Merchant's Best Friend.

Addressing an audience in Elmira on advertising recently, Henry Watson Cornell of Chicago said that the best returns came to the merchant who bases his appropriation upon the volume of expected trade and upon the facilities of his store and then spends his money intelligently. The speaker continued:

"Under conditions that exist to day there is but one of two courses before a merchant—he must either advertise in the newspapers and get high prices for his goods through creating a demand for them or he must at the end of a season throw a mass of unsold goods on the counters at greatly reduced prices.

"The worst features of the plan whereby the goods are left over to be sold under cost is the fact that it educates the public to the expectation of lowest prices. Everything that so educates the people is detrimental to trade.

"These mill end and specialist sales are the worst features of that form of merchandising that is fast passing from the arena. The influence of these sales has all been toward teaching the people to put off buying until late in the season and toward a constantly descending scale of prices during the season.

"The newspaper is the merchant's best friend his sharpest tool in his trade and his best weapon of defence in the insidious attack of the mail order house. The ad. man is not a grafter looking for money for nothing. He is a merchant with a legitimate proposition to offer, and his work is more valuable to the merchant and to the city than almost any other."

Mr. Cornell added that merchants who do not patronize the home newspapers because some of their competitors do not, generally fail to realize who their real competitors are. The merchants of a city must realize that every mail and every foreign newspaper that goes into the home of a city contains the letters and advertisements of competitors and that every advertisement so reaching the citizens of a town is a menace to that town.

What We Die Of

Almost all men die of disappointment, passion, mental or bodily toil, or accident, or a combination of some of those causes. The passions act more suddenly than any of the other of these causes, because usually working more violently and virulently. The passions kill men sometimes even instantly. The common expression, choked with passion has but little exaggeration in it, and if we but knew the many deaths arising therefrom, that a kindly disposed physician has attributed to more natural or mild causes, we would be amazed, for even though not necessarily suddenly fatal, it is a physiological fact that passions shorten life.

Strong bodied, full-condition men often die young—weak men frequently, if not commonly live longer than strong men, for the strong profigately use their strength, vitality and energy, while the weak have little to use, and carefully husband the little they have. The weak take care of themselves, and the other do not. As with the body, so with the mind and temper. The strong are apt to break, or like the candle, to run; but the weak burn out.

The inferior animals, which live temperate lives, have, generally, their prescribed number of years. The horse lives twenty-five years, the ox fifteen to twenty, the lion about twenty, the dog ten or twelve, the rabbit eight, the guinea pig six or seven years. These all bear a similar proportion to the time the animal takes to mature to its full size.

But man, of all the animals, is the one that seldom lives its average. He ought to live more than a hundred years, according to physical laws; for five times twenty are one hundred, but in stead of that he scarcely reached an average of four times his growing period; the cat six times; the rabbit even eight times the standard of measurement. The reason is obvious—man is not only the most irregular and the most in-temperate, but the most laborious and hard worked of all the animals. He also is the most irritable of all the animals; and there is no reason to believe, though we cannot tell what an animal secretly feels, that, cherishes wrath to keep it warm and consumes himself with the fire of his secret reflection.

The Evil in Fretting.

There is one sin which seems to us is everywhere and by everybody underestimated and quite too much overlooked in valuation of character. It is the sin of fretting, so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes more or less complaining statement of something or other, which most probably every one in the room, or in the car, or on the street, or in the office, may be, know because which probably no one can help, say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment; ill cooked a meal; stupidly or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort.

There are plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance may be found in the course of every day's living, even at the simplest, if one only keeps a sharp eye out on that side of things. Even holy writ says we are prone to trouble as sparks flying upward in the blackest smoke there is a blue sky above, and the less time they waste on the road the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—Selected.

Joseph G. Dimmick for County Treasurer.

Joseph G. Dimmick, of East Tawas, announces himself a candidate for the office of treasurer of Iosco county, and he will ask for the nomination at the hands of the republican county convention, when held early in September.

Mr. Dimmick has been a resident of Iosco county and of East Tawas all his life, and he has, since reaching his majority, taken an active interest in public matters, social, industrial and political. He has held several offices of public trust, including several years as a member of the board of supervisors, and he has proven himself capable and trustworthy at all times. He has been a tax-payer for more than twenty years, having had property assessments even before he became of age.

Mr. Dimmick has been faithful to the principles of the republican party, and has supported the men and measures of this political faith since he became a voter, 20 years ago and he believes he has earned some recognition, and having a desire to fill the treasurer's office he asks the support of the party leaders in securing the coveted prize.

It Can't Be Beat.

The best of all teachers is experience, C. M. Harden, of Silver City, North Carolina, says: "I find Elee trie Bitters does all that's claimed for it. For stomach, liver and kidney troubles it can't be beat. I have tried it and find it a most excellent medicine." Mr. Harden is right; it's the best of all medicines also for weakness, lame back, and all run down conditions. Best too for chills and malaria. Sold under guarantee at Jas. E. Dillon's and G. S. Darling's drug stores 50c.

For Prosecuting Attorney

Edwin Rawden, the present incumbent of the office of prosecuting attorney, has had charge of the same for eighteen months. That he has filled it to the satisfaction of the great majority of the citizens of Iosco county there can be no question, judging from the expressions heard from those who have knowledge of and are conversant with the affairs of the office.

During the first year of his term his reports to the Attorney General of the state showed the following:

Number prosecuted,	41
Number convicted,	33
Number acquitted,	1
Number dismissed on payment of costs,	4
Number discharged on examination,	3

The figures for the six months end June 30, 1908, will show as large a percentage of convictions in the cases tried. Mr. Rawden has been careful in conducting the affairs of the office and has very carefully scrutinized and investigated every complaint before issuing a warrant.

Two of the cases prosecuted during his first year in the office were murder cases, perhaps as heinous crimes as were ever committed in Iosco county, in both cases convictions were secured at very little expense to the county. The convicted persons are now paying the penalty of their crimes with life sentences one at Jackson and the other at the Marquette state prison.

One of the tests of a lawyer's ability, and perhaps the one most used by the average individual, is his ability to win cases. No one can say, after looking over Mr. Rawden's record as prosecutor, that he has not been successful.

He has now pending in the probate court for Iosco county a proceeding to compel a guardian of an insane person to turn over money in her hands belonging to the insane person, to the county treasurer to reimburse the state and county for money expended in caring for the insane person and this action will result in the money being recovered for the state and county.

At the coming republican county convention he will ask that he be accorded the compliment of a re-nomination for a second term, firmly believing that the record he has made in the office will entitle him to this honor.

Mr. Rawden will be 37 years of age before his present term of office ends and his years at the bar of Iosco county and his one term as prosecuting attorney will fit him for better and more efficient service during a second term.

He is a graduate of law department of the University of Michigan, graduating from that institution with the class of 1901. His preparation for the practice of his chosen profession together with the seven year's experience certainly ought to equip him for good service for the people of the county.

Mr. Rawden stands upon the record he has made as a lawyer, as a citizen and as prosecuting attorney for one term, and upon his record alone when he asks that a re-nomination for a second term be accorded him.

The Remedy That Does.

"Dr. King's New Discovery is the remedy that does the healing others promise but fail to perform," says Mrs. E. R. Pierson, of Auburn Centre, Pa. "It is curing me of throat and lung trouble of long standing, that other treatments relieved only temporarily. New Discovery is doing me so much good that I feel confident its continued use for a reasonable length of time will restore me to perfect health." This renowned cough and cold remedy and throat and lung healer is sold at Jas. E. Dillon's and G. S. Darling's drug stores. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

IN SACRED KEEPING

WIDOW HELD HER HUSBAND'S LITERARY TREASURES.

Not All the Wealth of New York, She Declared, Would Tempt Her to Part with the Books He Loved.

A New Yorker who returned a few days ago from the Catskill mountains tells of an old woman he met, who lives in a cottage just outside the little town of Cairo. This woman, a Mrs. Gary, he discovered, has a valuable collection of books which belonged to her husband, who at one time kept a second-hand store in Washington, D. C., and who died about 20 years ago.

"I stumbled on the little wooden house and its occupant by chance," said he, "and it is a meeting I shall long remember. I followed her up an uncarpeted stair, through a bare room to where the books were. They lined a dozen rough shelves and littered the floor. Evidently they had not been disturbed for years. Piles of handsome volumes in worn leather covers lay smeared in cobwebs and dust. I stooped down to pick up a book.

"Stop!" she cried, grabbing my arm. "You must not touch them! They were his, and you must not touch them!"

"Gradually, however, she relented. I was allowed to open some of the volumes under protest. Rare books they were. Three first editions, which lay half hidden in a pile of broken plaster would have brought, I believe, a total of $500 at a book connoisseur's sale in New York; one copy of Poe, which I would have liked much to possess, lay in a moldy condition on the sill of the little attic window; several rare volumes of Dickens' works and an equally rare copy of Longfellow I found behind an immense traveling trunk, squeezed and scratched deplorably. Treasure met my hand and eye everywhere.

"Why," I protested, "if you took these books to New York and placed them with proper persons you'd make a small fortune."

"To New York?" she echoed, raising her hands in alarm. "No, indeed, all the wealth of New York would not tempt me to part with one of them. They were his; that's enough for me. 'Take care of my books, Jane'—that was about the last words he said to me before he died. I have respected his wish, for they are here as he left them. You are the first to lay a finger on them, and you'll likely be the last, for before I follow him I'll make sure that his books'll fall into no strange hands. Here, during the latter years of his life, on the oak chair under the skylight, he would sit for hours and days on end with no company but his books. That night that was his last he was here for hours. When he came down to the sitting room he could not rest, and he said to me: 'I'm going back to my books, Jane, and may read till late. Get to bed if you wish, and never mind me.' So I went to bed, and on awakening at the first glimmer of dawn I saw I was still alone. I cried 'Andrew!' but no answer came; then I stole out and went up stairs. Ah, I remember as if it were yesterday. He sat here with his head down on his chest—dead. This book was in his left hand and his right gripped the chair arm like a vise. That other book on the floor lay as it lies now, open with its face down. There I have left it. No hand shall touch them. And so we walked silently out of the musty room, and she locked the door."

Steel—Touchstone of Fortune.

Steel with its billion of money; Steel, with its myriad glowing furnaces, its thundering mills, and its smokestacks thick as stalks in a cornfield; Steel, with its thousands upon thousands of miles of ore land and coal land and gas land; Steel, with its endless railroads and its fleets of vessels; Steel, with its swarming populations of workmen and its trade lines penetrating every business and every corner of the world, has become the touchstone of our fortunes and the barometer of our condition.

They used to say: "As New York goes, so goes the Union." Now they say that as Steel goes, so goes the whole mighty current of American business. We live and work in steel buildings, we ride in steel cars and steel ships, our intercourse is over steel wires—we are encompassed and entwined and connected, transported, and finally entombed by steel. We are Steel and Steel is us.—Harper's Weekly.

Slightly Influenced.

"Rastus," said the candidate, "did you ever sell your vote?" "No, sirree," was the emphatic answer. "But when a man comes around and he's me out a little wif de rent and de grocery bill, I owes him a little pure friendship, doesn't I?"—Washington Star.

Historical Revelation.

"How could you distinguish Achilles from the girls?" asked the Greeks. "How could you see that he was a man in woman's garb?" "He didn't," explained Ulysses. "drop his handkerchief every time he turned around."

Affirmed The Decision

The supreme court last week handed down an opinion in a case of local interest. Suit was brought by Wm. Mott, formerly of Lapeer, against W. C. Penoyer of Bay City, for damage sustained by the complainant in a lumbering contract given him by Penoyer. Instead of owning the lumber which he had engaged Mott to cut, it was set up that most of the stumpage was on the state lands, and Mr. Mott was obliged to discontinue his work after he had gone to considerable expense in getting camp equipment and supplies for a year's work.

The case was started in Osceola county, and was transferred to Iosco county on change of venue. It was tried in July, 1906, and was one of the hardest contested cases ever appearing on the Iosco calendar.

The jury gave a judgment of $1,414.75 and costs in favor of Mr. Mott. The defense immediately appealed to the supreme court.

Readers Should Be Warned.

Readers of Sunday papers, and especially women and children, should be warned not to reply to advertisement offering "free" and "gift" articles. So soon as a reply is received the advertiser sends a box of trashy trinkets to be sold and the money remitted and promises that the "free" and "gift" article shall then be forwarded. As you do not care to turn peddler without a license and as no stamps are inclosed for the return of the goods, the box is put aside to be called for. Nobody calls it, and the matter is soon forgotten. But at the end of a year a mail order collection agency writes you of "intent to defraud" and demanding payment for the forgotten goods under the extreme penalties of the law. Most of the threatened persons send the money, because the amount is comparatively small and because they do not care to be involved in expensive legal proceedings. The proper course when caught in this trap is to transmit documents to the postmaster general. But the fraudulent game must be profitable, for large factories in New England are supported by it, and it advertises largely and maintains several so called magazines to circulate its misleading "free" and "gift" offer through the clogged mail—Town Topics.

"Local Option" Beer.

Local option beer is the latest. Several breweries have solved the problem of developed a thirst-killer minus the "jag" producing powers of the common or garden variety of beer. And the way this liquor is being sold in towns in the "dry belt" is said to be really amazing. Large quantities are shipped out of London every day, and the breweries cannot keep pace with the demands. The new beer looks like the old kind, color and all, and it so resembles it in taste that the most hardened consumer can scarcely tell the difference. That difference is merely in the after-effects. Common beer contains 3 per cent or a trifle more alcohol. The new beer contains less than 2 per cent, or, to be exact, 1.66 per cent of alcohol. That allows the beer to be sold as a temperance drink. The act now reads that anything under 2 per cent alcohol is a temperance drink, and as the local option beer is well within the mark, it must be classed as a temperance beverage. This is a fast age. With horseless carriages, smokeless powder and many other things that nature, comes "jagless booze."—St. Thomas (Can.) Times.

MULE PROVED RIGHT

DID WELL TO STAY OUT IN OPEN DURING STORM.

Call it Stubbornness or Prescience, or Anything You Wish, But His Action Saved the Life of His Rider.

"Everybody knows that all mules are brainy, but the mules of Old Mexico have something on other mules for a sort of prescience of their own," said a man who has spent many years in the neighboring republic, to a New York Sun writer. "A Mexican mule will do just so much work and not a bit more.

"The riding mule, for instance, is fully aware of the distance, down to a rod, he is supposed and required to traverse in the progress of one traveling day, and all the sharp sticks or goads or dynamite on earth won't get him to do a bit more than what he knows to be the correct distance. The Mexicans have a peculiar saying in connection with this characteristic of the Mexican mule. You ask a Mexican, for instance, how far it is by muleback to such and such a point.

"Two days' journey if you are not rushed, but three days if you are in a hurry," the Mexican will reply. "His meaning is that if you don't ask any more of your mule than you should ask of him the brute will be able to make the trip in two days. But if you attempt to drive the brute he'll soldier on you, and in consequence the journey will take you three days.

"Now for the prescience of which I spoke. I don't know what else to call it. The latest instance I saw of it was when I was riding through the state of Sonora a month or so ago on an old gray mule that knew every turn and twist of the road I was taking so thoroughly that I let the bridle reins hang and permitted him to go it alone. "Along toward evening a terrible thunder storm came up. The air was heavy with the fumes of sulphur—something I had heard about but had never experienced before—and the flashes were deafening. The road was rocky and bad and there was only an occasional scrub pine alongside.

"The old gray mule, when the storm reached its height, stopped his jog of a sudden and stood in the middle of the road, peacefully enough. He wasn't worried, apparently, but he considered that that was a pretty good place to stand during the continuance of the tremendous electrical storm, for it was out in the open.

"For myself, I wanted to get under the shelter of a pine tree about a hundred yards ahead of me. But the mule wouldn't and wouldn't see that. Him for the open, and there he stood.

"I prodded him with the spurs, but he merely looked around at me in a disgusted sort of way. Then I dismounted and tried to lead him. Nothing doing. He wouldn't budge.

"So at length, giving in to him that he knew more about it than I did, I wrapped my poncho about my head and stood at his head, waiting for the storm to pass. I hadn't stood by the mule in that way for more than three minutes before I saw a couple of balls of red fire playing around the trunk of the pine tree that I'd wanted to get under the shelter of. Then there came a positively deafening crash and when I could see again there was that pine tree stretched across the road and a good part of it in kindling wood.

"I suppose maybe that old gray mule didn't know. I give it to him, anyhow, that he did."

The Pigs of Brittany.

"Brittany is all right," the traveled man said, cautiously, "but beware of the pigs there."

He had still an hour before the steamer started, and he resumed: "The Breton pig is not fat and indolent like ours. He is as lean and fiery as a wolf, and twice a wolf's size. All over Brittany you see him, swagging up and down the white roads, in search of roots, berries, frogs, anything for he must forage for himself—his master never feeds him. Step out of his way, or he will snarl and lean at you.

"The Bretons are great drunkards. Sometimes they fall asleep beside the road. They awake with a sharp pain in the arm or leg, the pain of a hungry hog's teeth.

"And I could tell you a gruesome story of the babyhood of a handless Breton beggar whose parents once left him alone in his cradle with the house door open—but it is too horrible."

A Good Dodge.

Senator Elkins was congratulated at a dinner on his fine new yacht, the Marietta.

"From yachts to yachting clothes the transition was easy, and Senator Elkins told a story.

"An old fellow," he said, "sat in a seaside cafe. He had finished lunch; he was now drinking champagne. "The sun shone on the white sand, the sea sparkled, and every little while the old fellow ordered another cold half bottle.

"With the third order he said uncassily to the waiter: "Waiter, is my nose getting red?" "Yes, sir," the waiter answered, "it is, sir, I'm sorry to say, sir." "That won't do," said the old fellow. "That won't do at all. Waiter, send out and get me a yachting cap."

ALL HASTEN TO THEIR HOMES.

What Happens in the Small Town After Sunset.

If you happen to spend an evening in an English business town you cannot fail to be surprised at the almost complete solitude that surrounds you, says the Philadelphia Record. This town that you may have seen in the afternoon swarming with such numbers of busy people, teeming with so intense a life, is now deserted.

To its previous animation has succeeded a strange calm. It is as though you walked in a city of the dead.

It is because every evening after six o'clock work is over in the English town; the complex machinery of the immense labor organization stops.

The factory and the office, their doors open wide, cast into the street their world of liberated workers. By crowded tramways, by crowded pavements, the town disgorges itself. Each one—clerks, workmen, workgirls, office boys, bankers and merchants—with the same haste to regain his dwelling, leaves behind him the gloomy town where he labored, where he strove as in the lists. It is an immense and enthusiastic retreat. It is the daily exodus of the English toward their "home."

What, then, is it, this home of which the English constantly speak, the thought of which touches their heart, whose memory dims their eyes, that enfolds all the happiness of their life? It is home, a place in which to forget the aggravations of the world, in which to be with one's dear ones, one's pets and one's lares and penates generally.

Shaw's Life Principle.

Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa, formerly secretary of the treasury, has a story on tap to fit almost every situation that presents itself. He was governor of Iowa when President Roosevelt invited him to become a member of his cabinet. He went to Washington in response to a summons from the White House. While Mr. Shaw's appointment had been rumored, it had not been announced officially, and a persistent rumor was in circulation to the effect that he would not accept the cabinet offer. Several correspondents waited on Mr. Shaw at his hotel to learn his intentions regarding the matter.

"When I was a boy," he said, "I started off one day on a fishing trip with another boy. We had a long tramp to the fishing place, and as the weather was warm we got very thirsty, and coming to a farmhouse my companion suggested that we stop and get a drink of water. The lady of the house not only gave us a drink out of a nice tin dipper, but insisted upon our taking some pie. Bill, my companion, took a large piece, but from diffidence or something, I declined. Bill looked at me with amazement. 'Les,' he said, 'always help yourself to pie when it is passing.' That was pretty sound advice, and I have acted on that principle ever since."—Washington Star.

A Study in Black.

Like a glimpse of the southland was a little scene on lower Seventh avenue one morning this week, says the New York Globe. On the pavement directly in front of the entrance to a poor tenement sat a negro boy not more than five years old. Bare-headed and barefooted, clad only in two ragged garments, he squatted like a tailor, his ebony face alight with appreciation as he munched a bit of fruit.

Close beside him on the sidewalk was an old soap box. In the soap box was an ebony baby of 18 months, clad in a single garment—and equally happy in an endeavor to swallow a share of the fruit. The soap box was a substitute for an unattainable baby carriage, and the five-year-old substitute for an unattainable nursemaid. Dire poverty meant nothing to the pair of negro children.

"There's an opportunity for a fine canvas," said one observer. "I wish I were an artist."

Immigrants' Purses.

The immigrants who stream into New York all have different ways of carrying their money.

The Irish immigrant carries a canvas bag in which notes and coins are crammed together.

The German wears a money belt, gay and costly, of embroidered cha-mois.

The French and Italians carry brass tubes with screw tops wherein they keep their cash in 20-franc gold pieces.

The Swede is sure to have an immense pocketbook of cowhide that has been handed down from father to son for generations.

The Slavs carry their money in their high boots, along with a fork and spoon.

An Eye to Business.

An expert golfer had the misfortune to play a particularly vicious stroke at the moment that a society stayaker skulked across the edge of the course. The ball struck the trespasser and rendered him briefly insensible. When he recovered, a five-dollar bill was pressed into his hand by the regretful golfer.

"Thanky, sir," said the injured man, after a kindling glance at the money. "An' when will you be playin' again, sir?"—Lippincott's.

His Last Joke.

"You say you would like more exercise?" said the death watch to the condemned man. "What sort of exercise would you like?" "I should like to skip the rope," replied the prisoner with a grin.

Slander.

 The business men of our city will hold a meeting some time this week to consider the question of buying a site for new base ball grounds.
 Allen Caverly was thrown from his horse while riding in the running race on the Fourth and knocked unconscious. He was taken to Dr. McColl's office and soon recovered. That he escaped without more serious injury was his good fortune.
 While driving down a steep hill south of this city last Monday the breaking of a neck-yoke loop allowed the buggy to strike the team driven by Henry Bronson causing them to overturn. The buggy was overturned and the occupants, Mr. Bronson, A. E. Wilson and little son, were thrown out, and Henry sustained injuries which will confine him to the house for some time. Mr. Wilson and little son escaped with a few slight bruises.
 Certainly our people are to be congratulated on the success of our 4th of July celebration. We entertained fully a thousand visitors and the day was full of fun and good-fellowship. From start to finish. Everybody seemed determined to have a jolly time, and all succeeded. No serious accidents or quarrels marred the pleasures of the day. The Standish band enlivened the occasion with excellent music. The ball games furnished amusement for the crowd. The Dreadnoughts, of Melvor, and the Turner Red Sox played the first game and Melvor won by a score of 17 to 13. In the afternoon the fast Rose City team and Whittemore put up a good game, Rose City winning by a score of 5 to 3. It was a good game and the Rose City boys are a jolly lot of fellows. The other races and sports were pulled off and all proved very interesting. The Leslie Bros., street railway system was the feature of the morning.

Long on Practicability.
 A Wall street man dropped into a country school and was invited to examine a class.
 "How much are two and two?" he asked the first boy up.
 "I don't know."
 "Who discovered America?"
 "I don't remember."
 The teacher was about to offer excuses, but the Wall street man waved him aside.
 "That boy may not be much on frills," declared he, "but he's thoroughly practical, and that's what counts in real life."
An Unapproachable Horse.
 A young man called to take his sweetheart out driving the other day, but when the stunningly attired young lady caught sight of the turnout the young man had hired for the occasion she feigned a headache and refused to accompany him.
 "Why, Violet," asked the astonished mother, "why don't you go with him?"
 "Well, mamma," was the indignant reply, "I consider that a very foolish question on your part. How could I go when the horse he was driving didn't match a single thing I had to wear?"

 "That boy may not be much on frills," declared he, "but he's thoroughly practical, and that's what counts in real life."
An Unapproachable Horse.
 A young man called to take his sweetheart out driving the other day, but when the stunningly attired young lady caught sight of the turnout the young man had hired for the occasion she feigned a headache and refused to accompany him.
 "Why, Violet," asked the astonished mother, "why don't you go with him?"
 "Well, mamma," was the indignant reply, "I consider that a very foolish question on your part. How could I go when the horse he was driving didn't match a single thing I had to wear?"
