The auxiliary yacht "Coribou," of Saginaw, was burned to the water's edge about 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, while anchored in the bay about a half mile off this city. The boat was owned by A. L. Corrigan and Leonard Franks, of Saginaw, who were in charge of it on their way home from a trip to Mackinac Island. The boys were getting supper when a cabin lamp was tipped over setting fire which spread so rapidly that they were unable to stop it. The boys took to their dory and got away without saving a thing.
A newspaper can never very creditably represent a town whose business men do not advertise. He may howl himself hoarse bragging about the vim, and energy and enterprize of his town, but if his declarations are not backed up by a liberal amount of advertising by the business men of the town, the world will be slow to believe his statements. It takes more than the unsupported testimony of the local newspaper man to prove to the world that his town is the financial center, the business center, the best market, and the best place on earth to buy goods; his evidence needs corroboration.—Plymouth (O.) Advertiser.

According to the opinion of Attorney General Bird those who take advantage of the soldiers' tax exemption act passed by the last legislature which will not go into operation until 1910, will lose their vote on questions of rising or expending money which come up at the meeting of the tax payers of a school district.

The state railroad commission has issued an order prohibiting the careless use of combination coaches. Those are divided into compartments, one for smokers and the other for baggage. Frequently these are run with the baggage end toward the engine but when the terminus is reached, the car is not turned about. Consequently the passenger then rides between the baggage and engine, with only a thin partition on the engine side to protect him in case of accident. This is now strictly forbidden.
After two years experimenting two chemists have perfected a process whereby the waste liquids from the paper pulp mills can be used for tanning extract for the tanning of leather. Muskegon promptly accepts the opportunity offered and has organized a company capitalized at $10,000 and is erecting a plant for the manufacture of the extract. That's the way some towns take advantage of opportunities and prosper, while others let their opportunities go by and sleep calmly on.
The attorney general in an opinion says that under a new law recently passed by the legislature, boards of supervisors relieve county treasurers of responsibility when these boards advertise for bids from banks anxious to be the depository for county funds. Then the board must place the funds in one of these banks whose bid is accepted. However, if there is no advertising for bids, then the county treasurer places the funds wherever he chooses and thus becomes responsible for them.
The last legislature passed a law of more than ordinary interest and importance. It provides that hereafter all circuit courts of the state shall be regarded as in continuous session, and that cases not requiring a jury can be heard at any time by consent of parties. In other words, a case started this week, which can be tried without a jury may, by consent of the parties be heard next week, the circuit judge being required to hear the same without the formal opening of a term of court.

A "Pussy Foot."

The Saturday Evening Post designates Senator Burrows as "a pussy footed regular to the last gasp, amenable to direction and willing to do what is necessary."

Must Not Run Backwards.

The Michigan railroad commission has just issued an order prohibiting state railroads from running any trains backwards or with the cars ahead of the engine.

The chief reason for this order is that the engineer does not have a clear view of the track over the pile of coal on the tender.

An order has also been issued by the commission regulating the speed limit over the interlocking plants.

The Independent Paper.

The independent paper nowadays is the paper that commands confidence, because it is realized that a paper to be worthy of confidence must be to a large extent independent.

No Wheat Famine In Sight.

In view of an estimated yield this year of 235,000,000 bushels of wheat, or 60,000,000 bushels more than in 1908, in the Dakotas and Minnesota, of a substantial increase in the yields of Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta, the Pacific Northwest, and South Russia, and in view of a much heavier yield in the Central and Southwestern States than seemed possible a few months ago, the world's stocks of wheat seem in a fair way to be in a measure replenished this year.

FANTASTIC STONE ON GRAVE.

Remarkable Memorial Erected by Father in Memory of Daughter He Idolized.

In all the cemeteries of the world there probably exists no more fantastic conception than in the rural graveyard of Pleasant Ridge, in England. To the memory of a daughter whom he idolized, Hannibal Clark, a wealthy but simple-minded farmer, erected this remarkable shaft of granite.

NUMEROUS CHANGES OF NAME.

Blonde Woman's Adventures on the Matrimonial Sea Evidently Had Been Many.

They met on the street car—the intense little woman and the much adorned, plethoric blonde. Both evinced that extravagant pleasure which comes of meeting by accident an acquaintance one has not thought of for months.

"How d'ye do, Mrs. Gray?" panted the blonde, extending a plump, diamond-hand.

"Why! How do you do, Mrs. Williams?" effused the other woman.

"Not Mrs. Williams," prompted the blonde, automatically.

"Oh, to be sure," the little woman apologized, "I heard you were to be married—Mrs. Str-Strbonski, of course. I hope it isn't too late for congratulations."

"That's so, I was Strbonski," recollected the blonde, "that musician—but now I'm Madam Theodore; he's a chef."

The little woman's chin dropped, and for half a block she sat with a face like an exclamation point.

"This is my corner," she announced, jumping to her feet as the car slowed up. "Would you—would you mind, Mrs.—Madam Theodore, telling me what your name is the next time we meet?"—New York Press.

A Way Out. A broker and banker, who was a member of the Russian relief committee that had in charge the transportation of food to Russia from Philadelphia a few years ago during a famine, likes to tell of an unusual experience he had while soliciting for the relief fund.

He was speaking of it he said: "I tell it because it shows the speed with which some people think. I called on a man who was always a generous contributor to charity. He was out of sorts when I saw him and after I explained my mission he said: 'You fellows are always begging for something.' I was taken aback for a few seconds and when I recovered myself I asked, 'What would you do if the wolf were at your door?'" He stared at me in a terrifying manner for a second and then blurted out, 'Why, you fool, I would eat the wolf.' I noticed when I was passing out the door he was still watching me sharply. I have never served on a relief committee since then."

Lysander John Up Against It. The Lysander John Appletons lived in a house of five rooms for many years, and were so crowded that none of their kin ever expected to be invited to visit them.

But recently Lysander John made a little extra money and his wife had two rooms built on. "Have you heard the news?" was shouted through Kinville. "The Appletons have two more rooms." News like that spreads like fire in Kinville, and they began coming by twos and threes, and always with the deafest old man, loudest voiced old women and crossest baby they could find.

This explains why Lysander John's limbs are tied in knots; he has been sleeping in a hammock for six weeks past, being crowded out of his bed by visitors from Kinville. — Atchison Globe.

The Cartoonist's Sting. Signs and symbols seem to be just as effective now as in the early days of our race, when the primitive aboriginal chiseled in picture language the record of his doings.

There are still enough undeveloped minds among us to give pictures more force than printed words, and the whiplash on the end of the cartoonist's facile pencil more and more frequently raises welts where the editorial and "spread" headline cannot sting the thick hide.

Most Attractive. Old Maid—Humph, so heaven has seven women to every man, and hell the reverse? I won't patronize you.

St. Peter (imploringly)—Yes, but you couldn't stand it down there, they use profanity, incorrect English, and— Old Maid—Splendid! At last I can teach in a man's college! —Brooklyn Life.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn boy growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and paags of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many cases of Rheumatism, but now at last, finally cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. These sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse for suffering longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend Ganderbones' Forecast for September.

Copyrighted 1909 by C. H. Rieth.

Whenever that Great prodigal Prosperity Concludes that home Has some attractions Oyer husks And choosing Evermore to roam, And turns his face Toward the place Where first he saw The light of day, And where the lamp Has faithfully Been burning since He went away— Whenever, as we Said before, His trousers are The worse for dogs, And he would eat His breakfast food With better company Than hogs, And finally Makes up his mind That having had His little fling, He wants to see The old homestead, And mother, And that sort of thing— Whenever he feels Equal to The humble pie And kindly chaff, By thunder, We will wager him He never saw A fatter calf Or one to Better purpose feed Than we've got Out behind the shed.

The old Romans tried to make September the seventh month, as its name indicates, but this brought Labor day around at a season when capital was at the seashore and could not be impressed by the parade, and it was subsequently made the ninth month. Donitian the tyrant was among those who complained of the misnomer, and he gave it his own royal name of Germanicus; but as soon as he was in Africa the reigning Emperor, Bigbillius, reversed the policy and restored to the month the only name in the calendar remaining to us as it was in the beginning.

The curtain will rise cautiously, discovering a schoolhouse in the foreground and a small boy in open-seat pants concealed in the tall grass at the left. Mr. Taft will be pounding his ear under a bush on the right, and Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Ballinger will alternately chase each other across the stage at the rear. In the remote background a group of football players will be putting in fall hair, and farmers will be passing to town with their crops along the extreme right side of the stage and returning in automobiles on the left. After the preliminary pantomime, in which the teacher will dash out of the schoolhouse and catch the boy, Mr. Taft lay his other ear on the anvil, and several aeroplanes pass over, the consumer will come out and sing "Listen to a Pencil on My Ribs."

And then the big show will begin, and summer time will scot, the quail will do a trial trill upon his magic flute, the calf will hoist his tail aloft and jump from hill to hill, the dread mosquito will confer and fall upon his bill, the birds will call the moving van, to warmer climates bound, and the first acorn will fall and raise a welt upon the ground— It is a very pleasant thing To think upon the Fall And what a comfort probably It will be to us all, To think upon the cider press, The pumpkins turning gold, The squirrel picking hazel nuts, The chigger catching cold, A new supply of oxygen Replenishing the air, And nature touching up the scene With color here and there.

A man who cannot fall upon his lyre and give it steam enough to make a symphony with Autumn for his theme, and cannot take his hands away and play it with his nose, or even stand upon head and pick it with toes until the din of falling nuts is pattering around, and the hunter's moon is in the sky, and all the hills are browned, and yonder in the filmy depth his frenzied eye can trace a gang of migrants tooling by against the arch of space—a man whose soul cannot respond to that insistent call is going where they do not have an autumn time at all. However, and be as it may, the bull-frogs, sad adieus will rumble briefly ere he tilts and burrows in the ooze, the railroads will return the folks they too spry to smash, the poor cockroach will lay his head beneath the window sash, the days will put the blower on and march against the dragon, and a few more sections of the map will board the water wagon.

The supreme test for railroad bridges will begin on the 15th, when President Taft will set out upon his 13,000-mile trip to Mexico, the Pacific slope, and intermediate points. This date in history will also be the 52d anniversary of the President's birth, but he will not open anything very loud, and there will be no bear hunters. In the course of his travels Mr. Taft will test the stability and tensile strength of 67,432 bridges and 512,002 trestles, and the rotundity of more than 10,000 roundhouses.

Mars will be the other exhibit of the month. This planet, which is supposed to be inhabited by people like Mr. Rockefeller and others who have something on the rest of us, is now only 34,000,000 miles distant, and may be easily distinguished by its angry redness and its habit of winking and blinking like a Pittsburg first-nighter. There have been several suggestions for attracting the attention of Mars while passing, the best of which is that everybody upon our own earth say Booh! at the same time; but Mr. Marrison says that if anybody in this country says Booh again just at this time prosperity never will come back; so we, at least, are not anticipating, no matter if the rest of the world do it.

The September moon, which is said to be the only one under which anyone ever committed bigamy, will be full on the 29th, and the signs of the Zodiac for the month will be Virgo until the 22d, and hereafter Libra. People born under the influence of Virgo are persistent and can get a lower berth after the man says there are none left, but Libra people are well balanced, and can sleep in an upper.

On the 22d the sun will cross the equator for a touchdown, and the increased tariff on clothing will kick the autumn equinox. This will give the ball to the wolf on our front yard line.

And then October will return With gossamery sky, And in the soft autumnal hush The pumpkin vine will pie.

The Lore of a Hammock

"Good evening, Miss Carraway." "Good evening, Mr. Wigtree." And as these salutations of convention echo themselves away into the cold and barren limbo of potatoes, prunes and prisms, let us take a pinch of the snuff of true philosophy and see if any joy remains in a little rumination.

Time: Eight o'clock in the evening. Scene: The country on a balmy night in June—a vine-sheltered veranda. Above: The moon and stars. Below: A man and a maid.

Let us therefore look at the man. So.

Whereupon we will turn and regard the maid and immediately we know that joy remains. She had a complexion like strawberry and vanilla, and the sweetness of her ruby lips no mortal tongue could tell. Wherefore we will tell it. Take a barrel of sugar and concentrate all its sweetness into two small pieces, shaped like a little lady's lips. Take a quart of honey, if you please, and refine it into two drops; place a drop on each of those two little sugared lips.

Take a bouquet of lilies, a bouquet of violets and a bouquet of heliotrope; extract the scent from each, distill it, place it in an atomizer and spray those two little sugared lips aforesaid. Take a bottle of the strongest rum, a bottle of brandy and a case of vinegar wine. Distill them into two drops of concentrated intoxication and delight and place a drop on each of those same two little sugared lips. Take a bunch of grapes and turn it down to a glowing sensation of warmth; take the velvet from a thousand red roses, and place them all upon those two ravishing little sugared lips, and there—and there you have the sweetness that no mortal tongue can tell.

"You are just in time, Mr. Wigtree." "Just in time for what, Miss Carraway, may I ask?"

"Just in time," she answered him, "to help me put up the hammock. One end has to be tied here and the other end there, but it has to be done awfully strong or else it comes down when you try to sit in it. So perhaps we'd better leave it!"

"O, I think I can do it, Miss Carraway," said he, and he squared his shoulders and she could scarcely see the tips of his ears. "I'm not so terribly weak, you know," he added.

"Dear me!" she said, "I never knew you had such broad shoulders!"

Even the tips of his ears disappeared from view.

"Why?" she said. "They're immense!"

And as for Mr. Wigtree, Mr. Wigtree began tying the hammock into place with such a simulation of strength that one instinctively knew that if Hercules had ever tied a hammock in place he would have tied it in just that way.

"There!" he said. "That's one end!" "If you can only tie the other as strong as that!" she exclaimed.

"There!" he said. "Now if that isn't up to stay I don't know what is." And he drew a chair along the veranda and sat down with a manner like that of a man who has already earned his entertainment.

"Can I sit in it now?" she asked. "You certainly can," said he. "I feel so nervous," she cried.

But, gathering her skirts about her, nevertheless, she sat down in the hammock, through in a tentative way and with the appearance of a girl who fears the worst.

"Are you sure you've fixed it good and strong, Mr. Wigtree?" she asked. "Yes, yes," said he.

"And it won't break?" "And it won't break."

"Not even if I swing my feet?" she whispered.

(Very dark it was behind those vines, and very snug. A single moon-beam stole its way in beneath the leaves of the vines and kissed her sweetly—sweetly on the lips.)

"Not even," said he, "if you swing your feet."

She swung her feet and one of the ropes creaked.

"There!" she said, stopping. "That's nothing," he assured her, goodnaturedly; "that's only a rope creaking."

"Yes," she cried. "And, first thing I know, it will let me down!"

"Why," he said, "it would hold a dozen!"

"I don't believe it would," she said. "I don't believe it would even hold two. If Annie Smith were only home I'd call her over and show you."

"Wait," said he. "and I'll show you myself."

He arose from the chair (nothing harmed him) and walked over to the hammock. She made room for him.

"There!" he said. "Now do you believe?"

"I don't believe you dare swing it," she said. They swung it. "O, well," she said, "just for a little while it may be all right, but after a minute or two"— And so they continued to swing it. Suddenly she nearly fell out backward. He caught her. "There!" he said. "Now you can't fall out!"

It is a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping stomach, heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by C. H. Prescott and Sons.

And if the housekeeper who superintends the canning of her fruit will put a quarter teaspoonful of whole cloves on top of the thin cloth which many wisely place over the hot fruit before putting on the lid, she will not be annoyed with the molding of her fruit.—National Magazine.
