SUNBURN FAD IN COLORING; RAYON FLANNEL IS POPULAR

THE sunburn fad, started a year ago, is no longer a fad. The girl or woman who fails to achieve a coat of sunburn next summer will feel as she would if she left off rouge in winter. As a matter of fact, the sunburn fad has gone right through into winter so far. No sooner do we begin to lose the coat of tan achieved last summer than the Palm Beach season opens, and we start to achieve another coat. Little wonder, then, that sunburn has had such a tremendous influence on colors we are wearing. Pale, languid women are out of date. Everything is now animation. It's smart to participate in sports, even if one only holds a golf stick on the links to appear like a sportsman. We no longer protect our complexion from the sun. Rather we invite its direct rays as we would a beauty treatment. So it is the color that tones in with the sunburned skin that is the most popular. White is very important for this very reason. It's success for evening wear as a complement to sunburned skin during the fall may have encouraged it for sportswear for the coming summer.

It's success for evening wear as a complement to sunburned skin during the fall may have encouraged it for sportswear for the coming summer.

White naturally needs a complement of color to give it animation. In the prints of both silk and cotton we find the more animated, clearer colors sponsored by the sunburn trend on white grounds. Usually the prints combine two or three colors in the brighter, clearer tones. To the cottons this gives new, crisp, lively tone. Cottons, by the way, are coming into their own more and more each year. This year is predicted as a banner year by stylists.

A great deal of blue, red, yellow and green is being used in the cotton

Orchard Information

PEACH CURCULIO IS COSTLY BUG

To Control Growers Must Follow Definite Schedule.

One of the costly insects which cuts profits to the peach grower is the curculio, sometimes referred to as the "Million-Dollar" bug.

"This insect passes the winter as an adult, hidden under trash and leaves, along fence rows and other places," says C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at the North Carolina State college. "The beetle emerges about the time the peach buds are opening and feeds on the young foliage until the fruit is set. The young peaches are attacked as soon as they are set, and are damaged in two ways. First, the fruit is punctured, the egg deposited and the crescent-shaped scar is sealed over. The worm developing in the small fruit causes a tremendous damage. The second injury is also very serious in rainy seasons. Brown rot gains entrance to the fruit through the feeding and egg punctures and is often increased enormously in this way."

Generally, there are two generations of the curculio, states Mr. Brannon, and when the second one comes along, it is in such enormous numbers that a whole crop of late peaches may be destroyed. The eggs of the insect hatch in three days during warm weather and each female will lay from 100 to 500 eggs. The larvae or worms feed on the fruit for 20 days then enter the soil to pupate, emerging after 28 days.

To control this costly insect, peach growers must follow a definite schedule of dusting or spraying, advises Mr. Brannon. These schedules may be obtained from the county agents or from the state college. Growers are also urged to pick up and destroy the drops, beginning just after the fruit is set. As a further precaution, the growers might well disk the orchard, using the extension disk, and going over the land at least once a week until summer. Many of the larvae and pupae will thus be destroyed.

Concord Vines Average Three Tons Per Acre

Under the best of care and on the most favorable soils Concord vines have averaged three tons per acre over a ten-year period. This means that in some seasons the yield has only been three-fourths of a ton, while in others it has reached the high point of six tons per acre. Yields have been noted running to eight tons but this is exceptional. Probably Concord is in its prime between the tenth and twenty-fifth years; after this time the yields fluctuate more from year to year. This latter statement holds only in the event that attention be carefully given to all cultural details. The average yield of Concord is considerably less than the three-ton figure. In fact it is probably not over a half. This can be attributed to unfavorable locations and soils, to indifferent care and to unfavorable climatic conditions, during the winter, spring and active growing season.

Pruned Trees Prevents Serious Rodent Injury

When the apple trees reach the age of eight to ten years they are not so likely to be seriously injured by rabbits. The same holds true with peaches, cherries and plums. To minimize the liability of injury, however, the grower should continue to keep trees wrapped which grow near fence rows, ravines or other quarters of the rabbit. For the parts of the bearing orchard located more distant from the haunts of the cottontails, serious injury may be prevented by commencing the regular pruning shortly after the leaves drop in the fall, leaving on the ground near the trees the branches removed. These furnish food for both rabbits and field mice, and they may be more fond of the tender bark on the pruned branches and shoots than that on the tree trunks. As a result, the rabbits and mice may do little or no injury.

Cover Strawberries

Strawberry plants should be "covered up and tucked in for the night." If they are covered too soon, they will not immediately enter that "sleep" which we wish them to have, but lie "half awake" until the severe winter winds begin to creep in, and then, the real danger begins. Better wait until they have gone "sound to sleep" before all the covers are placed on and they are "tucked snugly in" for the cold "night" before them.

Raspberry Care

It will pay to lay down the raspberries. The pruning will consist of cutting back the main stem to a height of from three and one-half to four feet above the ground, that is if the canes have made a good vigorous growth the preceding year. Some varieties are not as vigorous as this and may have to be cut much lower. Sometimes two and one-half feet above the ground will be as much wood as one should leave on some of the red raspberries.

Picking Beauties by Television

Florenz Ziegfeld, "glorifier" of American girls (right), is inspecting one of the commercial television sets which he has purchased to select beauties for his musical productions. The set, which hooks up with an ordinary radio, enables him to pick by visual radio the young women he needs.

TOM MOVES UPWARD

Representative Tom Connally, Democrat, who was elected to represent the state of Texas in the United States senate when it convenes next March. Congressman Connally defeated Senator Earle B. Mayfield, Democrat, present holder of the office.

HELEN TO WED

The engagement of Miss Helen Willis, star of women tennis players, to Fred S. Moody, Jr., young San Francisco broker, was announced at Berkeley, Calif., by Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Willis, her parents.

Catalina Island's New Fun Palace

Straight from flying field to theater or dance floor, crossing the Catalina channel on the way—this will be possible when the Avalon casino is completed. On the dock level of the building, now under construction, will be the amphibian plane terminal of the Western Air express. Passengers from Los Angeles may step from the planes and go directly to the theater or the ballroom.

RAYON FLANNEL STREET DRESS

been established without a doubt stylists are giving much time and thought to their creation along lines of intriguing originality.

"With a cape" is one of the boasts of the cleverest street dresses. The capes themselves furnish another outlet for "ideas" as "no two capes alike" is the slogan.

BURLEY & LEE, Editors

Arriving in a small western town an easterner was attempting to start up a friendly conversation with a native.

"Tell me," he said, "what is the status of the liquor supply around here?"

"Status," mumbled the native. "I dunno what you mean."

"I mean is it easy to obtain liquor and is there much of it around here?"

"Wall, mister," said the rustic, "All I can tell you is that a little while back, they turned off the water supply for a week and nobody knew it until the town hall caught afire."

Line of feeds we carry: Corn cracked corn, oats, ground oats, corn and oats, scratch feed, bran, chicken wheat, middlings, Hexite.

"I hear, Paddie, they've gone dry in the village where your brother lives." Paddie: "Dry, mon! They are parched! I've just had a letter from Mike, an' the postage stamp was stuck on with a pin."

Oyster shells are $1.50 per 100 by the 100 lbs.

Just received a car of Pillsbury's flour and one car of bran and middlings.

We haven't heard anything about Fred Luedtke's electrical basketball players lately. We wonder if they have been electrocuted.

Just received another car of coal $8.50 per ton off the car. Egg coal at the same price.

Our grinder is running every day. Bring in your grist and we will grind it while you wait.

Remember, we are selling scratch feed for $2.40 per 100 lbs. All pure grain—no grit.

Will have another car of Hexite Saturday.

Abnormal Blood Lust

Omaha, Neb.—Three strange criminal types—two of them killers, the other a kidnaper with a madman's method—have visited upon Omaha during the last six years a series of particularly frightful crimes.

Just now it is the "hatchet man," who killed five persons. Three years before him it was "the sniper," and in 1922 it was the "chain man"—killer, kidnaper and mad man.

The sniper, Frank Carter, went to the electric chair last year. The chain man, Fred Brown, was shot dead in 1925 during a riot at the state penitentiary where he was serving a life sentence for kidnaping.

To the final moments of his life "the sniper" was a strange mixture of bravado and fearlessness. Many said he was crazy. He was a puzzle to psychologists. His "craving for publicity," as M. Andreasen of the state prison welfare society put it, "was such as to make him try anything to get into the papers."

Even as he walked to the chair, the sniper jeered and boasted. "They say I killed three," he said as the slow tread of his death march counted off his remaining moments of life. "Three? Why, I killed 42."

The Vilseca (Iowa) ax murders, one of the most revolting chapters of Iowa criminal records, were among the crimes which the sniper paraded as his own work.

Carter operated during the early hours of evening, whereas the hatchet man chose that time of night just before dawn. During the fortnight that Carter was abroad in Omaha, claiming three lives with his silencer equipped pistol, fear of his marksmanship kept many persons off the streets during the evening hours.

The specific crime for which Carter was convicted was the slaying of an Omaha physician.

Fred Brown, the "chain man," came to Omaha trailed by a crime record which included a conviction for a murder committed when he was six-two years old. He was free on parole from a life sentence imposed upon him for that crime.

Two young women were Brown's victims here. He kidnaped and transported them to a shack at the edge of the city. There they were kept chained while he went about other crimes, including the plundering of Omaha homes.

A man, finding the women chained in the shack, set about freeing them, but was himself overpowered by Brown and placed in irons. This man later escaped, and Brown fled. He was captured shortly afterward and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Of this trial of abnormal crimes only the hatchet slayings remain unsolved and the guilty person or persons unpunished.

Three of the hatchet victims—an aged drayman, a young mother and her sister—were beaten to death as they slept.

In Luck at Last

Wichita, Kan.—Blows which they have suffered in the past are being forgotten by Willard Goodrich of this city and his two motherless children, as fortune repays them for their patience and perseverance. An oil well has come in on their 80-acre farm, which was left them by the wife and mother, who died 11 years ago.

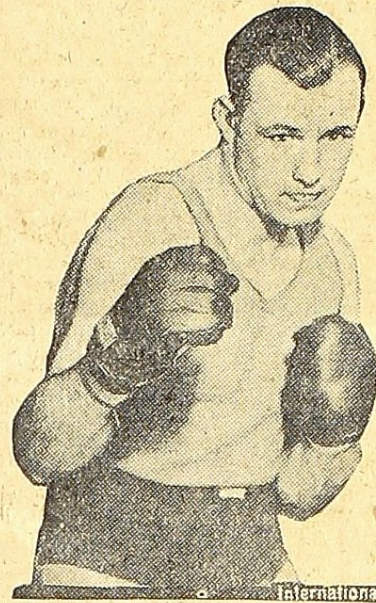

The flow of black gold assures the family comfort and ease for the rest of their lives. Willard Goodrich is known for unflagging devotion to his family. Mr. Goodrich rented his inherited farm. He preferred to farm his own land. He stayed with his double job throughout the years, rearing the children, Arlene, eighteen, and Dale, fifteen. The father cooked the meals, did the family washing, sent the children to school, and provided the income to maintain the home.

Sitting in his comfortable home, Mr.

Goodrich said oil had aroused no dreams in his mind.

"I have no particular plans," he declared. "I don't know whether I'll move anywhere or not. I don't know what it would be like to live more than a mile from home. Of course, I'm glad we struck oil; it means a lot, especially to a fellow with children."

Weight of Water and Ice

Ice formed from a pound of water will weigh a pound after the transformation. Gravitation is not affected in the least by temperature change. Nothing is added nor nothing taken away, therefore the weight is constant. However, the "volume" of the ice is greater because water expands when frozen.

WHAT COLLEGE CAN DO

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Smithers had come on from Cincinnati to see about his son. The boy was falling down somewhat, he was straying from the straight path and spending his time in other things than study. Smithers simulated surprise and showed distinct annoyance. He gave the impression that the situation was new, and was irritated that some one had not told him sooner that things were as they were.

"I think I should have been written before matters had gone as far as they have done," he suggested. "Had I known sooner what Bob was doing, I could have corrected the situation."

"But he didn't begin his loafing here," I said. "He has simply followed the practice which he started in high school—girls, pool, late hours, sleeping until noon. Why did you expect him to change when he left home?"

President Coolidge speaking at the recent celebration of the founding of Phillips Andover Academy emphasized the importance of secondary education in its influence upon the life and character of young men.

"When students now enter the college they are no longer of an impressionable age," he said. "Habits have become fixed. The college cannot altogether refashion its students. About the best it can do is to carry them in the course they have already begun. While the needs of our universities are very great, and every effort should be made to meet them, it does not seem that sufficient emphasis has been placed on the needs of our secondary schools. After all, they furnish the material that goes into the higher institutions. Their younger and more plastic students have even greater needs than those who are more mature."

Mr. Coolidge is right. All that college can do for young people is to carry them farther and faster upon the road along which they have already started. The schools and the home pretty much determine that road, and the colleges can do little to alter what has practically been determined. Smithers very foolishly thought that college would in some way metamorphosize his boy and change a loafer into a grind, and make a youth of loose principles into a saint. It has been done but infrequently, and the doing of it cannot be depended upon. College does not undertake to change the imbecile into the sage, the thoughtless into the serious-minded. It does not propose to transform the selfish into the philanthropist, nor the one who does not like books and study into the scholar. It sends your boy back to you more thoroughly developed in the qualities which he has already shown himself to possess.

Kiler was a leader in his country high school. He was a good student, a fine athlete, and a boy interested in the activities which the church fosters. He has made an honor society in college, he is on the basket ball squad, he came to me the other day to have me suggest to him names of fellows who would work with him on the deputation committee of the Young Men's Christian association. He is doing a broader way in college just what he did at home, as Smithers' son is.

Towns and cities along the river will be asked to co-operate, while steamship owners and operators are expected to participate.

Work on Air Liner

London.—Trial flights of the R-100, the gigantic airship now being constructed under the auspices of the British air ministry for the purpose of flying the Atlantic, will not be made until March next, according to information given out at the headquarters of Commander C. D. Burney, who will in all probability lead the expedition.

Although Commander Burney has been pushing his plans with all possible speed, there have been several delays as the result of manufacturers requiring extra time to supply parts for the mammoth air liner. It is pointed out, however, that the prediction of trial flights by March is a conservative one and that it is possible the intervening period will be cut down.

Meanwhile considerable speculation reigns as to who will comprise the passenger list of the ship on its great flight from England to Canada and thence to New York. While the British air ministry nominally is in charge of the flight, it is known that Commander Burney will be permitted to select practically the entire crew and that he will also determine who will be carried as passengers in addition to the representatives from the air ministry.

Requests for permission to accompany the commander on his flight have been pouring in from all parts of Europe as well as America, but it is declared that no final selections have as yet been made.

Three Million Artisans

Are Listed in Russia

Geneva, Switzerland.—Official statistics from Russia, quoted in the weekly publication of the international labor office, put the number of artisans in the Soviet union at 2,900,000, or 55 per cent of the total number of industrial workers.

Their production, including milling is valued at $2,150,000,000, or 30 per cent of the total value of the industrial production of the Soviet union. There are 7,413 artisans' co-operatives, with a total membership of 466,618 members.

Bureau of Standards

Seeks a Perfect Fuel

Washington.—Why does the engine of your automobile sometimes miss when you step on the accelerator?

That's what the bureau of standards, in co-operation with the automotive and petroleum industry, is trying to find out, the Department of Commerce announces.

The bureau of standards has already made a few discoveries along this line. For instance, of two fuels, one may give better results in winter, another in summer. Another discovery is that while the temperature of an engine's water jacket has little effect on acceleration, a motor will "pick up" quicker when the intake manifold is hot.

A perfect motor fuel is what the bureau of standards hopes to find. It will investigate also the value of auxiliary devices designed to make low-grade gasoline function as well as high test fuels.

TELEPHONE HAS NEW PLACE IN MODERN HOME

Architects Are Now Providing For Telephone Equipment In House Plans

Planning, building and furnishing the home are subjects for interesting conversation at all times among all classes of folks. Each year, thousands of new homes are built in the United States of ours; likewise, thousands of old homes are added to, rearranged and improved. Today, there are over 25,000,000 homes in the United States, and to each of them, be it ever so humble or grand, some thought of change and betterment is given by the mother, father or children.

America's homes are comfortable. They have many conveniences. They bespeak attention given to cultural items. It has been said that a humble home of the present-day affords more comforts and conveniences than the castles and palaces of royalty during the Middle Ages.

In any discussion of new homes, of improved homes, of comfortable and convenient homes, one's thoughts turn readily to the telephone. As a social factor, as a means of communication between friends in the same neighborhood, in the same city and in distant cities, the telephone in the home has been characteristic of American life. Of course, the important place of the telephone in business has long been recognized, but it is interesting to observe that about 60 per cent of the telephones of the Bell System are residence telephones.

However, to the recognition of the telephone as a necessity is being added the conception that its use should be made as convenient as possible. The idea of a telephone has developed into the idea of several telephones each conveniently located. Furthermore, modern house plans include arrangements for suitable conduit—that is, piping for telephone wires, floor outlets for connecting permanent and portable telephones, niches in walls for telephone bell boxes, and other desirable items. The present-day architects are suggesting to home builders that provision be made in advance for telephone facilities in guest rooms, dining rooms, sun porches, living rooms, bed rooms and kitchens, and wherever it may eventually contribute to convenience and comfort to have a telephone. It is good home planning to provide at time of construction for suitable telephone conduit and accessories.

They keep the new shiny machines to a minute to grind up the shank of some expensive tool to make it fit some place it was never intended to. They are not used to any up to date methods of work, but for bench work and fitting by hand they are exceptionally good. Unless something turns up, I am glad to have had the opportunity of making this trip. The chemist has gone up the Maderia river about 1000 miles from here to get rubber seed, a better kind than found in this locality, in fact the best known. So when Ford does get to making rubber, he will have far better trees than any owned by the English or anyone else in the Far East.

John should see us pull stumps here. We use a one-inch cable and a 90 horse power tractor, hooked on direct, and if the cable does not break, the stump comes—not only one, but from one to six. The cable is put around the largest, then a half-hitch taken in a few more, then away they come. I was across the river the other day. There is a big tree there. The natives call it Maderia Grande. I walked around it, 38 paces.

Well, it is about dinner time. Hope you enjoyed the holidays.

American Diamonds

Over 10,000 diamonds have been found in the United States, according to the Scientific Monthly. Arkansas has produced most of these, though California, the Great Lakes section and the Piedmont plain of the Atlantic coast have offered a few. The finest found in 1924 tipped the jeweler's scales at 46.23 carats.

Preparation Time

If we are indeed here to perfect and complete our own natures, and grow larger, stronger, and more sympathetic against some noble career in the future, we had all best bestir ourselves to the utmost while we have the time. To equip a dull, respectable person with wings would be but to make a parody of an angel.

Most of us are just a few steps ahead of starvation. Very few men have as much sense as the squirrels. —E. W. Horn's Monthly

Plants Feed on Insects

Carnivorous plants are a group of plants whose principal food is insects which are captured in various ways. The three leading types are the pitcher plant, the sundew and the Venus flytrap. In all these plants the apparatus for catching insects consists of modified leaf and flower, forming tubes, etc., and the curious adaptations are so ingenious that it seems as if they were endowed with intelligence.

"Amen" From the Hebrew
"Amen" is a Hebrew word, meaning "certainly" or "truly." It was carried over into other languages in renderings of Bible passages—as in Psalm 106:48, "And let all the people say, Amen"—and thence came to be used in similar connections, in formal creeds and confessions, in prayers, and so on.
