Next Sunday's Games
Alabaster at Tawas City.

(Game at Beach Diamond)

Again the strong Alabaster nine met defeat at the hands of Tawas City in one of the fastest and most exciting games of the season by a score of 4 to 3.

The local boys took an early start of two runs in the first inning, but were overcome by Alabaster's three-run tally in the third. However, in the seventh inning the local team managed to put two men over the plate, thereby taking a one point lead, score 4 to 3. Fast plays characterized the entire game and provided much excitement.

Southpaw Benson went to the mound for Alabaster, but was relieved by Clayton when the local boys became too familiar with him. Clayton was in very good form, allowing only two hits and fanning eight. See's steady vicious onslaughts brought only misery to the White City boys, allowing them five scattered hits and also fanning eight.

The final game of the season, between Alabaster and Tawas City, will be played at the Tawas Beach diamond. This is a great treat to baseball fans. These teams are so evenly matched that next Sunday's game promises to be exciting as well as interesting. See it.

H. J. KEISER ELECTED SCHOOL TRUSTEE

At the annual school meeting of District No. 7, fractional Tawas City and Tawas township, H. J. Keiser was elected trustee for a term of three years.

It was voted to raise $12,000 for school purposes again this year.

Mrs. R. M. Baguley, secretary of the board of education reported that Tawas City had again been placed on the list of University schools for a period of two years. She said that Inspector McCloskey had given Tawas City schools a very favorable comment after making his inspection.

The financial reports of the secretary and treasurer were accepted at this meeting.

NEW FORD GARAGE OPENED

This week the new home of the Ford at Tawas City opened in the recently completed Cholger building. The new building is very pleasing in appearance and is excellently located for a garage.

The building is 60 x 60 of cement and brick construction, with a circular, steel girdered roof. It has a handsome appointed salesroom equipped with steel and glass display cases, and steel stock bins. It has ample room for the display of several cars.

The garage has a full new equipment for repairing and rebuilding cars and here first class work will be given on all makes of cars.

Jas. H. Leslie, owner of the new Ford Sales and Service is well known throughout this section as a garage man. He has had about ten years of experience in that line prior to coming to Tawas City.

Mr. Leslie has made an announcement relative to the "New Fords" which appears on another page of the Herald.

ILLINOIS MAN DROWNS AT TAWAS BEACH

Bernard Reynolds, age 23, was drowned at about 2:30 Monday afternoon at Tawas Beach. The young man was employed at the beach. The remains were taken to his home at Urbana, Illinois Tuesday evening. An inquest was held Tuesday afternoon at the office of Justice John W. Tait.

The decedent and a companion, Donald Phillips, also an employe at the beach, attempting to swim to the diving platform. Phillips, who is a good swimmer reached the platform. Seeing that Reynolds could not swim very well, Phillips urged him to go back, but the young man continued forward.

At a point where the water was about eight feet in depth he went under. Phillips quickly swam back and dived for him, but in the struggle, Phillips was soon at the drowning point himself. Phillips calls for help were heard and the coast guard station and Dr. R. C. Pochert were notified.

Meanwhile Miss Mildred Faulkner, who had been in the dining room of the club house at the time, ran down to the beach and was soon at the place where the young man had gone down. She dived six times before she located the body and brought it ashore. Miss Faulkner, who is experienced in first aid, immediately tried to resuscitate him. At this point the coast guard crew arrived followed by Dr. Pochert.

After working over the young man for one and one-half hours, their combined efforts were unavailing. Dr. Pochert stated at the inquest that it was his opinion that death was instantaneous, due to acute dilatation of the heart rather than actually drowning, as the lungs contained very little water.

Bernard Reynolds is the only son of Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds of Urbana. He had been at the beach for about two weeks.

MANY PLAY ON NEW GOLF COURSE

Eighty-two players have used the Tawas Golf Course during the past week. From now on ladies will be allowed to play free of charge every Wednesday for the balance of the season.

WILMINGTON SPENDS DAY IN HARBOR

The U. S. S. Wilmington was in the harbor Tuesday enroute to Mackinaw island. The crew consists of naval reserves on their training trip. The young men are from Toledo and Cincinnati. A number of them were in the city on shore leave.

Dr. and Mrs. G. R. Steinhurst returned Tuesday night to their home in Chicago after spending a week at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Steinhurst.

FOUR NEW TRUSTEES AT WHITEMORE

District No. 2, fractional Burleigh township at Whittemore, has nearly a new board of education as a result of the annual meeting held Monday evening. The new members are Jos. Collins, Roy Charters, Adolph Cataline and Theodore Bellville. The retiring members are Charles Schuster, Charles Partlo, Irving Beardslee and Court Beardslee. Burr R. Hall remains on the board.

About 100 voters attended the meeting.

TAWAS BOY IS HELD UP

At 11:30 o'clock last Saturday evening Gerald Bowen of this city was held up and robbed of about $20.00 near the McCaskey residence on the Plank road. Bowen was driving a car and attempted to pass a Hudson sedan containing three men, when he was forced to drive into the ditch. His assailants jumped out of the sedan, forced him to give up what money he had on his person and then drove away. He immediately drove to the sheriff's office and called sheriff C. W. Curry. When they returned to the scene of the holdup, no trace of the thugs could be found.

MEMORIAM

In sacred memory of Bertha Bunn, who entered into eternal rest and peace July 17, 1926.

How sad and sudden was the call for our dear wife and mother, daughter and sister, who gave her life for her baby son one year ago today—July 17, 1926.

No one knows the silent heartaches. Only those who have lost can tell of the grief we have borne in silence. For the one we loved so well.

In loving memory by her husband and son, Dewey Bunn and son, Dewey her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Cater; her brother, Claude; her grandfather, M. G. Grinkey, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Judd and family.

NATURALIST ON TONIGHT'S PROGRAM

Carver Wells, the famous Naturalist, who is to lecture here on the fifth night of our Community Chautauqua, has spoken before audiences all over the world. Comment from newspaper reports of his lectures in widely separated places will prove interesting.

"Mr. Wells is in a field by himself as an entertaining lecturer."—Royal Gazette & Colonist Daily, Hamilton, Bermuda.

"The lecturer took his audience around the world in ten minutes, pausing only at spots of interest."—The Journal, Chicago.

"His description of the jungles, its perils and its people was especially interesting and full of information."—Killarney, Manitoba, Canada.

"He tells vivid, human stories of queer people and animals, and proves truth stranger than fiction."—Plaindealer, Cleveland.

"No advance notices could do justice to the originality of Mr. Wells, with his light and vividly humorous, yet informing, treatment of the subject; his persistent piling up of all but incredible statements with an air of verity and an undercurrent of persiflage which often baffled the judgment of his hearers."—Daily Intelligence, Lancaster, Pa.

At 2:30 this afternoon a Junior Chautauqua demonstration will be given under the direction of Miss Bonds.

At 3:00 p. m. a humorous novelty program will be given by Vernon Stone and Electra Platt.

Washington's Southland Singers opened the Chautauqua season Monday evening with the largest audience that ever greeted the chautauqua platform here. Songs and scenes from the "Old Southland" proved a very pleasing feature.

Those who are fascinated with fine acting and rich costumes were especially fortunate Tuesday afternoon in seeing "The House of Rimmon," a dramatization of the Biblical story of the healing of Naamon the Lepers.

A baffling mystery with a surprising climax held Tuesday evening's audience in suspense until the final denouement, when Arthur MacMurray ad his company presented "Wandering Spooks."

Music lovers were treated with two extraordinary programs Wednesday afternoon and evening by the Humphreys Symphonic ensemble. The musical prelude in the evening was followed by "The Fourth Line of Defense," a lecture by Judge Bale of Columbus, O. Exceptionally favorable comment has been made by chautauqua patrons relative to Judge Bale's lecture. The lecturer urged the development of the nation's fourth line of defense—the people making up this great commonwealth—in higher morals, more efficient education and better physical standards, as well as the first, second and third lines of defense—the army, navy and commercial resources of the country.

A pleasing interpretation of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" was given by Olive Kackley Thursday afternoon.

"Let's go Somewhere" is a delightful comedy depicting the tragic-comic conflict of the old and the new. It was pleasingly presented Thursday evening by the Kackley players.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. Arthur M. Coldren of Pittsford, Mich will conduct the services in the morning and evening and at the Hemlock road in the afternoon.

Morning service 10:00.
Bible school 11:15.
Young People's meeting 6:45 p. m. Evening preaching service 7:30.

proved! Smart women of fashion are at this moment looking their smartest in short-jacketed, short-skirted tailors topped with plain-banded straw hats of enormous dimensions. That's the interesting part of these big-brimmed hats (some quite floppy)—they are not confined to dressy modes. Rather do they compete with entrancing so-thin-you-can-see-through-them picture types. For that matter many of the large tall-banded black hats are themselves transparent, but these $31.26 are not as frequent as are the very Edwin elegant millans, with their velvet bows.

regularly banded, with either grosgrain or velvet ribbon, this is the regular trim adopted by fashion for the straw hats, such as the one pictured to the left in this group. If Patrick it a millan which millady wears then grant's a leghorn wide of brim or very likely one of the new pallassin test, straw. Leghorns which measure up to the mode's requirements as to width of brim are either au naturel, or else dyed black or some lovely pastel shade. Black velvet ribbon bands are the rule for natural or black leghorns.

When she had finished dressing she went to find Louise. She had not far to go for Louise was in a tiny "coop-up place no bigger than my pantry," Maria thought. Louise was working over a queer-looking machine all knobs and levers.

"Where's your kitchen, Louise?" Maria asked.
"Why, this is the kitchen," Louise answered.
"But where's your cook stove?"
"This is my stove," Louise answered. "It's electric and really wonderful. No ashes, no matches. Just turn a knob." She opened a door and revealed a roast of meat, baked potatoes and a delicious-looking pudding ready to serve.

Maria stared. "Why, it's uncanny!" she murmured. She watched in amazement as Louise went to the wall, opened a door and took out a bottle of cream and several packages placed on the dumb-waiter by the grocery delivery boy. "It's all very handy, I've no doubt," she commented thoughtfully.

"I should think so! When I think of the old days back in Palenville with its outdoor wells, wood fires, heatless houses and cash-and-carry stores I wonder how I ever stood it. But I was young—and I had Jerry," and she sighed.

Maria offered to help with the supper work, but Louise informed her that Freda would see to it. She had tickets to a show. She telephoned for a taxi and away they went. It was eleven o'clock when they got home, for Louise insisted upon dropping into a gay little restaurant for a bit of chicken salad after the show.

Maria, used to early hours and quiet evenings, never closed an eye until three o'clock, and even then she did not rest because her dreams were full of half-naked girls dancing as if for dear life on cakes of ice, while millions of bright lights danced around them. She was awake at six, but as

THE TAWAS HERALD

IT WAS GRAND TO BE HOMESICK

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

MARIA CRAIG hung listlessly over the old cook stove ready to take up the dinner as soon as she heard her husband's step on the side porch. From time to time she glanced from the window with a far-away look in her eyes. Maria knew every inch of the view from that window as well as she knew her own kitchen with its smoked and cracked walls, uneven floor, battered cook stove and old-fashioned iron sink. Oh, how miserably sick she was of it all. If she could only go a great way off and stay and stay until she became homesick—perhaps.

Homesick! She did not know from any experience of her own what the word meant. She had never been away from Palenville to stay longer than a day in her whole life. She was even likely to die where she was born in this same dingy house where she was at this moment. Of course she had the assurance of living many years yet—she came from a long-lived race, and she was only fifty-one. Take this house for instance. It had been in the Palen family for four generations and had come to her by the death of her parents. When she married John Craig he had come to live with her. John was an honest, hard-working man, but inclined to be stingy. Just at the moment the potatoes were done John came.

"I stopped at the post office," he said. "Here's a letter for you."

Maria read the letter aloud:
"Dear Maria: You have always promised to make me a visit. Why can't you come now? Since Jerry died I am all alone. How much alone, I am just beginning to find out. I have money, acquaintances, friends, but in my loneliness I long for some one I knew in the old days, some one who knew Jerry and me when we lived in Palenville. I am sending you a railroad ticket. Please use it and come. Lovingly,
"LOUISE."

"Well, forevermore!" Maria ejaculated. "Louise Cady wants me to make her a visit. Why, I haven't seen her since her folks died and that's all of twenty years ago. It's nice of her to remember me but of course I can't go."

"Why not?" John spoke slowly. "She sent you a ticket. I'd go." And so John settled the matter just as he always did.

Louise met Maria at the station. She had a taxi waiting and they were whirled through the city to a great apartment building. Louise unlocked a door and they entered a twilight dimness which was instantly transformed when she pressed a button on the wall.

"This is your room, Maria," Louise said, crossing the small living room and opening a door. "Make yourself at home and we'll see what Freda has got for us to eat."

Maria, who was of a large and solid build, hardly dared turn around in the tiny bedroom. A narrow bed took up most of the room, a wardrobe took nearly one side, and a dressing table the other. To Maria, unused to anything but a stove, the central heating in the apartment seemed almost suffocating. She went to the window and raised it. But this did not afford much relief because the window opened onto an air shaft. "Well, forevermore!" she gasped in astonishment.

When she had finished dressing she went to find Louise. She had not far to go for Louise was in a tiny "coop-up place no bigger than my pantry," Maria thought. Louise was working over a queer-looking machine all knobs and levers.

"Where's your kitchen, Louise?" Maria asked.
"Why, this is the kitchen," Louise answered.
"But where's your cook stove?"
"This is my stove," Louise answered. "It's electric and really wonderful. No ashes, no matches. Just turn a knob." She opened a door and revealed a roast of meat, baked potatoes and a delicious-looking pudding ready to serve.

Maria stared. "Why, it's uncanny!" she murmured. She watched in amazement as Louise went to the wall, opened a door and took out a bottle of cream and several packages placed on the dumb-waiter by the grocery delivery boy. "It's all very handy, I've no doubt," she commented thoughtfully.

"I should think so! When I think of the old days back in Palenville with its outdoor wells, wood fires, heatless houses and cash-and-carry stores I wonder how I ever stood it. But I was young—and I had Jerry," and she sighed.

Maria offered to help with the supper work, but Louise informed her that Freda would see to it. She had tickets to a show. She telephoned for a taxi and away they went. It was eleven o'clock when they got home, for Louise insisted upon dropping into a gay little restaurant for a bit of chicken salad after the show.

Maria, used to early hours and quiet evenings, never closed an eye until three o'clock, and even then she did not rest because her dreams were full of half-naked girls dancing as if for dear life on cakes of ice, while millions of bright lights danced around them. She was awake at six, but as she had orders not to get up until eight she had nothing else to do but lie and listen to the street noises. They had a light breakfast at noon, and Maria, used to an early and hearty breakfast, was almost faint from lack of food. She thought longingly of eggs, pancakes smothered in maple syrup and at least two big cups of her special brand of coffee.

All that day they were on the go. Louise acted as if she wanted to show Maria the whole city at once. In the evening there was another show.

Next day the program was the same. The fourth morning Maria looked pale and felt shaky. Even the morning coffee did not revive her. She looked at Louise to see if she, too, were not beginning to give out under the strain but she looked as fresh as ever.

"I've made up a full program for today," Louise said, nibbling at a roll like a mouse. "How I am enjoying your visit, Maria! I haven't felt so much like myself since Jerry went away." She sighed. "I have a perfectly wonderful morning planned—"

Maria gulped. "I am sorry, Louise, but I feel that I must go home—today."

"Go—home! Why, Maria! Are you sick—er—"

"No, I'm not sick—but I've got to go. I've had a lovely time, Louise, but I really can't stay another minute."

It was dusk when Maria reached home. She went round to the kitchen door where a light shone out. She was greeted by a smell of frying pork. John was getting supper. He had fried pork, mashed potatoes and some of her very own kind of coffee! She ran across the room and flung her arms about his neck.

"John!" she breathed as she cuddled her head against his shoulder. "Thank God, I'm home!"

"Why, Maria!" John gasped in astonishment. "I wasn't expecting you for days. Are you sick?"

"No—not really sick, John, only a little homesick. And, oh, it's grand to be homesick!"

Not until the next morning when Maria entered her kitchen to get breakfast did she notice what had taken place during her absence. There was a bright new range, a new sink and even a new porcelain-covered kitchen table.

"I am going to have a new floor laid, the walls papered and running water put in," John said, just then entering the room. "I wanted to have it all done and the mess cleaned up before you got home. You see, Maria, I sorta figured that after you had seen Louise's grand place you might come back disconcerted—"

But Maria said nothing. She was too busy getting breakfast, such a breakfast as only she knew how to get.

Tracing Bank Notes to Ancient Babylon

One of the earliest banking firms of which there is record was that of Egibi & Son, who are supposed to have carried on an advance, exchange and general financial business in Babylon between 700 and 600 B. C. Knowledge of this firm is obtained from certain records on clay tablets found in excavations made upon and near the site of that city.

There have also been found in these and other Assyrian explorations bills of credit and drafts, in the form of small clay tablets, which were, apparently, in use among the merchants of that time. It is plain that these tablets were negotiable, but from the nature of things they could not pass by indorsement, since once the clay was baked nothing more could be added. The name of the payee was for this reason frequently omitted.

In Egypt similar inscriptions on papyrus of very early date have been found. The use of notes as a paper currency was adopted by the Chinese long before it was tried in Europe, and a bank for the issue of such notes was established in that country about 1000 A. D.

Banking in ancient Greece was so far developed before the decadence of that country that it included deposits at interest and letters of credit as well as advances. The Romans derived their banking customs from the Greeks and added somewhat to them.

Red Diamonds

Considerable attention has been attracted lately by the finding near Kimberley of a red diamond that is expected, when cut, to weigh six karats. Two other red diamonds have also been found near Pretoria; one, a brownish red, weighed 1½ karats in the rough and ¾ karat cut; the other is a reddish amber and weighed 1 carat rough and ½ karat cut. Red diamonds are exceedingly rare; there is a fine red stone of ¾ karat in the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago, one of 2 karats in the museum at Vienna and the red diamond of the Emperor Paul, weighing 8 carats, among the Russian crown jewels.

His Meaning

A motor tourist, passing the Johnson home on "Rumpus Ridge, beheld a boy driving a mule team and heard him yell, "Hud-up, there, Jule!" Then the onlooker observed the boy suddenly straighten up and leap forward, landing on the mule's back, and begin beating her with both fists as he rolled off onto the ground.

"What in the world," asked the stranger, "did the lad mean by such procedure?"

"Aw, that's my boy, Banty," replied Gap Johnson. "I reckon likely he wanted the durn' mule to know he meant business."—Kansas City Star.

Study of Mosaic

The study of the mysterious plant disease called mosaic, from the mottled character of the infected leaves, may be greatly enhanced by the use of the ultramicroscope designed by J. E. American Diamonds

Over 10,000 diamonds have been found in the United States, according to the Scientific Monthly. Arkansas has produced most of these, though California, the Great Lakes section and the Piedmont plain of the Atlantic coast have offered a few. The finest found in 1924 tipped the jeweler's scales at 40.23 carats.

Why He Didn't Vote

Summoned to explain why he had not voted at an election in compliance with the Australian compulsory voting law, a Melbourne man wrote back to the election board: "See Herald birth notices." There was no prosecution.

Latest in Watches

The world's thinnest watch has been invented in France. By eliminating the hands the hour is marked by a revolving dial, making it easier to tell the time. The inventor further claims that by dispensing with the mechanism which moved the hands it has been possible to make a more delicate and accurate timepiece.
