USE CARE WHEN PICKING WILD FLOWERS

The East Tawas Ladies Literary Club would like to bring to the attention of the public the necessity of using care when picking wild flowers in this district. So many times people thoughtlessly destroy plants by pulling the flowers up by the roots, especially the arbutus. Wild flowers are becoming scarce near our thickly populated districts because of their great demand by nature loving people.

A movement in general is now over the United State toward bringing to the attention of the public, the necessity of gathering flowers carefully to see that the roots are not damaged. Only in this way can we prevent the total extinction of the best of our wild varieties.

At this time it applies principally to the trailing arbutus and the violets, which are among the most beautiful wild flowers in Michigan.

FOREST PROTECTION WEEK ANNOUNCED

President Coolidge has designated April 21 to 27, inclusive, as this year's Forest Protection Week, according to information received by the Forest Service. Forest Protection Week this spring will mark the fourth annual observance of an intensive campaign to acquaint the public with the serious and unnecessary damage caused by forest fires. More than 36,000 fires are reported in the United States every year, and an area of about 11,000,000 acres is swept by the flames.

Col. William B. Greeley, chief of the Forest Service, in discussing President Coolidge's action, said: "The President of the United States has officially approved the plan of designating the week of April 21-27, inclusive, as Forest Protection Week. In so doing he has again made this matter of burning up the woods a subject for serious thought by every citizen.

"Unlike so many 'weeks' that adorn the calendar, Forest Protection Week is not calculated to benefit any single class of citizens or any particular kind of business. On the contrary, every citizen is a consumer of lumber and the heavy burdens caused by burning up America's fast diminishing supply of timber fall alike on all shoulders.

"Forest Protection Week offers an opportunity for State authorities, public and semipublic organizations, business men's clubs, the boy scouts, the girl scouts, all outdoor and recreational societies, Arbor Day clubs and Audubon societies to properly take an active part in bringing home to the American people the great lesson the forest fires must be stamped out. Fire in the woods is an outlaw just as much as it is in the home. Fight it and fight it hard!"

Eighty Music Schools for Poor in the U. S.

Since the founding of the first music school settlement 30 years ago the movement has been so successful that there are now 80 such schools in the country. Seven of the schools are in New York city and have recently banded together as the Association of Music School Settlements. Their aim is to bring the beauty and the solace of fine music into lives that are more or less dreary.

In a city like New York are many young people whose lives are hemmed in by hard necessity; young folk, to whom healthful joy is largely denied; to whom an experience such, for example, as a day in the country seems almost a myth. These young people in considerable numbers turn instinctively to music as the only available means to satisfy the craving of the spirit for better things. They lack the money to go to hear a good orchestra or to buy a phonograph or a radio set. All they have is their hands and their voices.

Yet hands and voices are useless without instruction; wherefore the music school settlement has found its reason for existence. In these schools the young people are taught by teachers who love the work; the lessons are within the reach of all. Free scholarships are provided for those who excel. The standard of work done is said to compare favorably with that of any conservatory.

The support of the schools is derived from private contributions and benefit concerts. In New York a series of concerts is being given this winter at Carnegie hall, at which artists such as Ignace Paderewski, Mischa Elman, Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, the New York Symphony orchestra, conducted by Walter Damrosch, and the Society of the Friends of Music, under the leadership of Arthur Bodanzki, contribute their services.

There are more than 3,000 students in the New York schools and their numbers are growing so fast that the schools are not able to take care of all applicants and have had to institute waiting lists.—New York Times.
