More than 85 per cent of the United States corn crop is fed to livestock and somewhat less than 10 per cent is used for human food, according to recent data compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture. The hog is the largest consumer, 40 per cent being fed to swine on farms. Horses and cattle are next, using 20 and 15 per cent respectively. The exports of corn, as grain, have never been large.

The storm of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday has isolated Tawas City from the outside world and even near by country, so far as auto traffic is concerned. Railway service was not interfered with to any extent though. Rural mail carriers have been unable to go over the full extent of their routes. The new county road snow plow which arrived last week is receiving a real tryout, but the snow drifts are so deep and heavy that it is slow work plowing through them.

LEGION PUTS ON DRIVE FOR MEMBERSHIP

To Give Assembly and Mess Friday Evening, Feb. 15. Will Consider Plans for Post Headquarters.

"We're on a recruiting drive. We want every veteran in town in the American Legion. And first of all we want back in the fold every ex-service man who has ever been a Legionnaire," said Fred T. Luedtke, local Legion commander today.

"The accomplishment of the Legion in Michigan merit the support of every veteran," he continued. "The Legion in this state, without any exaggeration, has done more for the disabled and needy veteran than has been accomplished in any other commonwealth."

The Legion's latest victory was an assurance, after a fight, that Michigan's tubercular veterans would be treated so far as possible in Michigan hospitals. But if the veterans of the World War are ever to receive their just dues we must have a strong veteran organization. That means that every veteran should get into the Legion.

We want a bigger membership so that we can insist on our buddies obtaining fair treatment. We want no more of them dependent upon charity, and no more of them assigned to poor houses or soldiers' homes.

Besides all that the Legion is a real man's organization, and its members have the time of their lives renewing the comradeship of the war days. As the war gets farther away we look back to it as a time when we had our greatest experience and made our best friends. The Legion cements that comradeship.

Our next meeting will be held on February 15th and we'll be glad to welcome every veteran of the World War. This coming season we're going to have some programs that will make every buddy mighty glad he's a Legionnaire. The Legion all over Michigan is having its best and strongest year, and we want our town to achieve the same fine record as Michigan's other cities.

Remember you have children of your own. adv.-11

Woodrow Wilson

The remains of Woodrow Wilson were laid to rest Wednesday after a simple ceremony in the National cathedral at Washington. Thus passes the man who was greater than his hour.

Misunderstood, maligned and misinterpreted—steadfast to the end to his ideals. A man who for a moment raised a nation above itself with the vision of world democracy. Broken in body, broken in spirit, broken heart—but at the end triumphant, for he must have perceived that the hearts of the American people were above their political expediences.

BY AUTO TO FLORIDA

Thursday, October 25th found us camped at Ormund Beach on an inlet of the ocean, near here is the winter home of John D. Rockefeller. This inlet is called Halifax river or North Indian river.

Florida is noted for her fine roads and bridges, some of the bridges in the south are several miles long.

Friday morning we crossed Halifax river on a long cement bridge and drove down to the ocean at Ormund Beach.

The resort towns of Ormund, Seabreeze and Daytona are situated on beaches that are famous for auto racing in the winter, but this morning of October 26th we found the tide coming in so we took the beautiful wood's drive to Mosquito Inlet where we planned to spend a few days fishing at the mouth of Halifax river where it enters the sea.

The drive through Florida woods that sunshine October morning reminded me of the words so often quoted, "The woods were God's first temples."

The roads wound around between towering pines and wide sweeping live oaks, whose limbs are heavy with their silvery tapestry of moss and then suddenly we came out to an open space—the river—the sea, and towering above all, the third largest light house in the world, but here the work of man seems small and insignificant compared with the mighty works of God and it was here that we pitched our tent and here we spent several days of rest and recreation. We camped near a large hotel for winter tourists but they had not commenced to arrive yet so we were quite alone.

Across from our camping ground was an old Spanish burying ground surrounded and almost all overgrown with oak, palm and bay trees. It's history is lost in a far distant past. Since then we have spent many enjoyable fishing trips but none can compare with the Saturday we spent on Halifax river.

Aunt Mary preferred to stay on dry land so we four took a boat and our lunch and rowed out on the river.

First we must stop at Fiddler's Island and get some fiddlers for our

"Too" Most Misspelled Word in Dictionary

The little monosyllable "too" is the most misspelled word in the language, according to a study made by J. A. Lester of the Hill school, Pottstown, Pa. To find out which words are most frequently misspelled, Mr. Lester compiled a list of the 50 words most often found incorrect in the compositions written during a period of seven years by 2,414 candidates for college entrance.

This inquiry suggested to the teachers of London that a similar list might be compiled from the work of British pupils. As a preliminary to this study the 50 words that had stumped American students were tried out on British pupils. Teachers in all parts of England, Scotland and Wales dictated this list to 1,254 pupils in the elementary schools.

As a result of the test, it was found that British and American students misspell different words. The word "too," first on the American list, was forty-third in order of words misspelled by British pupils. "Together," another seemingly hard word for American pupils, is not a stumbling block to the British. It was fourth on the American list and forty-ninth on the British.

The only word which appeared among the ten most frequently misspelled by both American and British pupils was "committee." Whether or not to double the m's, t's and e's was evidently a puzzle to both groups.

No comparison can be made of the spelling ability of American and British pupils, as the British elementary school children were, of course, much younger than the American high school graduates. This difference of age accounts somewhat for the dissimilarity in the misspelled words.

Long words were hardest for the British children, whereas the matter of length was not an index to those misspelled by Americans. The 25 words of the 50 which British pupils most frequently misspelled contained 229 letters, whereas the remaining 25 contained only 160. American pupils, on the other hand, misspelled about an equal number of long and short words. —Boston Globe.

Some vines always twine to the right, while others almost invariably twine to the left. Many vines, however, wind their main stems and branches spirally around stiff trunks and stalks. This enables the vine, although powerless to stand alone, to display its flowers to the bees and offer its seeds to the birds and the wind. Some vines in twining always bend to the right and others always bend to the left. The climbing garden bean is a good example of the vines which always rise by twining to the right. Wherever the cultivated or wild runner beans grow, whether feeble or strong, in sunshine or shade, every part of the main stem will be found bending constantly to the right in climbing its support. The common hop vine is just as constant in its inclination to the left.

Surely, One of the compensations of this existence is that a girl can be darned good-looking without winning a beauty contest.

Magyar Superstition. Among the Magyars it is a popular superstition that a woman who has a craving for salt in the early morning must be a witch, and on no account should her taste be gratified.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"DECIMATE"

DURING the World war it was a comparatively frequent occurrence for some war correspondent to report that, during an attack, the German forces "were decimated by the withering fire of the allied troops." But, could he have gotten into spirit or outboard communication with Julius Caesar, who holds a prominent place among the world's great war correspondents, the modern writer would have found that his statement meant something far different from what he imagined it did.

The word as we use it today is the outgrowth of the Roman custom of punishment for revolting cohorts. After the revolt had been crushed, every tenth man—decimus—would be selected by lot and put to death. If a cohort suffered in battle so that about one man in every ten was killed, it was said to have been "decimated," but to use the word as a general synonym for great slaughter is hardly in accordance with its Latin origin. One might as well say that the attacking troops were "terribly tithe'd."

MAKING PROGRESS

YOU may often be filled with wonder at the apparent ease with which some of your friends, of no pronounced ability, climb steadily and unerringly to the heights.

To your mind they are deficient in mentality and power of endurance, yet, in spite of your doubts, they keep nouncing surely day by day, brushing aside difficulties with no observable effort and holding fast to their places. Opposing forces do not daunt or discourage them.

They plan and execute. They refrain from boasting, yet within their hearts there is an ironlike resolution to stay in the fight until they meet victory.

Often they are footsore, exhausted in body and spirit, but never are they in a mood to admit defeat. They know quite as well as you that their talents are limited and their faults many. It is this conscious knowledge of their frailties that make them persist without pause in their commendable effort.

While you are having jolly times at night among the bright lights, they are seeking in the solitude of their room the precious nuggets of wisdom, digging deep below the surface. They have become students of biography, following seriously the blazed trails of the noble men and women who only a few years ago passed over the highway to fame and left their sign-boards at the fatal cross-roads, where all later travelers may stop, read and gather new courage.

It must be a shallow sort of human being indeed who cannot see the value of such observation and study.

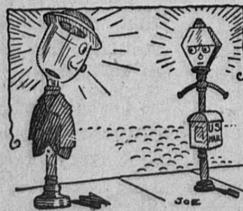

But whatever it may be with regard to the frivolous and fun-loving, this idea of following step by step the rugged paths of the great, striving to comprehend their emotions and to emulate their examples, is not only profitable to the earnest student but extraordinarily inspiring.

What dullard seeking improvement fails to find encouragement in reading of such men as Washington and Lincoln?

Who does not glow with inspiration when he beholds blind Milton groping his way to the heights sublime?

Those who cry "impossible" are those who need most to familiarize themselves with the trials of the immortals who overcame and won imperishable crowns.

Lyric Poets of Germany
Minnesingers was the name given to certain lyric poets of Germany that flourished during the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries.

They were generally men of noble birth, and sang of love, friendship, religion, war and adventure at the court of kings and feudal barons. Although akin to the troubadours of Provence the minnesingers treated love in a more refined spirit and manifested a greater reverence for woman.

They wrote principally in the Swabian dialect of middle high German. —Detroit News.

Data on Oil and Gas

The Department of the Interior has just issued bulletin 736 of the geological survey, which is made up of eight reports that have already been published as individual booklets. This bulletin will be of particular interest to geologists and oil and gas operators working in the Rocky mountains, mid-continent and gulf coast fields, for it contains the geological survey's reports on the geology and oil prospects in the Osage oil field of Wyoming, the Crow Indian reservation of Montana, the El Dorado oil field of Arkansas, the Madill-Denison area of Oklahoma and Texas, the Ranger district of Texas and the Brooks, Steen and Grand Saline salt domes of Texas. The bulletin is illustrated with maps, geologic sections and well logs, which should be of use to drillers and operators in the areas described.

Tin Reduced to Fine Powder

While tin has been in use for a great many centuries, yet ancient vessels of tin are so rarely found by archaeologists as to be well-nigh unknown. This is not due to the fact that tin rusts, for the metal does not combine chemically with the oxygen of the air or that of water, but to the circumstance that a sort of decay does attack it, producing a change in its crystalline structure, the nature of which does not seem to be clearly understood. This ends in reducing the tin to a fine gray powder. The process proceeds much more rapidly at certain times than it does at others and seems to be transmitted from one piece of tin to another, almost like an infectious disease.

CEMENT USED BY ROMANS AGES AGO

Carthaginians Made Aqueduct of Volcanic Ash.

One hundred years ago, when Abraham Lincoln, a lad of fifteen was working on a ferry on the Ohio river for $5 a month, an English brick mason named Joseph Aspdin, poking an inquisitive finger into the realm of scientific research, brought out an idea that revolutionized the building world. In the files of the English patent office Aspdin's idea is listed as patent No. 5082, and the record shows that it was issued by His Majesty King George the Fourth in 1824. The patent covers "an improvement in the modes of producing an artificial stone." What it really meant was that the bricklayer had invented portland cement, for he gave to his material the name "portland" because when it hardened it resembled a popular building stone found on the island of Portland. The name has stuck ever since, and from Aspdin's discovery the modern portland cement industry has been developed.

Although Aspdin was the original discoverer of portland cement he lacked a score of centuries of being the first user of cementing materials. The Romans and Egyptians were past masters in the art of constructing with natural cements. Long before the Holy Roman empire was even thought of, the Carthaginians had constructed a 70-mile aqueduct in northern Africa, using natural cement in the course of their work. The Romans were especially familiar with the use of this material, and the dome of the Pantheon is probably one of the best existing specimens of their concrete work. On many of these old structures the marks left by the wooden forms are still visible.

The cement used by the ancients was really a gift of the gods. It was prepared for them by nature, and they were not aware of the chemical changes the raw materials went through that gave them their cementing qualities. What they did was to mix slacked lime with volcanic ash. There were large quantities of this latter material in southern Italy. The volcanoes did for the Romans what the giant kilns do in modern cement manufacture. They burned the rock, forming volcanic ash, and when this burned material was mixed with slacked lime it made a natural cement. Vitruvius, architect for Augustus, speaks of this material in a number of his writings, while Pliny discourses at length on the use of cement.

During the Dark Ages the secret of the Romans was lost, along with so many other priceless treasures.

In the United States deposits of rock suitable for the manufacture of natural cement were discovered about 1818 in New York state. The building of the Erie canal, which was completed the year after Aspdin's discovery, uncovered further deposits and natural cement was soon being used in various ways.

Another pioneer, Thomas Millen of South Bend, Ind., was in the cement sewer pipe business when he decided to attempt to make portland cement. At the time he was importing his cement from England. He would drive into the country with his horse and buggy and dig a few palls of marl from the lake region near Notre Dame. A pall of blue-clay would be secured from the bed of the St. Joseph river, and Millen would drive back to his pipe plant with this material and mix it by hand. He would then burn it in a piece of sewer pipe—probably the first embryo use of a rotary kiln. Later he would grind the burned product in a coffee mill. John K. Shinn, investigating in Pennsylvania, used a bent car axle, suspended from a spring pole, to hammer and crush his raw materials. A crude grinding machine, but it served its purpose for the time being.

Care of Teeth Taught

Here are the rules of the British Dental association for the care of children's teeth: Be sure the child sleeps with the mouth shut, and when awake breathes through the nose. From the age of two let each meal contain some food that needs grinding. Begin the child's education in hard foods at nine months by giving it a bone, preferably a chop bone, with a little meat on, to exercise its gums. Do not let children drink until the end of the meal. Avoid many sweets and sweet biscuits, and only give them as part of a meal. Finish each meal with a piece of fresh fruit or crisp salad, or, if these are not obtainable, a stale crust of bread, with butter if preferred, but not with jam.

Rubber Pavement

Rubber pavement, which has been in experimental use in England for several years, has now appeared in America. One railway has paved one of its busy highway crossings with rubber in the belief that in the end it will save money by it, even though the first cost be higher. Because the distance between the tracks is so small, ordinary pavement soon breaks up under the jolts of heavy trucks and so causes frequent expensive repairs.

Eskimos and Indians Same

The Norwegian Arctic explorer, Christian Leden, has returned from Greenland bringing back a remarkable entographic and zoological collection for the Peabody museum in Brooklyn, N. Y. Leden believes that he has conclusively proved that Eskimos and Indians are an identical race. He arrived at this conclusion through the similarity of music.

Why Couple Returned to Kitchenette Apartment.

"Comp'ny" Was All Right, but It Is Possible to Have Too Much of a Good Thing.

He liked "comp'ny" and his young wife was also fond of having folks in. Life was much less monotonous when friends were around. But they lived in a one-room apartment with a mysterious disappearing kitchenette, and when they were both at home the place was thronged. They had no space to give over to entertaining visitors.

One evening, says a writer in the New York Sun and Globe, they invited a couple in for some bridge and when they pivoted the visiting lady was badly trampled. After that lamentable experience they gave up the idea entirely and spent all of their spare time longing for the day when the incoming shillings would be abundant enough to provide commodious quarters.

"If we can only get ourselves adequately housed," said the wife, "we can entertain our friends to our hearts' content."

The husband finally dislodged the necessary raise in salary. With no attempt to conceal their jubilation, they selected an apartment with four rooms, a kitchenette and a bath. Almost hilariously they announced frequent house-warmings. Their many friends flocked to offer congratulations. And after the first period of celebrations had ended the friends continued to come. They dropped in without invitation or provocation. From their own cramped quarters they issued continuously to share in the spacings of the fortunate ones. The famine of "comp'ny" ended. The young man and his wife were inundated with it. Several vain efforts were made to stop the inrush. But the friends calmly overlooked all hints and faltered not.

Early one Sunday morning, as the last of a large delegation of self-invited poker players had departed, the husband spoke. There was a trace of exasperation in his voice.

"When we lived where we couldn't entertain we wanted 'comp'ny' all the time," he said. "Now that we are in position to entertain we have it all the time, whether we want it or not. Our friends drop in as if this were a subway station. They seem to think I'm the commissioner of parks and playgrounds. Just because we have more square footage than they have they do their romping here. The only difference between our home and the public library is that we allow smoking and serve refreshments. I'm through."

The young wife checked every statement. And soon thereafter, although the multitude of friends bemoaned their act, they moved back to their former location. They decided if crowding had to be done they would do it themselves. They elbowed each other around and saved money. And when they felt as if they needed "comp'ny" they rode a local train through the East side subway during a rush hour and attempted to get off at Thirty-fourth street.

Mark Twain's Missouri Park.

In the memorial park at Florida, Mo., where Mark Twain was born, we suggest that plenty of those "slippery elums" that Mark's group of youngsters knew, be planted. They are the ulmus fulva, which Mark's boys didn't know and would have scorned under such a hifalutin title if they had.

As this memorial park grows in beauty and umbrageousness and in influence by the gifts and endowments from Mark Twain admirers, we hope to see the statues of Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer rise there, of Aunt Polly and the other homefolk characters that appeal to the sentiment of Western people among whom the genius, Samuel Clemens, grew up.

Mark Twain's birthplace will in time become one of the greatest of literary shrines, for it is now brightly clear that he is one of the American immortals.

Animals Trouble Telephones.

Nature Provides Their Furnace.

Citizens living in Rabaal, Pomerania, need no furnaces, as it is said the city is built at the foot of a partly extinct volcano, and at times the temperature rises thirty-seven degrees in a little more than two hours.

How Coal Mine Looks.

A coal mine has the appearance of a crushed centipede, says Nature Magazine. If the surface could be lifted off, as one cuts open an ant hill, the mine, with its main corridor and its lateral chambers would look not unlike a long bridge, with frequent supports, laid over on its side.

Tibetan Women Smear Their Faces With Mud

Tibetan women are not particularly prepossessing, but this is in some measure due to the practice of smearing their faces with cuth, nowadays with the object of securing protection from the high winds that blow on the Tibetan plateau. The origin of the custom was, however, quite different.

About 200 years ago, in the reign of the sixth Dalai Lama, that prelate's advisers were greatly shocked and alarmed by his amorous propensities. Being a high incarnate lama, he should have ignored the existence of women. His habit was, however, to go about Lhasa City at night, dallying with the pretty girls he met on his way.

To put a stop to this, the councilors issued orders that every woman should disfigure herself by smearing red earth on her face, and thereby render herself repulsive to the young Dalai Lama. Whether this ruse was successful is not known, but the practice has continued down to the present day.

The headdresses of the women of the wealthier families are usually covered with large seed pearls and are sometimes worth as much as $2,000.

Every Tibetan woman wears suspended round her neck by a string of pearls a "gow," or charm box.

This varies in size from that of a match-box to the dimensions of a fair-sized book, according to the circumstances of the wearer. It is usually coated with gold leaf and studded with precious stones.

These charm boxes are handed down from mother to daughter and, together with the headdress, represent the savings of the family to which the wearer belongs.—Continental edition of London Mail.

Remarkable Demises

The ways in which application forms for insurance are filled up are often more amusing than enlightening, as the British Medical Journal shows in the following selection of examples:

"Mother died in infancy."

"Father went to bed feeling well, and the next morning woke up dead."

"Grandfather died suddenly at the age of 103. Up to this time he bade fair to reach a ripe old age."

"Applicant does not know anything about maternal posterity, except that they died at an advanced age."

"Applicant does not know cause of mother's death, but states that she fully recovered from her last illness."

"Applicant has never been fatally sick."

"Applicant's brother, who was an infant, died when he was a mere child."

"Grandfather died from gunshot wound, caused by an arrow shot by an Indian."

"Applicant's fraternal parents died when he was a child."

"Mother's last illness was caused from chronic rheumatism, but she was cured before death."—The Christian Advocate.

World's First Clock

In 1809 the first clock known to the world was placed in the tower of San Eustorgio, in Milan. In 1844 a clock was installed in the palaces of the nobles at Padua. This was a wonder of mechanism indeed, for, besides indicating the hours, it showed the course of the sun, the revolutions of the planets, the various phases of the moon, the months and the fetes of the year.

In 1420 an alarm clock made its appearance. The chroniclers have placed on record that this clock sounded a bell at a stated hour, and at the same time a little wax candle was lighted automatically. How this was done we are not told, but it must not be overlooked that until about a hundred years ago we had no means of obtaining light other than the tinder box.—Detroit News.

Need Sleep for Memory

Insufficient sleep causes impairment of memory, according to recent researches on the subject of sleep by Professors Engelen, Frerichs and Weygandt of Berlin, Germany. The memory becomes unreliable even if the shortage of sleep has occurred for only a short time. Eight hours is the average needed for sleep, but brain workers sometimes require more. A reduced period of slumber may be partly made up for by increased intensity, a short period of deep, undisturbed sleep having the same effect as a longer and lighter one.

The investigators also conclude that brain workers need a month of rest every year and that even longer vacations do not cause a lessening of acquired abilities, but rather an intensification of them.—Kansas City Star.

But when a pretty girl gives the cop a dazzling smile, he doesn't advise her to try that on the judge.

He knows it would probably work.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Deer's Swimming Suit.

In winter the fur of the deer is specially adapted for swimming. The hairs are composed of air cells and when the coat is about an inch long it will suffice to float him. Most of the bucks shed their antlers in January.—From Nature History.

Diver's Greatest Depth.

The greatest depth at which a diver has worked with success is 182 feet, the hero of this exploit being a Spanish diver, who recovered $6,000 in silver from a wreck off Finisterre.

"Home, Sweet Home," First Sung.

"Home, Sweet Home" was sung for the first time on May 8, 1823, in "Clari, the Maid of Milan," produced in Covent Garden theater, London.

DIVERS PERFORM UNUSUAL TASKS

Engineering Problems Are Solved With Their Aid.

Divers are sometimes called upon to perform unusual tasks, as their attempts at rescue work in the flooded Redding pit show. Not long ago the police had to call in the services of a diver to search for stolen jewelry in the muddy bottom of the Regent's canal, and occasionally they are asked to look for rings and other valuables that have fallen from piers and yachts. Winchester cathedral owes its present stability to the work of a diver in the employment of a firm of wreck salvors and treasure-raisers. He had to work in a pit below the foundations, placing bags of cement in the dark by sense of touch. Though the idea of employing a diver to restore the solidity of the building was a last resource, it was a complete success, and one of the "stiftest propositions that a diver has ever been called upon to tackle" was brought to a satisfactory conclusion.

The divers employed in the Redding pit are using the pipe-line type of diving dress, but the self-contained type is frequently used for unusual work. It was only owing to the existence of the self-contained type that the Severn tunnel was freed from water after it was thought that this great undertaking would have to be abandoned. After the water had broken into the workings of the tunnel, it was found that the sluices at the face were opened. Diver Lambert and Mr. Fleuss, the inventor of the special diving-dress employed, investigated, going 1,200 feet along the tunnel in the dark, constantly meeting with obstructions and stumbling over sleepers and rails. At last Lambert closed the sluices, or rather thought he had closed them, but not knowing that one of them worked on a left-hand screw, he shut one only to open the other. He therefore, had to retrace his steps and correct the error.

In Canada some years ago divers were used in connection with the police to unravel a disappearance mystery. The manager of a mine had constantly been threatened by "bad hats," and one day he disappeared. Divers went down, and there among a litter of old machinery they found the body. The man had been bound with wire, weighted, and dropped to his death in the shaft. After grim work like this, laying dock foundations and cleaning ships' bottoms are prosaic tasks.—London Tip-Bits.

Then He Shut Up

It is annoying when one goes to the theater and has one's view obstructed by the hat of a woman seated in front. Nobody has much sympathy for those of the fair sex who choose to wear their largest hats while seeking amusement; but, on the other hand, there is the crusty old man who finds fault with everything and pretends that he is unable to see the stage even when the hat in front of him is of the smallest variety. One of these was at the theater when, after fidgeting for some time, he growled in a loud voice to the girl in front of him: "Do you mind removing your hat? I can't see through wood." The girl turned and looked at him quietly for a moment, and then said, calmly: "Very well, change seats; I can."

Farm Boy's Pig Rise

About eight years ago a farm boy in a remote section of Rowan county, N. C., joined a pig club which the county agricultural extension agent was organizing, and, as pig club members do under the guidance of the county agent, he fed and cared for a pig, in this case a Poland China gilt. During the next year the county lost its extension agent. Recently when a new agent came to the county he found, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, that the club member, J. E. Morgan, now grown and on his own farm, had kept up his club practices, developed a herd of Poland China hogs of excellent type, and was regarded as the best hog grower in his community.

Followed Instructions

Teacher glanced at the clock and saw that the hands pointed to five minutes before ten o'clock. Looking round the class, she noticed that Freddie Franks, the bad boy, was late again, as usual. "Has anybody seen Freddie this morning?" she inquired, and at that moment the truant, looking rather flustered, entered the room. "Why are you late again, Freddie?" asked the teacher in stern tones. "Well, ma'am," replied Freddie, the ingenious, "just as I was coming along to school at half-past eight a policeman shouted out to me: 'Hi, sonny, mind the steamroller!' So, of course, I stayed there and did as he told me."

BY AUTO TO FLORIDA

Now these "fiddlers" are not the kind we have in Michigan but a sort of a crab. This island was just alive with them. They are a trifle larger than grasshoppers and have numerous legs, they sure can scramble over the sand and burrow holes which they have made in the sand on the beach. I never would make a good "fiddler catcher" but will say that after hesitating a few minutes, I joined in the sport of chasing fiddlers over the sandy beach and conveying them to the tin can kept for that purpose. Having our bait all secure, we rowed up close to one of the islands, under the branches of a water-oak and drew in the fish right smart and how these fish liked that bait. To Fred and I, it was our first experience fishing in salt water and the first time we had ever fished for "sheep-heads", a large striped fish with brown and white stripes running around their body like the garb of a convict, sometimes called "convict fish." After eating our lunch we went back to the island for more bait.

The tide had changed and we could not land our boat on dry land so we all removed our shoes and stockings and waded in. The first object we encountered on the beach was a diamond back rattle snake, all coiled. The men in their bare feet, soon killed it with an oar, but chas. fiddlers seemed to have lost it's attraction for that day. That afternoon, spent on the Halifax river in a boat, was a revelation to me of the beauties of nature that existed in this land of sunshine and flowers. A short distance from us we could see the white spray of the ocean and hear the music of the waves; like some mighty organ playing the march of "Time and Eternity."

Across on the shore we can see the great light house, a silent sentinel rising high above orange groves, bay trees, and palms. The water is alive with bird life; sea gulls and great pelicans sport over the waves and occasionally we catch a glimpse of a porpoise as it rolls in the water. A sea plane lands at the dock we have left and we watch it skim over the water and gracefully rise and sail away. We almost reluctantly row back and enjoy a fish supper. Then twilight and evening is upon us, so quickly does darkness follow daylight here that night is upon us before we can realize it.

One writer has said, "Even as Christmas Eve is different from all other evenings, so Florida evenings are different from all others." Even the stars shine brighter here than elsewhere. One has to see and feel a Florida evening to know what it is like. You have an inclination to wander alone under the stars and listen to the soft murmur of the wind in the palm trees, beautiful beyond words is the glint of the moonlight on the moss covered trees, causing them to shine like silver as their long branches of Spanish moss sway in the breeze, a picture more sublime than heart or mind of artist can conceive or hand of man execute. We spent a restful Sunday. We walked by the seashore and remembered the words of the song, "Old ocean, old ocean, forever in motion." We bathed in it's waters and gathered shells on the beach, and yet we are unable to convey in writing the wonder and beauty of it all. Someone has said, "A man is different after he has seen the ocean." That is true, your eyes not only have seen but your soul has beheld a wonderful work of God.

Monday we were up early, stakes pulled, car loaded, ready at eight o'clock to take a wild ride on the beach into Daytona ahead of the tide. A ride never to be forgotten, the beach is hard as a pavement, the tide is coming in and every wave brings it higher up on the beach, sometimes it splashes up on the wheels but we swerve to the left for the beach is wide. The water is beautiful in changing shades of blue and green and the waves fringed with white. The air is fresh and full of the salt sea spray. It was a wonderful ride and we made twelve miles in 28 minutes. We entered the beautiful city of Daytona and found letters from home and came back to earth again in reading the news from our home town.—Hale.

TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

Geography were so large that they have been divided. The American Literature class is studying Shakespeare's, "King Lear." Bessie Brandal of Hale has entered the eleventh grade. The Modern History class are very much interested just now in preparing some booklets on the "Making of Germany." They are writing these booklets and illustrating them with pictures taken from magazines. The Ancient History class began this semester with the study of Rome and they are considering now as a foundation for future study, the geographical conditions which influenced Rome and her growth. The Senior American History class are taking the study of slavery in the United States before the Civil War. In comparing present day history with the history of 1850, they are finding that the great question before the country then was slavery, where now it is tax reduction. The chemical laboratory supplies have come so we can get down to real work now. Parents—Visit the school at least once before you criticize.

LADIES LITERARY CLUB GIVES BANQUET AT HOLLAND HOTEL

"There is no group in the country so unaware of its own strength as the women's clubs." We hate war. Our world president, Mrs. Carrie C. Catt says, "War will end when the women of the country say it shall end." "We hate illiteracy." "We can cure it." "We can mass our activities to protect and idealize them. That the high ideals altruistic motives and sincere desire for general advancement of the originators of this club may be reflected by the members of 1924-1925 is the most sincere wish of your president. Mrs. John McCray then read the following resolution which was adopted by the club: Resolved—That in common with all the people of this country, we voice our admiration for ex-president Wilson and our profound sorrow at his death. In the years to come, if war shall again desolate the earth, and the mothers of this land be compelled to yield their sons to bloody strife. All they who fight and they who sorrow will remember and bless Woodrow Wilson because he gave himself in an earnest effort to deliver them from the heritage of war. Therefore, let this resolution be incorporated in the minutes of our meeting tonight that others may know of our esteem and respect for our martyred president. The president then announced that the program would be a Daughter's Program and the following numbers were given and well received. Vocal Duet—Misses Neva and Evelyn Buttler. Piano Solo—Miss Louise Murray. Recitation—Miss Mary Ellen LaBerge. Violin Solo—Miss Phyllis Marontate. Whistling Solo—Miss Joy Mc Murray. Dance in Scotch Costume—Miss Fay Adams. Wild Horses Increase. Wild horses in the vicinity of Bend, Ore., have increased so rapidly that they are becoming a nuisance. Extremely low prices for horses resulted in the ranchers turning them out into the mountains to shift for themselves. Severe Case. "Mamma! Mamma!" cried the little girl at the circus, looking at a leopard, "that doggie has the largest measles I ever saw!" Velocity of Sound.
