New Cigarette Law.

While it is claimed that the new cigarette law is defective in some particulars, it at least has some re deeming features, and chief among these is the fact that it does prohibit the smoking of cigarettes in public places by young men under the age of 21.

That one fact alone is worth a good deal. The smoking of "coffin pails" by mature men is bad enough. but the big percentage has been among boys' and this clause should at least help to clear up the atmosphere in public places.

It is also claimed that the sale of "tobacco" is not prohibited and that is a weak point in the law. Tobacco can be sold and the cigarettes made the same as usual, but for all that there is still the provision prohibit ing those under 21 smoking eigar ettes in public places.

Even if the law is not what was orginally intended by the drafter, i has at least accomplished some good and is well worth a place upon the statute books.

City Life Is Lopsided.

"I sometimes think," says Mr. Markham, "that only men with lopsided brains love to live in the city. God never made a city-he made a garden. City life is largely the cause of the general nervous breakdown of the race. This is an age of nerves, and the city is responsible for it. My ideal is a life that has the freshness and freedom of the country, and yet is within easy access of the town, where men can go and transact business. In my business, that of making verse, I need the peace of the country, which is the peace of God. But I like to come in contact with men, and so I go to town. I think the city of the future will not be crowded by city dwellers -we are coming to know too much for that. But, for the present, mankind is still lopsided."-Suburban Fellow Member After He Had Heard Him Talk.

Pellegrini was an artist with an exceedingly liberal vacabulary, upon which he would draw freely for the edification of the Beefsteak club, of which he was a member. There was one fellow member of the club, says J. C. Carr in a book called "Some Eminent Victorians," who was wont to entertain the table with little impromptu sketches, which he executed with a certain degree of facility.

This innocent display of artistic power offended Pellegrini, who, possibly moved by a measure of jealousy, that any one should encroach upon his special province, insisted with some vehemence that a club was not the place for such exercises.

"I like the boy," he said to me one evening, "and when he talk, I listen, but 'tis pity he draw."

It was only a few evenings later that I entered the room and found the young friend who had been the subject of Pellegrini's rebuke absorbing the entire conversation of the crowded table. Pellegrini was present, and I could see that he was growing restive under the artist's unceasing flow of

In a momentary pause he turned to me, and in an audible whisper delivered this laconic judgment:

"Joe, I 'ave made big mistake. 'Tis

Its a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong! A week stomach means weak stomach nerves always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Resigrative is promptly helping stomach, heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative these ailments-the failing "inside tive 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by C. H. Prescott and Sons.

Fashion of Wearing Cockade Origin ated in Strings That Served a Useful Purpose.

The cockade originated simply in the knot of ribbons or strings by which the broad flaps of the seventeenth century round hat were "cocked" or drawn up to the brim in fine weather, and thus originated the three-cornered hat, as well as the cocked hat of later times. There was nothing specially military about the usage, as the ignorant assert. The same strings survive in the loops of the hats of bishops and other ecclesiastical dignitaries in Great Britain; in the strings of the hats worn by French cures and Spanish and Italian padres and in the cords which are still seen on the hats of some livery serwants.

It naturally became the custom for military men to "cock" their hats with the livery color of the prince they served, and as the Hanoverian color was the convenient one of black, the "black cockade" became associated in the minds of the people with military uniform. In an old Scotch song of Shiramuir, citing Woodward's heraldry, we read of "the red coat lads with black cockades," and a knot of white ribbons was naturally chosen as the badge of their opponents. When the old use of the strings was forgotten, the knot, in the form of a rosette of ribbon, survived, just as did the but tons on the backs of our coats, which were intended to fasten back the flaps in riding or marching.—"Justice of the
