$ THE WINTHROP FAMILY *********

(C) by D. J. Walsh.)

THE young man before the easel threw down his brush and kicked a chair viciously. Then he slumped low in his chair, one long leg crossed over the other, his hands deep in the pockets of a paint besmeared smock. The young woman on the couch looked up from her book, shook her sleek bobbed head, and resumed her reading.

"The old man is right, Billie," said the young man mournfully. "As an artist I'm a dub! But what the devil am I going to do?"

The girl again looked up from her book. "Why go into all those details again, Neddie? You know what you should do. I've known all along that at painting you were a dub, but didn't went to hurt your feelings. Now that you're convinced-" "Oh! be yourself, Bill. What am

I_' "Go back to the ancestral roof tree and help your father build automobile bodies.'

"Well! One thing is sure-I'm through letting you support me."

"Oh, don't let that worry you, old thing. Got a raise yesterday. Old Holliday says I am the best secretary in New York. Then he asked me to go out to dinner with him."

The man sat upright in his chair and glared. "And did you-" "Oh, no I didn't," stifling a yawn;

"came home and broiled lamb chops for ambitious artist who didn't show up until ten bells."

Ned crossed the room and sat down on the davenport beside her. He took the book from her hand and threw it aside. He put his arms about her.

"Billie, we have always been deucedly frank with each other. We must be again. I've got a chance up there in Winthrop with father-a corking good chance-but they won't accept you-never! Mother would pass outsure enough. Bobbed hair! Lip stick! Rouge! Slang! And if she ever saw you do the charleston ohh-h-h! You don't know mother. She never lets you forget she is Annabelle Winthrop Rayl-the old town was named for her father-and her family tree! Why, that family tree is her pride and joy-Whoop-ee, Billie, if] ever told her that her precious son-" Billie calmly lit a cigarette and blew the smoke into Ned's face. "Let me take care of that, darling. You run along up to Winthrop and go to work-like a man. Build automobile bodies in the old Winthrop blacksmith shop or-was, it a buggy factory? And don't forget I'm a rattling good stenographer-the best in New York, Mr. Holliday says-and leave the rest to me. And now that it is decided that you are going to take your rightful place in the world as manager of the Winthrop works, as a wage-earner and as heir to the combined Winthrop and Rayl fortunes, let's take a ride on a Riverside bus. They don't have two-decker busses in Winthrop, do they?"

Mrs. Annabelle Winthrop Rayl gave various dinner-dances and lawn parties that summer after her son came home, to which she invited all the smartly select people in that section of New England. But she was a trifle annoyed with the way Ned applied himself to his father's business. When she mentioned it to her husband he rubbed his hands together and smiled. "I didn't know the lad had it in him, Annabelle; I swear I didn't." "He is a real Winthrop," said Mrs. Rayl decisively, "and has their business instinct and ability, but I do wish he would pay more attention to Harriett Emsley. He hardly notices her." "Oh, come now, Annabelle, be more charitable: At least Ned has some Rayl talents combined with the Winthrops'. You forget that the Winthrop works was just a buggy factory until a Rayl stepped in, and today we are making the finest custom-built automobile bodies in the East. And the people he brought into the organization! I didn't know that he knew a capable person from a poor one. By George, they have helped turn the trick with their up-to-date ideas. It pays to get good people and pay good salaries! That was the boy's idea, too, and he certainly brought some valuable people in with him. They have worked together, planned and improved until we have one of the finest plants in New England. By George, 'I didn't know the lad had it in him.'

tom-fool thing like that, Annabelle, | and if I do say it, she'll make a corking good wife for some fellow; but by George, I hate to lose her-" And he ran his fingers through the shock of gray hair. I'm going to find out what is the trouble. I just can't let her go unless it is something very-important! Let's have her come up and talk it over.'

And Miss Maitland came, Ned driving her up in his new maroon roadster.

"Miss Maitland, my husband tells me you are leaving."

The girl nodded her head. Ned had walked to the further end of the room and was gazing out of the window.

"May I be personal, my dear? We do dislike so very much to have you leave Winthrop. We have grown very fond of you-we wish you could stay. Is it—may I ask—marriage?"

The girl smiled. "Yes, Mrs. Rayl, something like that."

"Huh!" ejaculated Mr. Rayl, who was standing beside his wife. "Ned! I gave you some credit for having brains but I have changed my mind. How any young fellow-you or any other-could stand by and let some one else win this girl is beyond me! Great Scott, Ned have you been asleep?"

Ned walked slowly toward them, his hands deep in his pockets, smiling. "Do you feel the same way as father does, mother?" he asked. Mrs. Rayl twisted her scarf in her white, jeweled hands and smiled. "Well, son, that is a funny question to ask-now that some one has won her, but I do say that if you had-" Ned slipped his hand through Billie's arm.

"Then cheerio. Billie and I have been married two years—so kiss your daughter, folks, and tell her how much you like her."

"Oh !" said Billie thoughtfully, "but I smoke."

"Well, er-most girls do nowadays." "And my hair is bobbed, and I rouge and sometimes use slang, and I haven't a single twig of a family tree that I know of."

"Mother has enough branches to spare you some," put in Ned. And then the girl took her mother-in-law's hands in hers. "But I'm going to give up all those things, mother, and spend my time taking care of little Edward Winthrop Rayl the second, so he will be worthy of such grandparents-and a credit to the Winthrop family tree."

When a recent baby was named by its proud parents Gillian, opinion in their circle was almost equally divided. "Quaint," "charming," "delightfully old-fashioned," declared many of the women, but some of them were more dubious. "Nobody ever heard of any Gillian, no matter whether you spell her with a G or a J, except Jill whose brother was Jack," declared one young matron indignantly. "The poor child will go through life suggesting upset water pails and broken crowns and black and blue spots !"

But another young woman corrected: "Oh, no; there must have been others, for I'm sure I've heard either a saying or a refrain of a song, or 11:00 a.m. Forecast School of

POLLINATION IS NEED OF APPLES

Scarcity of Bees in Orchards Affects Size of Crop.

Lack of pollination is one of the causes of the failure of apple trees to set fruit following a heavy bloom, and is largely responsible for the light set of some varieties in western New York.

Investigations carried on in that section and in Ithaca by the Cornell university experiment station, show that the problem of pollination of apple blossom in the state is becoming increasingly important. Professor Mac-Daniels attributes this to the shift from mixed plantings of many varieties to solid blocks of fewer varieties, and the popularity of the variety Mc-Intosh, which almost always fails to set a full crop unless cross pollinated, Rhode Island Greening, Cortland, and Northern Spy are in the same class, but Baldwin, Wealthy, and Oldenburg are more likely to hold their crop if poorly pollinated, and nearly always bear if the trees bloom, although the set of fruit is better when the blossoms are cross pollinated. The present scarcity of pollen carriers, especially bees, has also contributed toward the failure of fruit to set. Bumblebees have largely disappeared, cutting woodlands has deprived wild bees of a home, and fewer farmers keep bees.

Pruned and Sprayed Tree Will Produce Good Fruit

A well-pruned tree if not sprayed may not produce any perfect fruit. An unpruned tree fairly well sprayed will produce a high percentage of good fruit. A well-pruned, sprayed tree will produce the maximum of good fruit, says the Iowa Homestead. In an orchard located a few miles east of Des Moines, that has been pruned, spraved and cultivated, only one crop has been lost since 1920 and that was due to a late freeze. This orchard was sprayed seven times last season. The crop ran 98 per cent clean in a yield of nearly 10,000 bushels Most of the fruit was sold at the orchard at from $2 to $3 a bushel. Later some of the Delicious sold as high as $5 a bushel. To get the above results, the owner did a thorough job of spraying. This year owners of farm orchards should plan to put on not less than four applications.

Rabbits Acquire Taste

for Bark of Apple Tree Certain rabbits seem to acquire a taste for apple bark which is insatiable. Why this is so no one seems to know. Perhaps it becomes a habit, like chewing tobacco, or perhaps they do it for health's sake, like eating bran flakes. At any rate we have had trees injured by rabbits in mldsummer on several occasions, and once a number of young trees were destroyed by rabbits in August, with knee-deep alfalfa growing between the trees, says the Rural New Yorker. A veritablerabbit-heaven round about, and yet they went for the trees! Somehow this is one of the things which try a fruit man's soul; ~ last straw, as it were.

Jill, indeed, was at one time as properly typical a girl's name as Jack may still be reckoned a boy's. One authority on names includes it in a list of the seven most popular feminine names in the England of six centuries ago. These names, in the year 1300, were, in order, Matilda, Isabella, Emma, Cecilia, Catherine. Margaret and Gillian-often spelled with a G, although some times, and more naturally with a J, as it is a form of Juliana. Of these seven rames, it is the only one that has almost dropped out of use; but only two of the seven, Catherine and Margaret, might possibly be included among our commoner names today.

It will be noticed that Mary, the leading favorite for so many years of modern and more ancient periods, does not appear in the list at all. But among names for men, John, first favorite today, was so then. The corresponding seven masculine names, as the authority mentioned gives them, are John, William-out of every 100 Englishmen at that date there would be twenty Johns and fifteen Williams -Thomas, Bartholomew, Nicholas, Philip and Simon; following in popularity came Peter, Isaac, Richard, Robert, Walter, Henry, Guy, Roger and Baldwin. Most of these are still fairly common; but Bartholomews are no longer plentiful, and Baldwins are as rare as Gillians.

Reduce Visible Supply of Rabbits by Shotgun

The ferret and shotgun method is undoubtedly one of the best methods for reducing the visible supply of rabbits, such as poisoning and gassing, but we are not recommending them because our knowledge of the game laws is rather hazy on that point, says the Rural New Yorker. We must always remember that the tabbit is one of our sacred, or game, animals which are carefully conserved, for special slaughter, by the high priests of sport. These animals live and eat on our land and sometimes they destroy our crops, but they do not belong to us.

Everbearing Strawberry Most Delicious Variety

Everbearing strawberries have other good points than supplying our tables with their delicious fruit after the main strawberry is done. The two leading varieties of everbearers, Progressive and Superb, are very hardy, and exceptionally resistant to leaf spot deseases. The Progressive stands middle western winters better than almost any other sort, except the Dunhap, which is one of its parents. Another strong point in favor of everbearers is that if frost kills the bloom, they soon flower again. This makes them especially valuable in regions subject to late spring frosts.

Avoid Cheap Trees

It is not good economy to buy runty and weak fruit trees just because you may think they are cheap. You should not try to fool yourself into thinking that you can mother along the little weakling trees that were cheap, and develop them into trees as good as the larger, stronger, and more vigorous ones that cost a little more. No orchard can ever be much better than the trees it had to begin with when the orchard was set. A strong, vigorous tree is always best.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HEN the announcement was made that each denomination of the new currency, which is to be issued on July 1 of this year, was to bear a different portrait of a distinguished American.

a New York congressman wrote to Secretary Mellon of the Treasury department as follows:

1 am informed that the portraits on the new bill will include Washington; Jefferson, with a picture of Monticello on the obverse side; Lincoln, with the Lincoln men prial on the obverse side; Hamilton, with the Treasury building; Jackson with the White House; Grant, with the Capitol; Franklin, with In-dependence hall; as well as McKinley, Cleveland, Madison and Chase. I notice with regret the absence of Albert Gallatiz, secretary of the treas-ury under Jeiterson and Madison. He was a great secretary of the treasury. Surely he should be remem-bared by a greateful nation by having bered by a grateful nation by having his picture on a series of these bills. Of all foreign-born citizens who have risen to power and fame in the United States, Albert Gallatin was the most distinguished.

He made a deep impression on American history directly after the Revolution and served his country honorably as a member of congress, United States senator, minister to France, and minister to England, and peace commissioner at the Treaty of Ghent, and last but not least he was one of your honored predecessors. The purchase of Louisiana was the great measure of Jefferson's first term, but it was Gallatin who arranged for its payment and did so without in the slightest degree deranging his plans for the funding of the national debt. When the War of 1812 came upon us, great financial burdens were placed Gallatin, with great skill and wisdom, discharged them successfully.

Although Gallatin's portrait will not appear upon the new money, that the "grateful nation" of which the New York congressman spoke has not forgotten entirely his services is shown by the fact that last year congress passed a joint resolution authorizing the erection of a statue to Gallatin and directing that it be placed on the steps of the Treasury building in Washington with that of Alexander Hamilton to remind Americans that our financial system is due to these two great men.

Unfamiliar though the story of Gallatin's life may be to many Americans, it was nevertheless a romantic and an important one. He was one of the earliest examples of a foreignborn citizen rising to a position of prominence in the United States. He was born in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1761 and received a good education in that city which was then one of the principal centers of learning in Europe. Having been left an orphan. Gallatin decided to emigrate to America, especially as it offered an opportunity for an adventurous life in the the frontier instead of in the cities. he built himself a log house and also He liked the life there where conhad a store.

It was here he first met General Washington. "Mr. Gallatin's bed was given up to him-Gallatin lying on the floor, immediately below the table at which Washington was writing. Washington was endeavoring to reduce to paper the calculations of the day. Gallatin, hearing the statement, came at once to the conclusion, and, after waiting some time, he himself gave the answer, which drew from Washington such a look as he never experienced before or since. On arriving at his conclusion, Washington turned to Gallatin and said, 'You are right, young Little Journeys in Americana By LESTER B. COLBY

Vigo's Bell

VIGO'S bell! Have you ever heard the story of Francisco Vigo's bell? Vigo of Old Vincennes and New Orleans and many places up and down the river; Vigo, for whom a county in Indiana is named. Some day, if you are in Terre Haute you may hear the golden note of Old Vigo's bell and if you ever do, stand for a moment with uncovered head; you will feel the better for it. This is the story of Vigo and his bell. Vigo was a Spaniard. He came to America via Cuba. The Revolutionary war found him a trader on the Mississippi. He talked Spanish, French and English and knew quite a bit about the Indians. He was not friendly to the English. They were "buying hair," the fresh, red scalps of the settlers, men, women and children-and Vigo didn't think well of the trade.

George Rogers Clark and his 170 men, "Long Knives," they were called by the Indians, came into the valley and captured Kaskaskia, below St. Louis, farthest outpost of the British, who held about everything between the Alleghenies and Mississippi. All west of that river belonged to Spain.

When George Rogers Clark and his men took over Kaskaskia they were threadbare. The long march overland had worn out their clothes and shoes. Gunpowder and lead was about gone. They were in distress. Vigo, the trader, came to their relief.

Vigo outfitted them; gave them everything he had. Then he went to Vincennes to spy out the situation there. Vincennes must be taken or Kaskaskia would surely fall again to the British. Vigo the trader, a spy for sure, went to the English fort and offered wares for sale.

Vigo was arrested. The English got ready to shoot him. But he had friends among the French in Vincennes. They swore that he was known to them, an honest trader who regularly trafficked with them and the Indians, and he was released. But once released Vigo carried the information be had with all speed to Clark. Then a daring expedition set out, an expediton that for sacrifice and courage has seldom been equaled In history. Vincennes fell and the British lost a vast domain.

Vigo? Oh, yes. This was back in the latter years of the Revolutionary war. George Rogers Clark and his men had consumed everything Vigo possessed. And Vigo, once prosperous, was broke. Clark gave him an order on the United States treasury for $16,000. It was to pay him 'for his goods. Was Vigo paid? No.

Poor old Vigo was wheeled to a pauper's grave in 1836. In his latter years men had considered him daft. His mind was turned, they ferred to study law and practice it said, by worry over the money he in New York city or in Philadelphia; never could get. Vigo used to talk but when appointed secretary, he felt of his "dollars" that were comingit his duty to accept, although he some day. But, in his patois he called emphasize a series of prints which

The most pleasing part is that these silks have succeeded in translating beauty into their design so artfully that in no way do they seem bizarre and extreme, but are eminently attractive and wearable.

There's a "true story" going the rounds in connection with this postmark design. It seems that a well known textile designer while abroad observed in a German city a window display staged by a mail-order house which was made up of hundreds of letters or, rather, envelopes received from all parts of the world. Collectively their postmarks were very designful. The artist-observer immediately sensed in them possibilities for silk design, which accounts for one of the most interesting among the new silk prints brought out this season. The patternings, however, which reflect most of all the movement, the color, the very spirit of modernism accomplish the rare feat of pic-

Sports cloakings are a joy to the eye this season. For spring the new weaves are going the limit in coloring and modernistic design, which makes them all the more fascinating. Border effects, ombre blendings, startling geometric patternings flashing vivid splotches of color carry the gay spirit of outdoors. Fabric manipulation adds yet an other glory to these lively weaves. One of the clever "new stunts" is to make the selvedge edge serve as a tinish and at the same time in a decorative way. Still another is the featuring of self-fringed edges, which is as smart a touch as a sports coar can carry this season. Many of the novelty woolens are that loosely woven they lend themselves admirably to wilderness which he desired. There is a legend that an unfortunate love affair drove him to this decision, but the truth of the legend is unknown. It is interesting to note that he was offered a commission in the forces of the Landgrave of Hesse, who was furnishing soldiers to the British king for service against the Americans, but that Gallatin declared "he would never serve a tyrant."

Arriving in Boston in 1780, he spent some time there until he grew weary of "its monotonous life and Puritan tone." 'Then he embarked upon a trading expedition to the frontier of Maine, but when this proved unprofitable he returned to Boston and became an instructor in French at Harvard college. After staying there a year, Gallatin proceeded to New York which was then (1783) still in the hands of the British, and their insolence to the young Swiss is said to have been responsible for his leaving there very soon and going on to Philadelphia and Richmond.

While in Virginia he became interested in the lands south of the Ohio, as a promising field for speculation. and here he purchased a thousand acres, which he bought for a hundred pounds, in Virginia money. Here he hoped to make his home, as he had definitely decided to become an American citizen. Soon after this land transaction he became the partner of a French gentleman named Savary de Valcoulou, and together, they bought warrants for 120,000 acres of Virginia land between the Great and Little Kanawha rivers.

Gallatin was to have the management of this land, and in 1784 he set out to look it over. He found the country north of the Virginia line more desirable, and finally located in Fayette county. Pennsylvania, where

After the incident at the log cabin on the Pennsylvania frontier, Washington is said to have tried to secure the services of Gallatin as his land agent; but the later declined the offer. Gallatin soon rose to prominence in his adopted state. He was a member of the Pennsylvania assembly convention; he was a member of the legislature; was elected United States senator, but could not qualify, because he had not been long enough a citizen of the country. For thirteen years he had then been in America, and declared his intention to be a citizen three years afterward. It is believed that he was unseated on account of having been too inquisitive regarding the manner in which the finances of the nation were being administered. It proved fortunate for the country at large that Gallatin was in Fayette county, and not in the senute, for it was largely through his influence that the Whisky insurrection did not result in war, through the secession of several counties in western Pennsylvania and Virginia. The people were not only ready to fight, but had a flag of their own ready to float from their liberty pole. Gallatin's good sense and management saved the day for law and order to Henry Adams, "Far more than contemporaries ever supposed, or than is now imagined, the Treaty of Ghent was the special work and the peculiar triumph of Mr. Gallatin." His shrewdness and tact won the day, where another man, differently endowed might have failed. Following his successful and adroit diplomacy in bringing France, and later to England. The mission to England ended Gallatin's official life, but not his intellectual activity. Retiring to New York, he spent the last years of his life in pursuing his favorite study of ethnology, and promoting education. In this manner, he usefully rounded out his eighty-eight years, dying in 1849. The historian Henry Adams, grandson of John Quincy Adams and greatgrandson of John Adams, in his "Life of Gallatin" says that, as secretary of the treasury during the eight years of Jefferson's Presidency, and for four years while Madison was President, Gallatin deserves equal recognition with Hamilton as the founder of our financial system.

Hamilton's theory was that the financial policy of the country should originate with the secretary of the treasury, and that congress should acquiesce in registering his will. Albert Gallatin, while a member of congress, organized the ways and means committee for the purpose of holding the secretary of the treasury in check. New York recognized the high position them "doleurs." Doleurs in French means grief and pain. So people who did not understand, made a cruel pun of the old man's sorrow-"Vigo's doleurs" became a joke. When Vigo died, fifty-seven years after he had pauperized himself to help George Rogers Clark and George Washington and his adopted land, his executors, who examined his "estate" realized that he had had a strange and abiding faith. He had always said, proudly, "Some day the government will pay." And in his will he left a bequest.

It was this-that when the government finally paid his "doleurs" a fine bell was to be bought. The bell was to be presented to the county of Vigo, state of Indiana. The bell was to be placed in the belfry of the courthouse in Terre Haute. And when this was done, it should be rung loudly to proclaim that Old Vigo was right-the government paid its debts! Yes, the government paid. It paid in 1875 but poor old Vigo had been dead then for thirty-nine years. The government had paid ninety-six years after establishing the indebtedness. But it paid, as Vigo said it would. If you ever hear Vigo's bell ring in Terre Haute, bare your head a moment. You will feel better for doing this small homage to Vigo.

Old Envelopes That Have Financial Value

No envelope that passed through the mails, with or without adhesive stamps, in any year before 1870, should under any circumstances be torn or otherwise mutilated, if one has won by Gallatin by giving his name to any hopes of realizing adequate reone of its great banking institutions. turn from the sale of old rostal symbols or insignia, or the older issues of adhesive stamps, to collectors or dealers. In dozens of instances owners of such envelopes have virtually ruined valuable postal rarities that would have brought handsome prices by mutilating envelopes containing dates and markings that would dave established beyond question the authenticity of early issues, or private labels before the introduction of gummed adhesive labels. It is heedleseness of this sort, however, that has reduced the number of available rarities and increased the value of those that have survived .- Montreal Family Herald turing the speed and action so characteristic of the age in which we live Motor cars furnish the inspiration for these designs. An especially smart print uses Ford cars for its motif, depicting models from the first awkward vehicle to the "last word" conveyance. In the accompanying illuscration a pen and ink sketch to the left above shows this patterning in detail. The young woman seated to the left is wearing a dress made of this silk

The other figure is gowned in a frock fashioned of a speed-age silk in which print a good sleuth, like a finger-print specialist, can detect half a dozen or so treads of well known dres. Verily the new "picture" silk the neckline is emphasized with clev erest of scarf and kerchief effects which revel, often, in a very blaze of color.

The idea of fur for the wrists and self-fabric scarf for the neckline still maintains. The effect is most pleasing, as the coat to the right in the illustration confirms.

Long coat ensembles are definitely established on the program for spring That is, women are going to be en couraged when they buy their new coats to purchase a matching skirt or a two-piece frock fashioned to complete the ensemble. JULIA BOTTOMLEY. (C. 1929. Western Newspaper Union.)

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do-what most physicians would tell you to dogive a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Bodily Endurance Tests

Endurance tests are the outcropping of an impulse as ancient as it is unaccountable. Long before the days of purses or publicity, the same instinct found its vent in the old Indian sun dances. The Indian braves would cut four slits in the skin of their chests and run a narrow board through the slits. Leather thongs streaming from the top of a sort of maypole were fastened to each end a judge makes a mistake, it becomes of the board. Then the Indians would | the law of the land. When a preachdance until they dropped unconscious and the boards were torn loose from their skin

What Price Mistakes? When a plumber makes a mistake he charges twice for it. When a lawyer makes a mistake, he has a chance

The "S" line in a painting is so called because it is made of a double curve like the letter "S." This is illustrated in John Alexander's painting, "Isabella and the Pot of Basil." The front outline of the figure of Isabella is an "S" line.

Papers of Washington Family Found

A newly discovered trunk, close to two centuries old, that had belonged to George Washington's only sister, Betty, containing upward of 2,000 original papers of Washington's family and contemporaries, was taken to Washington from Fredericksburg, Va., by Henry Woodhouse, president of the Aerial League of America. Inspecting the papers, in the photograph are. left to right: William Tyler Page, clerk of the house of representatives and executive secretary of the United States commission for the celebration of the two hundredti anniversary of George Washington's birth; William Selden Washington, descendant of George Washington's brother, and Henry Woodhouse.

manding a reform which would limit its membership and provide for certain peers to be elected.

It seems likely that the country will eventually adopt some sort of plan like this, since it is widely asserted that the present constitution of the British upper house renders it not only impotent but inefficient. There are many who would like to see it on a par with the United States senate. Others would like to see it abolished altogether

This situation is recognized by the house of lords itself. The latest move was to vote by 52 to 8 that "it is desirable that early steps should be taken to limit the number of members of the house of lords and to make pro vision for an elective representative or nomination as would insure to each political party a fair position in the house of lords." Theoretically, parliament is divided in three parts, the king, the house of commons and the house of lords and horned bison, and remains of two races of elephant, a large camel, various extinct horses and other typicall quired before an act of parliament can become a law, with certain exceptions. Actually, the house of commons makes the laws, because the king supports its decisions and the commons control the lords with the threat of creating any number of peers needed to pass a bill through the house of lords should the upper house prove recalcitrant.

geeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee Why Numbness Kills

Feeling Feeling depends upor nerves and nerve action depends on temperature. When a finger or any portion of the body is made celd and numb the nerves in that center are immune from feeling because they do not receive impressions at the nerveends on the skin. This is why, for very minor operations, the freezing process is used. C), 1929 Western Newspaper (Inton.)

At about the same time fossil remains of a large extinct bison were found near Folsom, N. M.

"The American museum, New York. was invited to participate in the work this last summer," said Cook, "and did so. Here, associated with the bison, sixteen flint points were found of an absolutely new type and of the finest grade of workmanship known in flaked stone

"Fortunately, four of these were exposed undisturbed in position where found during the course of these excavations. There is no question of definite association here of these flint points with a race of extinct bison.

The best and the poorest students try to earn their living in col lege. The poorest fail and the best seem to do it without difficulty.

If one has skill of any particular sort he should utilize it; if he has not he should be content with earning his board. Not many men can safely do more. Whatever other amount is necessary to provide a decent living should be arranged for before the student enters college. He should stay out of high school until he has saved enough to give him a dependable start in college or he should be assured of a regular monthly income from home. It is seldom safe to depend upon what chance friends say they will do for one. Most colleges have loan funds or scholarships available for upper lassmen, and these the self-support ing student should investigate. The boy who depends upon an allow ance from home to finance him through college is lucky for he is free in such a case to use his time to the best possible advantage. The al lowance from home should be definite. it should be regular and it should be adequate to cover all his necessary expenses. She had the right idea. She discovered what the average student found necessary and taught her boys to live within this amount. It is a mistake to have too much money in college just as it is a serious handlcap to have too little, but whatever the student has from home should come upon a definite day of the month, and should go into a checking account of his own One of the best things a student can learn when he goes away from home to college is how intelligently to man age a bank account, and how to live within a specific regular income. Our First Millionaire

New York.-The first American mil | formulate any rules for moneymak | gaged in drainage and lumbering optionaire was George Washington, according to Eugene E. Prussing, Los Angeles lawyer, formerly of Chicago who has just completed thirteen years of research into Washington's career as a business man. Summing up the results of his study in the American Magazine. Mr Prussing says:

"It is customary to think of Wash ington as soldier and statesman. He was also a man of business, successful farmer, builder of transportation engineer, pioneer and promoter. He was a man of broad commercial vision and rare business ability. He spent one-fourth of his life in public ser vice and yet left behind him a record of business achievement and a fortune that entitles him to be called your first millionaire. He started life with but a few cents of his own When he died the land and other investments that he directed to be sold were worth, by his own conservative estimate in his will, $530,000, and this did not include some of the most valuable portions of his estate.

"To many of us Washington is a mythical figure, hidden behind fables like that of the self-righteous little boy and the hypothetical cherry tree. As a matter of fact, he was a very different sort of person. He was a man who would have been perfectly at ease in a group of modern big business men around the directors' table. And he enjoyed fox hunting and dancing, as the modern man en Joys golf.

"In his ideals, his sense for giving value as well as getting it, his insistence on exact statistics, his zeal for big constructive undertakings, for striking into virgin fields, seizing opportunities, opening avenues to development, his instinctive sizing-up of the possibilities of profit in a dealin all these matters and others like them, his attitude was strikingly similar to that of the best of modern business. He did not definitely ing, but he followed certain basic principles throughout his career." Washington's apprenticeship in pusiness started soon after his father's death, which occurred when the boy was twelve.

"From that time," Mr. Prussing says, "he was pretty much on his own and was always faced with the problem of making a living.

"Washington's first job was as an apprentice surveyor with G. W. Fairfax. At seventeen he became official surveyor of Culpepper county, and began his life work as an engineer He had the thrifty idea of not taking all his pay in cash. He knew where the best acres were located, and, believing that land prices would rise, he began putting his extra pay into good land

"His returns on farming later averaged as high as $15,000 a year. He ran a gristmill at Mount Vernon. He conducted fisheries on ten miles of waterfront, shipping his product to England and the West Indies. He maintained a ferry across the Potomac, which paid a handsome profit. Mr. Braxton rose to the occasion nobly. He didn't even look at Jonephine; he plunged right into his reply; and Josephine, after hesitating for a moment, settled back in her chair to listen, I saw Mr. Braxton's eyes twinkle as she did so. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

ticular task. When they become incapacitated either the invalidity insurance system or the old age pension plan takes care of them. In none of the industrial countries is the attainment of the age of forty fraught with the dangers that confront our American wage earners whether manual or professional. May not the solution of our problem lie along the same path'

Came of Good Family The father of Mary Todd Lincoln was a bank president, state senator, owner of a mill and part owner of a woolen factory.

recently about the cow's udder had been generally believed that the milk storing capacity of the cow's udder is not more than half a pint to each quarter and that the greater part she didn't get me. But Mr. Braxton of the milk obtained at milking is secreted during the milking process. That this is incorrect was demonstrated by slaughtering cows just previous to the usual milking time. The udders were amputated and the milk drawn. In one experiment the quantity obtained averaged 61.1 per cent of the normal yield by the same cows. In another test the quantity obtained was 76 per cent of that given by the cows when alive. It was shown that milk secretion is largely a continuous process and that the capacity of the secretory system is much greater than had been supposed. This knowledge should help to lay a more scientific foundation for the selection of dairy cattle.

 Dairy Hints A sudden change of feed may cause scours in calves.

A good commercial dairy ration will give excellent results.

Do not vary suddenly the quantity of milk fed to young calves. * * *

Difficult churning can usually be cured by using a thermometer.

Cows and hens and soils must be fed if large production is to be maintained. * * *

A common error in feeding is to overfeed on one or two feeds, thus giving the cow too much of one nutrient.

To produce milk economically the cow's ration should consist largely of the more bulky, cheaper foods. These foods require considerable moisture in the process of digestion, and therefore large quantities of water are essential.

Milk utensils should always be thoroughly washed and rinsed before being placed in the sterilizer. If this is not done, sterilization is not only made more difficult, but milk which may be adhering to the stensils is "cooked on."
