Among the excursionists who came to Tawas Beach last Sunday was an Indian, named John Jacobs, of Long Lake. He got on the Rose City train at East Tawas when it started for the Beach in the evening. While the train was backing into the Beach grounds Jacobs stood on the lower step of one of the coaches hanging far out when his head came in contact with a post and he was knocked to the ground. His left hand fell on the rail and the trucks passed over it, taking off the little finger. He was brought to this town where his hand was attended to, and he returned to his home Monday.

The Oscoda Press devoted about two columns of space last week in explaining the trouble over the ball game at AuSable on field day. They attempt to lay the blame of the trouble on Coach Wood, of East Tawas. The Press admits the throwing of stones at the players, and in fact the whole trouble but simply attempts to shift the blame. The fact is that there are a few rowdies in that town who go to every game not to do good clean "rooting" but simply to insult visiting players, and through this class the town has got the reputation of being a dirty ball town. That this is so is to be regretted as it has a tendency to injure a good clean sport.

New styles in furniture are arriving constantly at John Armstrong's.

SIXTEENTH ANNUAL

Commencement Exercises of the Tawas City Public Schools.

The 16th annual commencement exercises of the Tawas City high school were held at the court house June 25th and 26th. On Thursday evening occurred the Class Day program. The room was beautifully decorated with blue and gold—the class colors—and flowers in profusion gave added charm.

The march was played by a former graduate, Miss Theresa Shaver, of East Tawas, after which the invocation was given by Rev. J. Spencer Smith, followed by a vocal solo finely rendered by Mrs. Winnie Babcock.

The president's address by Ethel Garber was thoughtful, well delivered and appropriate. Evelyn Brabant followed with an essay entitled "Foot Prints," in which she not only showed how necessary it was to insure success that we follow, in a measure, the well beaten paths of history and tradition, but that we ourselves must pioneers blaze a trail in advance for others to follow.

Miss Lois Garber of the class of 1906 played an instrumental solo and was heartily encored.

Marguerite Baguley then recited the class history under the title of "A Peep Into The Past." She told the story of the trials, tribulations, and final success of the class in an amusing and humorous manner that well pleased the audience.

Ruth and Willena Murray gave a fine violin and piano duet which was highly appreciated by all.

The class poem by La Vina Cox was written in well chosen and dignified language and showed that much thought and care had been taken in its preparation.

Lucille Smith, under the title of "A Chat With The Archivist," portrayed the future of each member of the class, combining the sublime and ridiculous in such a manner as to keep the audience well entertained.

On Friday evening the Commencement Address was given by Prof. S. B. Laird, of the State Normal College, who spoke on the "Scope and Value of an Education." It was one of the best addresses ever given in Tawas City. The invitation of the class to Prof. Laird was a fitting tribute of respect and esteem to one, who, thirty-two years ago became superintendent of Tawas City schools and for seven years was the instructor of their parents, friends and neighbors. In the absence of the president of the board Mr. J. H. Nisbet in well chosen words presented the class with their diplomas.

The music for the evening was furnished by Miss Lottie Welton, Mrs. Conant, and Mrs. FitzSimmons of Chicago. At the close of the exercises an informal reception was tendered Prof. Laird and many a hearty hand shake and pleasant word was passed between teacher and former pupils.

RELEASED ON DEATH MISSION.

Italian Lover's Vengeance Aided by a Jailer.

Giuseppe Seroa, a workman, aged 25, was arrested some weeks ago at Bari, Italy, for a burglary in which he was implicated and sentenced to four months' imprisonment.

He spent the first part of his imprisonment in counting the days until his release, when he would be married to his sweetheart, who had sworn that she would never forsake him.

But one day the jailer told him that the marriage bans of the girl and another man had been published.

Seroa was terribly upset, and declared that he would rather see the girl dead than married to anyone else.

The jailer later agreed that he was right, and after some hesitation he acceded to the prisoner's request to let him go and kill her.

Seroa swore solemnly that he would not carry an instant longer than was necessary for the deed, and the jailer released him to fulfill the noble duty of a lover.

Seroa returned to prison a couple of hours later. He had stabbed the girl dead, and was content to await his own further punishment. The jailer has been arrested.

HERE'S REAL SAFETY ENVELOPE.

Ingenious Device for Double Locking a Letter.

A new envelope made in Paris is proof against the thief or the meddling who opens a letter to extract, or to read its contents and then reveals it so cleverly as to hide any sign of it having been tampered with.

The new envelope is really two envelopes. Each is of thin paper, one a pronounced blue, the other lighter in color and different in texture. Each has a gummed flap.

The letter is first placed in the blue envelope, which is slightly smaller than the other. Instead of sealing this it is placed in the outer envelope and the inner flap brought outside and gummed down on to the larger envelope.

The outer flap is still unsealed. It is much larger than the inner flap and reaches down to a good-sized, slanted opening which shows through to the inner envelope, so that when the outer flap is sealed it sticks not only to the outer envelope but also through this opening to the inner one.

The letter is thus practically locked and double locked.

Bryan's Present Popularity

Gradually the more conservative leaders of the democratic party, and especially those of the Eastern State, have come into cordial relations with Mr. Bryan; so that he is in a position of favor and good standing that he did not enjoy the conventions of 1896, 1900, and 1904. In those conventions the strain between the conservative and radical wings of the party was so severe that much of the energy was wasted in factional strife which should have been expended in wisely concerted assault upon the opposing party. All these things are recalled to mind in order to bring out clearly by contrast the very different position in which Mr. Bryan finds himself this year. His party will be more harmonious than in any previous political year since he has been identified with it. He has made steady growth in acquaintance and in popular good-will by virtue of the exercise of the two professions which he has now for a good while past been carrying on. His chief work is that of a platform lecturer, in which capacity he has been almost everywhere in the country speaking to large audiences often upon subjects not a controversial sort, and by his eloquence and tact dispelling that strong prejudice against him that had survived from the bitter fight against free silver. His other calling is that of an editor and writer, and his weekly paper has kept him in touch with large numbers of his political followers. He is ten times as widely acquainted with men in all walks of life as any other member of the democratic party. He is more in demand as a speaker than ever before, and his readiness and skill as an orator have greatly increased. From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for July.

A Hot Shot for the Catalog Houses

When the catalog come from your mail order house, draw an easy chair to the table where the light will shine full upon the page, and put on your glasses, that no bargain may escape your eye.
 How wonderful it is, to be sure! Wonderful for what it does not contain, as well as what it does. You will miss some thing you would be glad to see. Where is their offer to pay cash or exchange goods for your wheat, oats, corn, butter, eggs and hay.
 How much tax will they pay to support your school and educate your children—for improving roads and bridges, the support of the poor of the county, for the expense of running the township, county and state.
 On what page is their offer to contribute money to the church?
 What line of credit will they extend to you when your crops are poor and your money gone—when through illness or misfortune you are not able to send cash with order for your groceries, clothing, farm tools and crockery? Also stoves and ranges.
 Where is their offer to contribute to your entertainment next year?
 In short, will they do anything to provide a market for what you have to sell, and thereby keep up the value of your estate? Will they do anything for social, church, school government support, or do they take your dollar out of the community with no returns except the goods you buy?
 Think this over carefully, then call on your local dealer, where you can see and examine goods before you buy them, and by comparison of prices and quality you will see that you can do as well or better at home thereby helping to build up your local town.

Conserving Our National Wealth

That was a notable and epoch-making conference at the White House in May, when thirty-eight governors and a number of other distinguished citizens of the Union met, by invitation of the president, to discuss the most important question of our time—namely, the conservation of the natural wealth of the nation as it is contained in its forests, mines, soils, and in its streams and lakes. The pioneer era is of necessity a wasteful one. In hewing a home out of the wilderness it almost always happens that much of immense value to posterity is destroyed; time has now come to sound the warning against further waste and to stay the hand of the iconoclast.
 The immense wealth which the nation possesses in its forests and soil; in its coal, iron, oil and gas deposits; in the unharmed energy of its streams, and in the transportation possibilities of its water ways, must now be jealously conserved, not only for those who shall come after us; for they belong not to this generation only, nor to a few syndicates, but to all the people of this great and bountifully provided lands of our all time.

The warning sounded by President Roosevelt comes none too soon. Already the axe is laid to the root of the few remaining forests ranges, and already the hand of monopoly is reached out to sequester the mine, the water-power and the other national resources. The conference was the first step toward the great awakening, and the Farm Journal, as the advocate of the right of the plain people to full participation in their natural wealth, was glad to have been invited to participate in the White House Conference, and to have been present during all of the sessions. We shall endeavor to do our part in the great work.—Farm Journal.

Ten Thousand Dollar Men Wanted

Mr. Edison takes a deep interest in young men and offers them much encouragement. "Today is youth's zenith in this great country" is the way he cheers them on.
 "The United States is starving for ten-thousand dollar men. Corporations are actually clamoring for them; and the younger the better. But the man today must be technically educated. Modern industrial, financial and commercial conditions are more complicated than ever before and it takes a trained mind and a level head to get to the front.
 "The demand for educated men, chaps that have brains, exceeds anything that I have ever known. They are doing the work, too; that's why more are wanted. So now is the time for the man who is going to make something of himself to get busy. If he is any good he won't be out of a job long; not much. There is entirely too much work to do and too few of the right kind of persons to do it.
 "If you don't believe it, take a peep into the gigantic plant of a concern like the Bethlehem Steel company. Yes, sir, we are starving for brains—or ten thousand dollar men, if that way of putting it appeals more strongly to the young American instinct."—Selected.

When One Spends Money

One would think that money would be saved in prosperous times when there is plenty of it about. But no, that is not the time when it is saved. It is then that it is spent says Appleton's. Everybody spends it—governments, railroads, corporations, capitalists, housekeepers, house builders, collectors. People expand their wants in such times and satisfy some of them, and then is when it is most impossible to live on anything a year. But after all the money has been spent a few times over and has begun to be scarce, and borrowing has come to be a serious matter, and folks have much less to spend and no expectations that everybody groans and begins to save not only trying desperately to squeeze back inside the bounds of income, but to pay back what was spent in expectation of a time when saving would have become inconvenient. To most of us that time never comes. And yet there are things for which we spend more than we can afford that really do justify our expenditures, so that after the money has been spent and we are pinched for the lack of it, we would still rather have what it brought than to have the money back.

The Remedy That Does.

"Dr. King's New Discovery is the remedy that does the healing others promise but fail to perform," says Mrs. E. K. Pierson, of Auburn Centre Pa. "It is curing me of throat and lung trouble of long standing, that other treatments relieved only temporarily. New Discovery is doing me so much good that I feel confident its continued use for a reasonable length of time will restore me to perfect health." This renowned cough and cold remedy and throat and lung healer is sold at Jas. E. Dillon's and G. S. Darling's drug stores. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Mr. Harden is right; it's the best of all medicines also for weakness, lame back, and all run down conditions. Best too for chills and malaria. Sold under guarantee at Jas. E. Dillon's and G. S. WANTED COMPANY IN MISERY.

Stranger Asked for Directions at Un-fortunate Moment.

"I beg your pardon," said the stranger on the bicycle, riding slowly up to the sidewalk and steadying himself by putting his foot on the curb, "but I am looking for a restaurant where I can get a good meal. Can you direct me to one?"

The man whom he addressed was standing in front of a store, trying to rub a grain of sand out of his eye with one hand and holding his hat on with the other, for it was a windy day, and at first he made no response. But presently he spoke.

"Go to the next block," he said, "and turn to the right. Four doors down you will find a restaurant."

The stranger thanked him and rode on. About an hour later they accidentally met again. The stranger was on his way out of town. He stopped and spoke.

"My friend," he said, "I followed your directions. I went to the restaurant you directed me to, and I got the worst meal I ever had in my life."

"I thought you would," answered the other. "If you had waited till I got that grain of sand out of my eye I should have sent you to a good restaurant, but you didn't. I just had to divide my misery with somebody, and you happened to be handy."—Youth's Companion.

Turks as Beggars.

Beggars are never suppressed in Turkey. An American lady by mistake gave a beggar of Constantinople a gold piece. The man had left his post when she returned, but one of his colleagues told her where he "resided." It was a fine house, and at the door was a servant who politely informed the lady that "my master is dressing. He will be down soon." And then the well-groomed beggar, dressed for dinner, appeared and gladly returned the gold piece, exclaiming in the meanwhile that such mistakes were highly embarrassing.—Charities and The Commons.

Making Shakespeare Ancient.

A well-known dramatic critic visiting Stratford on Shakespeare's birthday and hearing the clangor of the bells, which, from their tower in the old church where the poet lies buried, awoke the little town to its devotions, approached a dour-headed street sweeper in front of Irving's inn and said: "Who is the fellow they're making this fuss about? I see you have Shakespeare hotels, Shakespeare gingerbread, and only the other day I saw a man driving to town some pigs called 'Shakespeare's best'—who is he—the fellow who lived in that tumble-down shanty yonder?" The "old-est inhabitant" nonplussed his ear and wheezing replied: "I think he writ." "Oh, he writ, did he? What did he write—books, confessions of a deer-stealer, magazine articles—what?" "I think he writ for the Bible."

[We have received an extensive reply to the remarks of our Ellake correspondent in the last issue, relative to the South Branch Long Lake ball game of the week previous. There are always two sides to these questions, and the South Branch boys claim the game by a score of 14 to 12. They also claim that at the previous game played at South Branch, they endeavored to give the boys from the Lake a good time, but that their treatment at the return game was far from the best. The article received deals too much in generalities and brings in people who undoubtedly had nothing to do with the game, which is our reason for not publishing it.—Editor.]

Ignorance of the Bible.

Biblical allusions, which permeate our literature, touch no responsive chord in the majority of college students nowadays, writes Prof. W. L. Cross, in Education. Though some of them are fairly familiar with names like Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Samson, David and Daniel, very few know anything about the lives of these men as related in the scriptures. Not long ago, to recall an extreme case, not one of 40 students under my instruction could quite place Judas Iscariot, and a venerable colleague of mine discovered a Jew among the seniors who had never heard of Moses. To lift the burden of this ignorance, several colleges have recently incorporated parts of the Old Testament into their most elementary courses in English with great success from the standpoint both of the student and of the instructor. But a knowledge of the Bible obviously belongs to an earlier stage than this. It is a pity that political and religious considerations stand in the way of introducing into the public schools an available body of splendid literature. Fortunately politics and prejudice cannot hamper many of the large preparatory schools.

Her Sublime Admiration.

"Oh, dear, will you look at it again?" sighed Mrs. Howard Newcome in an ecstasy of bliss. "Isn't it magnificent? Turn this way now. A side glance brings out the traditional beauty. I have never seen anything so perfectly exquisite. Dear, do come over here and look at it from this view. One would never believe that such a lovely thing existed in the world. The perspective is simply grand. How inspiring and noble. Here is another view from the right. Doesn't it show off even to better advantage? I am simply enraptured with admiration."
What is Mrs. Newcome looking at? Some masterpiece in a picture gallery?
No, indeed. It is an old kitchen chair she purchased at a second-hand store, which she thinks is a "genuine antique."—The Bohemian.

IT WILL BE RALPH HEREAFTER.

A Youngster's Outspokenness That Taught Grandpa a Lesson.

There is a very well-known man in Brooklyn who is particularly proud of his grandson, a bright boy of four years and a few months. But, like all fond grandpas, he believed teasing amusing to the child as well as to himself—and he recently received the shock he deserved. The little lad was playing industriously with a doll when the proud grandpa said:
"My! playing with a doll—why your name must be Susie—not Ralph."
No word from the boy, who kept right on playing with the doll.
"Susie," said the grandpa, just rushing to his fate, "do you like dolls?"
The boy moved perceptibly, but clung to the doll.
"Dear little Susie—you used to be a boy."
The boy lifted his head indignantly and with deep pathos, said: "Grandpa, I hate to tell you so, but you're a d— fool."
Great was the consternation of the grandfather and amazement of the mother, who tragically ordered the boy to his room, while she called attention to the tears that rolled down her cheeks at such a fearful offense. Finally she told the little fellow that he might be forgiven if he begged his grandpa's pardon. But the boy believed his grandpa the offender and said so. His mother sternly read him a lesson against profanity, and especially about disrespect to grandparents. The little fellow was touched, and going over to his grandpa said, compromisingly:
"I am sorry I called you a d— fool—but if I cannot call you a fool can I call you a lemon?"
Hereafter grandpa will call Ralph by his right name.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Naming the Baby.

The naming of a baby is considered important even among people whom we are apt to regard as uncivilized. And, curiously enough, these very folk contrive to avoid the arguments that so often ensue when father and mother disagree over whether the little stranger shall be called Jack or Marmaduke, Priscilla or Jane.
The Mahometan father and mother each write the choice of a name on a slip of paper and place both in the Koran. Whichever slip is drawn first is the name given to the child.
A pretty Egyptian custom is to light three candles, naming each after a god or some exalted personage. The child is called after the candle which burns longest.
Hindu mothers name their children, paterfamilias not having a word to say in the matter. The naming ceremony usually takes place when the baby is about 12 days old, and a flower name is usually chosen.
Chinese girls are simply numbered one, two, or three, until they reach years of discretion, when they are allowed to choose a name for themselves. The boys, however, are given a temporary name until they are 20, when pa decides what magnificent appellation they shall rejoice in for the rest of their lives.—N. Y. Weekly.

RECORDED THE TRUTH ALWAYS.

Wordsworth's Poetry Set Against His Failure as Correspondent.

Wordsworth, except by virtue of one quality, was not remarkable as a letter writer. His happiest moods were those "trances of thought and mountings of the mind" which came to him when wandering among the hills or seated upon some old, gray stone. The act of penmanship was always a distress to him; in his elder years he was troubled with inflammation of the eyes, and he often dictated his letters. He could chain his mind to record facts, but to do so implied a state of servitude. He cared little for the letters of great writers, and expressed a wish that his own might do destroyed. He had no pleasant mallet eager to escape from the tip of the pen, such as Horace Walpole had. He had no bubbling mirth which will not be repressed like that of Lamb. He could not engrave an exquisite vignette for a friend's delight and his own, like Cowper. His pen was not an etcher's needle, nor a dagger to stab, nor a sword to cut, nor a hobby horse on which to canter. But to set over against all this Wordsworth could write the truth, and the truth he invariably wrote.
In Memory of Old Hickory.
If the spirit of "Old Hickory" should decide to journey to the spot near which he entered the earthly house of this tabernacle in 1767 he would hardly recognize the place, so great has been the change. The wilderness has been made to bloom, and in its midst stands the thriving town of Waxhaw. He would soon discover, however, that he is not forgotten, for a bronze tablet on the railroad station proclaims the fact that near this place Andrew Jackson was born. And Squire Henry N. McWhorter, who lives hard by, is always ready to greet the spirit of the great Andrew with "Welcome, dear guest and ghost."

Rule of Character.

Our own problem looks exceptional to us, but it is not. The next man we meet has an equally hard sum on his slate and is working it out or giving it up, quite in our own fashion. We think, perhaps, that riches would solve our difficulty for us in no time, or pleasure would soften it, or change would substitute an easier one. But in reality there is only one rule by which to work it out—the rule of character.
