, too. I'm a whisky salesman."

Her Troubles with French.

Marion is six years old, and her parents are so anxious she should speak French correctly and fluently that they employ a governess of that race to be with their daughter all the time. Marion is a little pitcher with big ears, and she picks up slang and worse forms of her native tongue with more readiness than she does the polite language of France. She does not get on very well with her instructors, and a change of tutors is a frequent occurrence in the household. Not long ago a new governess was installed and a visitor asked the child how she liked her new instructor.

"I don't like her at all," replied Marion. "She's altogether too particular about that damned subjunctive."

SAVE HIS NAME TO VEHICLE.

Army Doctor First to See Possibilities of "Buckboard."

"There are few persons who know how the name of 'buckboard' came to be applied to a vehicle," says a writer. "It was 'way back in the 20s, when the transportation of goods, wares and merchandise was almost entirely by wagon. A Dr. Buck was then in charge of military stores en route to army posts in the southwest. In east Tennessee much difficulty was experienced by reason of the rough roads and there were frequent mishaps, mostly from wagons overturning. Dr. Buck overhauled the outfit and, abandoning the wagon bodies, long boards were set directly on the axles or hung below and the stores were loaded in such a manner that there were no further delays from breakdowns and the stores safely reached their destinations. In special emergency, too, the load could be shifted or taken off in a hurry. Dr. Buck's example was followed, especially when roads were rough, and soon much hauling was done by the use of wheels, axles and boards only. Now we have the buckboard, both in carriage and automobile forms, conforming closely to the original idea, though few suspect the source of it."
