The Little Red Schoolhouse Must Go

There has been a deal of sentiment and gush expended on the Little Red Schoolhouse, but it has not lived up to its reputation. True, it has served a purpose in a fashion, but as it stands today it is a poor excuse for an educational means in keeping up with the enlightenment of the times.

It does not teach anything but the elementary three R's and does that indifferently. The farm boy and girl get nothing more than a start, and generally a bad start at that, in the Little Red Schoolhouse, and at an age when they should be well advanced in the common branches of education are obliged to leave home and enter the city schools.

The country school teacher is, as a rule, the poorest paid public servant we know of. Country teachers are recruited from the ranks of boys and girls who have managed to get through the village high school passably and become possessed of a certificate. They are employed because they are willing to work cheap. If they have the least ambition they merely use the country school as a means to earn money enough to take them through college or enter other fields of endeavor and leave at the first opportunity. Their places are taken by others of similar education and training and so on to the unprofitable end.

The Little Red Schoolhouse is a misnomer, because it is generally of no color at all except that imparted to the unpainted square wooden structure by time and weather. Set in the middle of a lot, bare of tree or shrub, backed up by a tumble-down coal house, it stands as a monument of ugliness and official stinkiness.

The interior is devoid of every convenience for the use of teachers and pupils—no mats, globes, cubes, cones, books of reference—nothing but a sealy blackboard, a rusty stove and a few wooden benches, it presents a dismal and forbidding aspect to the young child's impressionable mind. This combination of poorly equipped teacher and poor building proves a killing handicap to the farm boy and girl at a time when they should have the best advantages that could be afforded them.

The remedy for this condition of country education is the central township school. This is not a new movement as it was started nearly thirty years ago by a farseeing old farmer in Rush county, Indiana, but is gradually becoming active and promises beneficial results.

In the average township there are from six to eight schools. These could be centralized into one, or at the most, two. The central building could be modern, comfortable, well equipped and cared for by a janitor and all for less than it costs to build heat and repair the ordinary district building.

In a central school one teacher can manage from thirty to forty pupils and five teachers can do the work of eight. The township can thus afford to employ teachers of education and experience at good salaries and save money by the arrangement.

To make these central schools available to all pupils in the township, those living at the greatest distances from the central building must be conveyed to and from school at the expense of the township. This would necessitate good roads and the movement would thus serve a double useful purpose.

Another important advantage of a central township school is that it brings a greater number of children into daily contact with one another, broadens their social life, stimulates their mental activities and heightens their ambition.

The Little Red Schoolhouse must go, and in its place shall come the central township school with all of its economies and advantages, to give the country boy and girl a fair show in their efforts to obtain an education and give them that start in life to which they are entitled.—Farm World.

"Galveston Idea" And How It Is Spreading

The commission idea in municipal government, which had its origin in the Galveston disaster, seems to be withstanding the severe test of practical conditions as successfully as the new Galveston seawall withstood the severe test of the recent storm on the gulf.

A summary of the progress of the commission idea to date shows that it has been adopted in the following towns: Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth, Denison, Greenville, Sherman, El Paso and Austin, in addition to Galveston, in Texas; Topeka, Leavenworth and Wichita, as well as in several other smaller cities in Kansas; Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, in Iowa; Gloucester, Haverhill and Chelsea, in Massachusetts; San Diego and Berkeley, in Cali-ornia; Boise and Lewiston, in Idaho; Jackson, in Mississippi; and in several towns in Oklahoma.

Portland, in Oregon, and Memphis, in Tennessee, have voted to adopt the plan at an early date. It is expected that it will soon be in effect in Bismark, Mandan and other towns in the Dakotas. The plan is already in operation in a total of seven states and three other states have passed statutes authorizing its use.

Some merit must be conceded to a plan which, through the favorable impression it is enabled to make and without the help of the political motive—the commission idea and municipal politics as commonly understood and practiced are in deadly antagonism—has made its way into the good graces of more than a score of American cities within half a dozen years and which will be in operation in a score more within the next year. Even Boston is now considering it.

The merit is found to consist very largely in the elimination of the political element and consequently, in the realization by the taxpayers of more for their money. That great discrepancy between the cost of activities of all kinds, as carried on under municipal and under private auspices, is greatly reduced under this form. Municipal work is executed with greater expedition and in a more businesslike way and at a greatly decreased expense.

There is small variation in the commission idea as applied in these different cities which now enjoy its benefit. A mayor and salaried commission of small membership, generally of five persons, replaces the usual government of a mayor and common council. The commissioners, who are elected by the people, serve as heads of the different municipal departments, in addition to performing the functions of a municipal legislature.

For instance, if the plan were in force in Detroit, a council of 36 members at $1,200 a year each, or $43,200 in all, would be succeeded by five commissioners at $5,000 each, or $25,000 in all. The actual saving is greater than the apparent saving of $18,200 a year. Three of the commissioners would take the place of three departmental heads to each of whom $5,000 a year is now paid, making a total saving of $33,200 in the executive and legislative departments alone. Even this saving is, of course, inconsequential compared with the economies the commission plan might be expected to bring about in the huge budget of millions devoted to other city purposes.

No special statute authorizing the adoption of the commission plan is needed in this state. The new constitution gives cities the right to formulate their own charters along such lines as they may deem desirable.—Detroit Free Press.

Behavior.

When should we begin to teach children good behavior? We should teach it to them by inheritance. We should ourselves behave so well that our children should learn it by following our examples.

Kindness is a safe rule for gentle manners. Kindness, combined with thoughtfulness. He who is kind and thoughtful is never rude.

Children should be taught to respect other children's feelings at school. Here we have sometimes a fine display of selfishness. They should be taught to respect their teacher. If he is so ill-behaved that you think they cannot, just stop them from school. No parent should speak of a teacher's faults in the presence of a pupil, if they expect to continue their child in school. Remember, no one is perfect save the Great Teacher of Teachers, Jesus Christ.

It is not merely the lifting of the hat, the graceful bow, or the softened "thank you" that is true politeness. We can do all that and yet totally disregard the sensitiveness of other people.

We should teach our children to behave in all places of public worship, let it be that of a Jew or a gentile. That is a strong mark of good breeding. And he who misbehaves in church breaks one of our great commandments, namely, Honor thy father and thy mother. Old or young (if they are old enough to know better) dishonor their parents in misbehaving in church.—Selected.

Michigan

An Expensive Department.

In 1887, when the office of state game warden was first created in Michigan the total expense of the office, including salaries of warden and deputy, was only $4,000. According to the last annual report of Warden Pierce, the expenses incurred in running his office were $57,226, an increase of over $10,000 from the year previous. This increase, it is pointed out, was added even after the working force of the office had been reduced to some extent.

Warden Pierce was appointed by Governor Warner in 1907, and his term of office does not expire until 1911. Prior to his taking charge the salary attached to it was only $1,200 a year. Shortly after assuming the duties of game warden the salary was increased to $3,000. Besides this, he has under him a chief deputy who receives $1,000 and expenses; a traveling deputy, paid $1,200 and expenses, and about thirty other deputies who are paid $3 a day and expenses, making in all a payroll of nearly $60,000.

Gives Railroad Men Sh.

Act No. 104 of the Public Acts passed by the last session of the legislature takes effect September 2. By this enactment the fellow servant liability law is repealed so far as railroad and common carriers are concerned. All common carriers are made responsible for the acts of their officers, agents or employees.

This means that the railroads will have to treat their injured employes far more generously than in years past, when nearly every damage case brought against the corporation by the widow of the victim of a railroad accident or by the victim himself, if he was lucky enough to survive, was appealed to the supreme court on the fellow servant liability clause, a pure technicality, and there the damage usually awarded in the circuit court was set aside or reduced.

A New Way to Can Tomatoes.

Last summer I tried a new method of canning tomatoes, and it proved so satisfactory that I want to pass it on. Scald and peel the tomatoes as usual. Have the cans sterilized, place the raw tomatoes in them whole, pour in boiling water to fill the cans running a knife around in the cans, so that all the crevices are filled, then put on the cover. Place the cans in a boiler or large vessel, pour in boiling water till it reaches the neck of the can, put the lid on the boiler, wrap it with a blanket or rug and leave until the water is cold, which will be next morning. The cans are then ready to put away. I did not lose a can out of forty quarts. When the cans were opened, the tomatoes were whole and firm enough to slice easily.—Woman's Home Companion for September.

Deaths Exceeded by Births.

Lansing, Aug. 26—During July there were 2,719 deaths reported to the secretary of the state which corresponds to an annual death rate of 12 per 1,000 estimated population. The largest proportion of deaths were caused by violence, various forms of tuberculosis being the second cause in importance and in deadly effect. There were 4,787 births reported to the department as having occurred during July, which corresponds to an annual birth rate of 21.2 per 1,000 estimated population.

"Notice to the Public"

Those intending to go to Detroit on the Baseball excursion Sunday, August 29, are urgently requested to purchase tickets on August 27 or 28. Frank J. Navin, Secretary of the Detroit baseball team, advises that tickets for the ball game will be on sale at Harris' Cigar store, 119 Woodward Ave., just opposite the Pontchartrain Hotel, 3 o'clock Sunday; after that hour they can be secured at the baseball park. Mr. Navin says there will be ample room to take care of every body that will come with any kind of seats they may desire.

Some Sense in a Will.

Before he died at Phoenix, Ariz., the other day, John C. Powers, a mining engineer from Cleveland, put some good hard sense in his will. He wrote regarding his funeral: "It will be unnecessary for the minister to call me a 'christian gentleman' and state a lot of other facts the truth of which those present will know better than he."

It is safe to say that more Simon pure lying is perpetrated in funeral orations than at any other ceremonies in which people participate.

A lawyer dies. He is notorious as a sharper and cheat, but an honorable bar association will sit for hours listening to laudations of his career and pass resolutions fit to make his trip across the river Styx a mere pleasure excursion toward a heavy reward for virtue.

The same is true as to "our worthy brother" in most any civic society. He may have beaten his wife, robbed his neighbor and been altogether as vicious as they make 'em. But, when they come to bury him, he gets a recommendation for angelhood that would probably have made him fighting mad had they tried to put it to him while he was living.

"Speak only good of the dead" is well enough but it ought to be amended by adding, "but rather than lie about the dead, keep your mouth shut."

It is the fact that the truth about the dead cannot effect the dead, while lies about them can hurt the living. What must our youth think, who, knowing that the deceased has been a brute or a rascal all his life, hear him praised and flattered at a funeral, to say nothing of the gush poured out on him by the newspapers? They must think that brutishness or rascality pays in the long run, mustn't they? There is sin rather than sense in saying that about the dead, or the living, which is known to be false. To do it in pretense of sympathy for those who are grieving over the corpse is false pretense and known as such to those who grieve.

The truth is mighty and will prevail as to the dead as well as the living. It is the false, however disguised, however apologized for, that is hurtful.—EX.

The Crime of Idleness.

Idleness means trouble for any one. Its same with a lazy liver. It causes constipation, headache, jaundice, sallow complexion, pimples and blotches, loss of appetite, nausea, but Dr. King's New Life pills soon banish liver troubles and build up your health. 25c. at A. S. Larabee's and Jas. E. Dillon's drug stores.

Coax Nitrogen, Don't Buy It.

It is difficult to get the average farmer to distinguish between the commercial value and the value he actually gets from the application of commercial fertilizers.

With some farmers at least the price asked rather than the actual plant food contained in the goods. Some farmers reason that if a fertilizer costs $15.00 per ton it is worth just half as much as a fertilizer which costs $30.00 per ton, which is true commercially speaking, but it does not follow that the farmer will actually realize twice as much from increase of crop from applying the $30.00 per-ton goods as he would if he applied the $15.00 per-ton goods.

The increase of price is likely from the few pounds of nitrogen added to the goods and for the general farmer depending upon purchased nitrogen is very expensive and is likely to take the profit from growing a crop.

The $15.00 per-ton fertilizer, if it is applied to a soil which lacks phosphorus and is well supplied with nitrogen, may increase the crop production as much as the higher-priced goods.

Some soils have a good supply of nitrogen; others may have plenty of potash but the phosphorus is most generally lacking and there are few soils which do not respond readily to an application of a fertilizer containing phosphoric acid.

It will pay to apply potash to many soils and may pay to use a fertilizer containing nitrogen but the nitrogen content in most commercial fertilizers is so low compared with the other elements that it is safest to plow, to depend upon growing legumes and upon the judicious application of stable manure to keep up the supply of nitrogen, rather than to buy it in a commercial form.—Farm World.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. It is actually a disease. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves. This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this stellar prescription—is aimed directed to these weak and ailing nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help. If you would have strong Heart strength, digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. C. H. PRESCOTT & SONS.
