TO THE VOTERS OF THE 23rd CIRCUIT

Please feel assured that I appreciate the vote of confidence extended on March 4th. A candidate for a judicial office cannot properly make any other promise, either before election as an inducement, or afterward by way of acknowledging his obligation to his supporters and the electorate, except that he will, to the best of his ability, administer the law fairly and impartially in each case heard before him. Whatever differences of opinion there may develop as to the correctness of my decisions in particular cases, I covet a continuance of your confidence in the earnestness of my purpose to discharge the judicial responsibilities in the spirit of that promise.

Respectfully,
HERMAN DEHNKE.

MRS. FRANCES WILTBERGER

Mrs. Frances Louisa Allen Wiltberger died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. E. Thompson, in Tawas City, on Sunday, February 24, after a lingering illness of about one year. She was 72 years, seven months and 18 days of age at the time of death.

Mrs. Wiltberger was born in Worth township, Sandilac county, Michigan, on July 6, 1856. In 1880 she was united in marriage to Wm. Allen. To this union four children were born, Ms. E. H. Wiltse, Wm. Allen of Hale, Mrs. H. E. Thompson of Tawas City, Jno. Iral Allen of Whittemore.

After the death of her first husband, she was united in marriage to Frank J. Wiltberger, September 23, 1892. Mr. Wiltberger died in Whittemore April 2, 1927. Mrs. Wiltberger had made her home in Whittemore for the past 37 years, and was a member of the Latter Day Saints church for the past 30 years, also a member of the Bridge Builders of Whittemore.

The last few days she was a great sufferer, but endured with the greatest of patience. At the last she said, "My light is very bright," and gave a prayer in a clear tone for her children and grandchildren.

She leaves to mourn her loss two sons, two daughters, 14 grandchildren, five great grandchildren, and a host of friends.

The funeral services were held last week Wednesday from the Whittemore L. D. S. church, Rev. Sommerfeld officiating.

LOCAL LEGION POST WILL CELEBRATE 10th ANNIVERSARY

The 10th anniversary of the organization of American Legion will be fittingly observed Monday evening, March 18, states Post Commander H. J. Keiser of Jesse C. Hodder Post.

A party will be held at the billet at which all ex-service men and their wives or sisters or friends are invited. A pot luck supper will be served.

"The Legion came into existence in Paris at conferences held March 15 and 16, 1919. The conferences were attended by representatives of all the armed forces of the United States. It was little more than an idea then. The idea grew. Substance was given to the movement when the returned soldiers, sailors and marines immediately began their unselfish service to God, Country and their comrades in peace time.

"For ten years the Legion has continued this service. Every bit of legislation that has been put on the statute books for the benefit of veterans came through the Legion's tireless efforts. The Legion has never failed in any legislation it has attempted. Some of it has been delayed, but each delay has only added enthusiasm and determination to the veterans' efforts, because all of it is just and right.

"The Legion has worked for all veterans, not alone those who are members of our organization. In Legion child welfare work, all children are benefited by the legislation that the Legion is sponsoring for the aid of widows and dependent children.

"At no time has the Legion sought any reward, other than the satisfaction of loyal service well performed and high ideals maintained. The time has now come for due recognition by all ex-service men of the tasks that have been accomplished by the Legion for them. The time has come for every ex-service man who some day may wish to obtain free hospitalization, or who has enjoyed the benefits of his adjusted compensation certificate, to acknowledge his obligation to the Legion."

IOSCO WINS SECOND PLACE

According to the recent report from the Michigan Council of Religious Education, Iosco stood second among the counties of the state in the efficiency of its 1928 program of co-operative religious education.

Our county has made a truly remarkable record of advancement, 38% and 57th place in 1926; 58% and 19th place in 1927, and 88% and second place in 1928. Ing-ham county alone, with a percentage of 93, exceeded Iosco last year.

At the Sunday School Convention at Petoskey in October, as well as throughout Michigan, much prominence was given Iosco's accomplishments in the field of religious education.

This splendid record of achievement has been made possible through the genuine co-operation and support given the officers of the county council by the workers of every Sunday school in the county. The Sunday school folks of Michigan are watching Iosco and Iosco will not fail.

JAMES CHARTERS, SR.

We were again called to pay our last respects to another pioneer and esteemed citizen when James Charters, Sr., was called by death.

In 1885 he settled in Reno township with his family and with their help cleared away the forest and built for them a home where he has resided ever since. He has been failing in health for several years. On February 2 his condition became so serious that he was taken to Omer hospital, where he remained several days and was temporarily relieved. He was then taken to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Secore, in Bay City, where he rested and apparently gained strength.

The doctor in charge said his only chance was an operation, which he underwent at Mercy hospital on Wednesday, February 20, and from which he never fully regained consciousness. All that medical aid and human hands could do was done but to no avail.

James Charters was born in Melanethon township, Ontario, Canada June 24, 1856 and died February 23 at Bay City, at the age of 72 years, seven months and 30 days.

He grew to manhood in Melanethon township. He was united in marriage to Margaret Smith in St. Mark's church, Orangeville, Ontario on December 22, 1880. To this union 13 children were born. His wife preceded him in death November 16, 1923. Those who are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate father and loving brother are, Mrs. J. H. Sloan of Masonville, Mrs. David Shellenberger of Lake Odesa, Mrs. J. E. Secore and Mrs. Edward LaLonde of Bay City, Jas. E. Charters of Reno, one brother, Wm. Charters, of Whittemore, and one sister, Mrs. Ella McDougald, of Lansing; also 18 grandchildren and three great grandchildren, besides a host of friends.

He was a member of the Methodist church, and a friend that will be missed in the community.

The funeral was held from the Baptist church Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Bedell, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating. The remains were laid to rest beside his wife in Reno cemetery.

"TAXI 13" PROVIDES LAUGHS AND THRILLS

With Chester Conklin, funmaker extraordinary, in the featured role of a nighthawk taxi driver whose adventures run the gamut from low comedy to breath-taking thrills "Taxi 13," FBO comedy special from the capable hands of Director Marshall Neilan, is the attraction at the State Theatre Sunday and Monday.

The things that happen to Andy Smith, the cabby, portrayed by Conklin in his most hilarious vein, through his desire to amass money for a new taxicab whereby his eleven children may be supported, are more than plenty. Suspense and thrills are blended with the broad comedy of the story when Andy entangles himself unwittingly with a band of crooks, and there is a thread of romance sustained by dainty Martha Sleeper, ingenue of several previous FBO productions, and Hugh Trevor, dashing young leading man.

Ethel Wales, character woman of note, has a splendid comedy role as Mrs. Mactavish, mother of Angus' hungry blood, and Lee Moran adds much to the fun as a rival cabman. Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Jerry Miley and Charles Byer, as underworld characters, complete the cast.

The added attractions make this program complete with laughs and thrills. Another Hal Roach comedy with Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in "Habeas Corpus," and Oswald (The Lucky Rabbit) Cartoon. Admission for all shows, 10c and 30c. Don't forget the matinee Sunday at 2:30.

OSCODA WINS AT BI-COUNTY TOURNAMENT

Oscoda made a clean sweep at the Bi-County basketball tournament held at the Community building last Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Both the boys and girls teams remained undisputed champions, having completely vanquished all contenders for the championship. The finals, between the Oscoda boys and girls and East Tawas boys and girls, were probably the hottest contests played at the Community building this season. Both games ended in favor of Oscoda, the boys' game by a score of 25 to 13, and the girls' game by a score of 37 to 15.

The tournament this year was a very successful affair, both financially and in competition. J. K. Osgerby, president of the Bi-County Athletic Association, stated that the receipts exceeded those of any other basketball tournament held by the Association by about forty per cent.

John R. Forsten of Tawas City, refereed all games of the tournament.

Where Rival to Monte Carlo Will Be Established

A new gaming paradise, rivaling Monte Carlo, is to be established in the smallest and oldest republic in the world this coming summer. It will be in Andorra, located in the mountains on the boundary line between France and Spain. A French syndicate will build the gambling casino, hotels, golf course, tennis courts and cafes. Above is a scene in Andorra.

Race From Arctic Snows to Tropic Waters

Starting on toboggans from the mountain slopes of Los Angeles County park and terminating with a dip into the semitropic pool at Arrowhead Hot Springs, youthful Los Angeles couples staged a unique race. An hour and four minutes after they had left the snowy mountains, the winners were stripping off furry garments underneath which they wore bathing suits, and were plunging into the warm pool in the valley below. The photograph shows some of the starters, and Miss Joyzelle Joyner of the winning team in the pool.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

SET STRAWBERRY EARLY IN SPRING

Varieties Succeeding Well in Community Favored.

"The man who sets vigorous plants of the best varieties of strawberries as early in the spring as the ground can be prepared properly, has gone a long way toward assuring a successful crop," says J. H. Clark, assistant pomologist at the New Jersey Agricultural experiment station.

"Very early planting is to be preferred," Professor Clark continues, "since at that period the plant is more nearly in a dormant state and weather conditions are more favorable. Later plantings are likely to run into periods of warm, dry weather, which will cause some of the plants to die and others to be permanently stunted."

"The correct depth of planting is more important with the strawberry than with most plants. If the plant is set too deep, so that the crown is covered, growth will be slow or death may result; if set too shallow, the upper parts of the roots dry out and growth is hindered. The ideal way is to set the plant as deeply as possible without covering up the growing point at the top of the crown."

"A vigorous one-year-old bed on a man's own farm or on that of a neighbor is the best source of plants, provided the varieties are right. If new varieties are wanted it is often advisable to buy just enough for a nursery row the first year so that later a commercial planting may be made from this row with plants which have not been subjected to the hardships of packing, shipping, and possibly delay en route. Even from a vigorous bed it is advisable to discard the weak plants, setting only those with large crowns and root systems."

"Varieties which succeed well in the community are the ones to plant in quantity, although others might be tried on a small scale. Howard 17 (Premier), an early sort, has given satisfaction in commercial plantings in most parts of the state, while Lupton has been very satisfactory in Cumberland county and vicinity. Varieties which may be recommended for home consumption are Chesapeake, Joe, and Aberdeen."

Control San Jose Scale by Dormant Treatment

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The most effective control measure against the San Jose scale on peach trees is to apply a lubricating oil emulsion during the winter when the trees are dormant, according to the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture. Liquid lime sulphur has also been used against this insect for many years and is reasonably effective. Lead arsenate or other stomach poisons are of no value. The spray must be one that will produce death by direct contact with the insect. A thorough job of spraying must therefore be done, so that it will hit every side of the trunk, lateral limbs, and branches. As the concentration of the spray necessary would defoliate the tree during the growing season, the work must be done during the dormant period, when there is no foliage on the trees and when bud wood is seasoned for winter weather.

Whenever a heavy scale infestation has caused the death of some limbs they should be removed and the tree pruned, if possible, before the dormant spray is applied. Peach trees that have been devitalized by the San Jose scale should receive a fertilizer high in nitrogen the following spring to force out bud wood.

The proportions and method of mixing lubricating oil emulsions and applying them will be furnished on request.

Two General Methods to Control Scale Attackers

There are two general methods for the controlling of the scale attackers. One is nature's method, but is useful or effective only in the early stages of the disease, and is by birds that eat the scale. Investigation by the biological survey has undisputedly proven that 58 species of birds eat scales, and for some the scales are a favorite food. These 58 species are all representatives of 12 families, namely: the woodpeckers, jays, orioles, sparrows, waxwings, vireos, kinglet, gnatcatchers, thrush and bluebirds. The above mentioned birds' stomachs have all been examined and found to contain the scale insect in varying degrees, some having the entire food capacity filled with the pest.

Pruning Trees

In pruning neglected trees, the same general practices should be followed. The first thing that the grower should realize is that this operation usually requires more than one year. As a rule the top of a neglected tree is a mass of growths, a large number of which should be removed or cut back. However, if this is done in a single season, the tree is forced into a heavy top growth and conditions are almost as bad at the end of the season as they were before.

FLOWERS FEATURE NEW STYLES; PARIS EXPLOITS ALMOND GREEN

A VERY flowery picture fashion paints for spring. Flowers will be worn literally from morning until midnight. On pajama ensembles in the early hours, again on the daytime tailor will be boutonnières, to be followed by afternoon and evening frocks gayly decked with flowers. Leading Paris modistes have also launched the flower-trimmed hat.

Important flower colors are lime, lemon, burnt orange, chartreuse and other soft greens, the beiges and tans. White is in favor, while such combinations as black and white, two shades of gray, shaded mauves and new blues are also registered in the flower style tinued supremacy of the ensemble costume. Nor is the sphere of the ensemble for spring limited. The idea of matching apparel down to the slightest detail extends to clothes for every hour of the day or evening.

In point of color blend and related detail the new ensembles for spring are nearing the perfection point. It does not seem as if greater artfulness is possible than that attained in the developing of this season's models.

The model in the picture is an extremely happy inspiration for spring, especially from the color standpoint, for it is made of an almond green rayon and wool mixture. Much ado is program. In the boutonniere and tailor flowers the tendency to combine two and three colors is very marked.

Bouquets of natural spring posies in mixed garden hues are a spring tendency in flower fashions for the season. The young woman wearing the embroidered hat in the picture matches the gay colors in her cheapeau with a bouquet of garden flowers arranged in the graceful trailing effect which is now so popular. With her new straw bonnet and her dress of silk print, the huge bouquet of violets as shown on the center figure below adds yet another touch of spring.

For evening wear there are large trallers composed of pansies in chartreuse and mauve, pale blue and rose. There are also delicate trailing clusters of pastel morning glories. There are gardenias and orchids in white and tangerine and palest mauve.

The positioning of flowers at the back marks an innovation for the evening corsage. The sketch to the left being made in Paris this season over soft, light greens for hats, gowns and wraps. The color is equally modish for both adults' and children's fashions.

Another featured color for the ensemble is wood violet. Street costumes developed in the new violets and mauves are among the most at tractive shown this season. A favorite combination is the knitted blouse with tweed jacket and skirt which stresses various shades of violet. In either event, the effect of the new violet or the new green tones is very springlike, and for that reason destined to enjoy a widespread vogue.

This chic tailleur which comes from the atelier of Suzanne Talbot is an other instance of the favor French stylists are expressing for rayon fabrics. The material is a new weave which Talbot uses for her most exclusive daytime modes. Flat crepe a tone lighter is used for the blouse. The skirt is unique in that its many shows how charmingly the idea may be carried out.

Among the new creations are roses and violets of stiffened lace in delicate pastel shades. These boutonnières developed in clear bright yellows, greens, reds and blues are favored for spring.

Sports flowers sound a unique note. Among these are very modern roses of stiffened silk stenciled in plaid design in various colorings.

Especially delightful for light-colored summer dresses are candy-striped camelias in heavy white-ribbed silk, with alternate leaves striped in clear green, then red; or blue, then orange or red.

There is no doubt about the conseams are pressed to resemble plaits—a new theme with Talbot. The skirt of the frock is designed so as to tie outside of the coat, this being one of its outstanding styling points.

What with so many flamboyant prints crowding the style scene and even invading the domain of the long coat and short-jacket three-piece suit a modest monotone composition such as this is greatly to be admired and appreciated by the woman of discriminating taste.

The fact that the coat is long makes this ensemble infinitely practical, as it supplies a comely spring wrap to wear with other costumes.

Ever Hear of These "Presidents"?

DAVID B. ATCHISON

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

YOU may be one of those Americans so well-versed in the history of your country that you can name all of the Presidents of the United States in the order of their administrations and can tell something about each one of them. But if some one said to you, "What do you know about the following Presidents of the United States: John Hanson, Elias Boudinot, John Hancock, Nathaniel Gorham and David B. Atchison?" you'd probably exclaim, "Why, they never were Presidents of the United States!" And therein you might be wrong, for there are those who say that those five men should be included in the list of our Presidents, even though such a statement would have to be made with certain qualifications.

In the case of the first four, their right to be known as President is based upon the following facts which have to do with the evolution of the office of President of the United States:

The First Continental congress met in Philadelphia September 5, 1774, and the delegates to it elected Peyton Randolph of Virginia, president. But he was only president of the congress, not President of the United States, for there was then no United States.

The Second Continental congress met in Philadelphia May 10, 1775, and John Hancock of Massachusetts was elected president. But he, too, was president only of the congress. Then on August 2, 1776, the delegates to this congress signed the Declaration of Independence which brought into being the United States of America. But they were United States more in name than in actual fact of a strong, well-organized government.

In 1777 a plan for the union of the states was proposed and within 15 months, twelve of the states had agreed to form the new nation in accordance with a proposed plan, drawn up under the name of the Articles of Confederation. The only state which opposed it at that time was Maryland.

Under the original Articles of Confederation each of the states made claims to extensive western lands. John Hanson and Daniel Carroll, of the Maryland delegation, refused to enter the new country under the above existing conditions and Hanson suggested the alternate plan. Maryland offered to give up forever its claim to western lands and to sign over its territories to the federal government if the other states would follow suit. One by one they fell into line and finally, on March 1, 1781, there was adopted a constitution called the "Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union Between the States."

However, the confederation thus formed had no executive officer, no judiciary and the sole governmental body was a single house of congress, made up of delegates elected by the legislatures of the states.

On November 5, 1781 John Hanson was elected president of the congress, his formal title being "President of the United States in Congress Assembled." Thus the title "President of the United States" came into being and Hanson's right to be included in the list of our Presidents rests upon that fact that he not only presided over congress but was in fact as well as in name the country's Chief Executive. It is also asserted by Hanson proponents, chief of whom is Seymour Weyness Smith, editor of the Financial Digest of New York city, who has striven for three years to win national recognition for Hanson and who is planning to carry his fight to the floor of the United States senate, that Hanson, rather than George Washington, was the first President of the United States.

In proof of his assertion, Mr. Smith offers the following facts:

On November 21, 1781, the congressional committee on "Arrangement of the President's House," consisting of Joseph Montgomery, Samuel Osgood and Edmund Randolph, introduced the following resolution in congress:

"Resolved, That the attendants of the President's house consist of one steward and such others as may be found necessary, not exceeding eight." A residence had been leased a few days previously as President Hanson's home. The steward was required to deliver an accounting of expenses to the President's secretary each month and the President was authorized by a resolution to draw on the public treasury for the proper amount.

On November 23, 1781, Gen. George Washington was summoned before congress and officially thanked by President Hanson for his victory at Yorktown.

"Mr. President," Washington replied to President Hanson, "I feel very sensibly the favorable declaration of congress expressed by your excellency. This fresh proof of their approbation cannot fail of making a deep impression upon me, and my study shall be to deserve a continuance of it."

In the meantime, before Washington became the "first President under the Constitution," the United States had three other "Presidents" under the Articles of Confederation. In November, 1782, Hanson retired from the Presidency and died the following year. On November 4, 1782 Elias Boudinot of New Jersey, who had served as a delegate to congress from 1778 to 1779 and had again been chosen in 1781, was chosen "President of the United States in Congress Assembled" and became the Chief Executive of the nation. As such he issued the proclamation announcing the end of the Revolution on April 19, 1783, and another announcing the signing of the treaty of peace on September 3.

Elias Boudinot has also been called the "first President of the United States," his right to that title being based upon the fact that it was not until England had signed the treaty of peace and thus acknowledged the independence of her former colonies that the free and independent United States of America actually existed.

In 1785 the seat of government was changed to New York city and John Hancock of Massachusetts was elected "President." Owing to ill health, however, he did not actively serve in that position and on May 29, 1786, he resigned. So another "President" was chosen—Nathaniel Gorham of Massachusetts.

On May 14, 1787, a convention of delegates from all states except Rhode Island met in Philadelphia "to form a more perfect union" and after a stormy session of four months adopted a new Constitution. It provided for a new method of choosing a President and under its provisions an election was held in which George Washington of Virginia was unanimously elected President. From contemporary documents, it is evident that the Chief Executive of the nation was referred to then as the "President of the United States Under the New Constitution" whereas before that official had been called the "President of the United States in Congress Assembled." Later that portion of the title, "Under the New Constitution," was omitted as being too cumbersome and there-and dog races, deducting his investment if the animals won. The judge told Dolly to keep the gifts and forget about the money.

Natives Frightened by Doll
A letter from Kenya tells of the curious effect of a doll with moving eyes. When it was shown to a native chief he thought it supernatural. On being convinced, after some time, that it was mechanics and not magic that moved the eyes, he asked the loan of it to get back one of his wives

Girl Keeps Lover's Gifts

When a man and a maid fall out the maid may keep her lover's gifts, according to a decree of Judge Cohen of the District court at Sydney, Australia. After the tilt Henry Morris sued Dolly Reynolds for the return of a phonograph, a silk shawl and a steel guitar, together with $100 which he said he loaned Miss Reynolds. Dolly said Morris had not loaned her money, but had placed bets for her on horse after he was referred to as the "President of the United States."

In view of these facts it seems that John Hanson, Elias Boudinot, John Hancock, and Nathaniel Gorham are as much entitled to being called "President of the United States" as are any of the men from George Washington to Herbert Hoover who have borne that title, and that in listing our Presidents, we should divide them into two classes, those who held office under the Articles of Confederation and those who have held office under the Constitution.

The right of David B. Atchison of Missouri to be included in our list of Presidents is a fertile subject for dispute. He is called "President for a Day," and the whole question of whether or not he actually was President depends upon whether or not a man can be President without taking the oath of office or actively administering the affairs of the nation.

Atchison's "Presidency" came about in this way: March 4, 1849, came on Sunday. Technically, President James K. Polk's term of office expired March 3, 1849, and his successor, Zachary Taylor, should have been inaugurated on March 4. But March 4, 1849, came on Sunday and Taylor did not take the oath of office until Monday, March 5, 1849. On March 3, George M. Dallas, vice president under Polk, announced in the senate, over which he was presiding, "The close of my official term being near at hand, I conform to an established and convenient practice by withdrawing from the deliberations of this body." On the motion of Senator Benton of Missouri, his colleague, Senator David B. Atchison, was appointed president of the senate pro tem.

Since the terms of President Polk and Vice President Dallas expired on March 3 and the term of President-Elect Taylor did not begin until March 5, when he was inaugurated, it is contended that David B. Atchison was President of the United States for one day, Sunday, March 4, 1849, even though he never took the oath of office. The biographical congressional directory, 1774-1911, an official senate document, backs up that claim, although some historians contend that Taylor was President de facto on Sunday, even though he was not sworn in, and that Atchison was not sworn in as President and never pretended to exercise any duty or prerogative of the office.

But the state of Missouri honors him as the only Missourian who has so far served as President of the United States and on October 27 of last year it paid tribute to its "President for a Day" when a $15,000 memorial statue of Atchison was dedicated at Plattsburg, Mo., with impressive ceremonies at which the governor of Missouri was the principal speaker. He is further remembered in his home state by a county which is named for him and Missouri's sister state, Kansas, has a city which bears his name, although it is more famous because it is the home town of a famous country editor, Ed Howe of the Atchison Globe, than it is because it was named for a "President for a Day."

A BACHELOR CHANGES HIS MIND

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

HUGH MUNSON was a bachelor. He was most emphatic in his statements that he would remain a bachelor to the last. And that he had reached the age of forty-three without marrying and would travel through the rest of his days unmarried. He wanted to be free . . . to explore hitherto unexplored lands . . . to come and go as his fancy willed. Who would want a better home than a hotel? Who would want more comforts than the service obtained in such places? He scorned the tidy little houses of his friends . . . gingerly patted the heads of their offsprings and then put a definite distance between himself and their sticky hands. He didn't want a house to be responsible for . . . electric light bills . . . furnace cleaners . . . faulty plumbing . . . maids . . . whooping cough . . . insurance policies . . . decorators.

And that's final," he had declared decisively from the depths of a big chair in his sister's living room on the first evening of his return from a two years' trip to Africa. "I shall never—marry. The next six months I will spend here writing up my last trip for my publishers and then I'm off again . . . free as the wind . . ." He turned to his nephew, Robert Beveridge, who occupied another big chair near by. "You will be my heir, Bobbie, my boy . . . that is, if you will get this notion out of your head about going in business instead of taking up law as your mother wants you to do."

His nephew smiled as he crushed a cigarette butt against the ash tray. "You're a fine one to talk, Unk. Grandfather wanted you to be a minister—mother told me so—and besides, he was in favor of marriage and look at you—just a vagabond of the wind-rod road, except that you have enough money to buy railroad and steamer tickets. I don't want to be a lawyer, but I'll compromise with you, you old fossil! I'll make a wager with you that before six months are up—you will be asking some girl to marry you . . . to share your name and fortune. A new roadster against my pledge that I will go to college this fall and study law that within the next six months you'll fall in love and fall hard! You have been out of touch with civilization so long you don't know what white women look like, but just you—wait. That's fair, isn't it, mother?"

Hugh Munson's sister smiled indulgently, and nodded. The traveler laughed. "All right, shake on it! A new roadster—any color—any make, against your promise to be a lawyer—but I've won before we start. Love—marriage—bah! Responsibilities? Not for me!"

A maid came to the door, followed by a short, smiling faced little woman whose open coat displayed a white linen uniform. "Hello, folks. I'm on a case down in the next block—typhoid, and was out for a breath of air so thought I'd run in. Oh why, Hugh Munson, you old tramp! I haven't seen you since . . . let me see, when we three were in high school together . . . how many years ago . . ."

"And if it isn't Cara Smedley . . . or what is the name now, Cara? I recall Marion telling me a long time ago of your marriage . . ."

"Listen, Hugh. Wesley died last year, you know. And I'm working again . . ."

"And supporting the loveliest family of four children you ever saw. How is Billie, and Junie, and baby and Albert, Cara? My goodness, but Albert is getting so tall and manly."

"All fine," answered the family's smiling mother. "Billie fell off the porch yesterday and bumped his nose and Junie looks like chicken pox and baby cries for an hour straight every time I leave her and Albert spends all his nickels at the candy store, but outside of that, they are just beautiful, every one of them!"

Robert Beveridge looked across the table at his mother one morning and his eyes were troubled. "Well, mother, guess the odds are against me. You'll have a lawyer son after all, I guess. That old Beau Brummel brother of yours! He is a knockout in evening clothes and all the girls are crazy about him. Kay says she has tried all her wiles on him—nothing doing! Marjorie tells me he calls her 'child' and patronizes her! Kay says he is the hardest man in New York to flirt with although he dances with her all the time and tells her she is pretty and would like to be his and all that bosh that middle-aged men hand out to pretty girls. Kay is getting tired of the conspiracy, I guess. We didn't think he would be so hard to win over. We are going to have Estelle Taton out to Marjorie's house party next week and Estelle will bowl him over . . . She's a stunner, and just begged for an introduction the other night at the club. Says Unk is her idea of handsome, distinguished . . . and all that stuff!"

Estelle's charms proved all in vain. Hugh Munson played golf with her, rode horseback with Marjorie Norris, sang with Delicia Evans, danced with Kay Vandergrift and talked China with Mary Manning. They all vied for his favor. The house party broke up sooner than was expected, because he announced his intention of driving back to New York at noon instead of late evening. When he left Kay and Marjorie were in the seat with him, and Delicia and Mary were in the rumble seat.

The confirmed bachelor-explorer donned evening clothes three nights a week and accompanied his nephew and members of Robert's set into the gay whirl of New York's night life. He seemed to thoroughly enjoy himself. He continued to write in an effort to appease the demands of an anxious publisher, and at the end of the fifth month, Robert wrote to the university for their curriculum.

Kay was again wearing his frat pin. Marjorie was hinting of her engagement to Alex Treadgold, long and ardent suitor; Delicia had decided to go on the stage, and always generous, Hugh Munson had offered to back her. Estelle Tanton was planning a winter in Europe and had hinted that she would expect Hugh to stop and see her when he was on the continent, although he had not mentioned his impending journey.

Robert was sitting before the fireplace reading the recently arrived literature from college. His mother was reading close by. Hugh Munson came in, and with his hands deep in his pockets, he stood before the fireplace and faced his sister and nephew.

"What's the booklet, Bobbie, my lad?" he asked.

"Oh, you win, you old woman-hating antique! I never did think you would hold out with all those girls—but you win! I'm going to college—and study law! Mother benefits anyway through our bet. And she has promised me the car that you were going to buy me, after that you were to one of her girls."

"That car," spoke Hugh Munson slowly, "will be delivered early in the morning, Bobbie, and you might drive your mother down to the station to see Cara and me off on our wedding trip. We will be gone only a week, on account of the babies! Can't leave them alone with a maid very long. You knew, Marion, that Junie is a smart little tike and baby—why, she just yells when I come in the door and stretches out her hands to me. Wish you would look in on them while we are away; we'll feel better if we know you are keeping an eye on our family—and if you hear of a good nurse, tell her to come up and see me when we get back. Cara is to have an easier time from now on. And Albert says he is going to own a garage when he finishes school. Can you beat that? And say, Marion, if you know of a good plumber, tell him to go and look at the bathroom on the third floor, there is something wrong and I didn't have time to attend to it."

DAIRY FACTS

FIND SOY BEANS MAKE GOOD FEED

Increasing Interest in Hay Crop for Dairy Cows.

Reports coming to the college of agriculture at New Brunswick, New Jersey, indicate an increasing interest in soy beans as a hay crop for dairy cattle. The heavy yields, amounting to two tons on fairly good land, and the high feeding value, are believed to be the reasons for the popularity of the plant.

The crop is sown at the rate of about five pecks per acre if drilled, or six pecks if broadcast by hand. Farmers have found that if the field has never raised soy beans before it is highly desirable to inoculate. This is easily done by the "seed and soil" method described in Extension Bulletin 32, issued free by the state college of agriculture at New Brunswick; or if soil from another soy bean field is not readily available a commercial culture is used. The purpose of either treatment is to inoculate the seed with certain bacteria that are necessary for proper growth of the plants.

An application of 300 to 400 pounds per acre of a complete fertilizer high in phosphoric acid and potash has generally been found profitable when applied to this crop. Wilson is the favorite in this territory but other varieties such as Haberland, Virginia, and Pekin are well adapted to hay making.

Soy beans are legumes and therefore leave the soil in excellent condition for sowing wheat or rye after harvest. Though prompt action is necessary after harvest to prepare a good seedbed for winter grain, disking the soy bean stubble is all that is usually necessary. Extension Bulletin 23, also issued free to farmers by the college of agriculture, gives more detailed information on the raising of soy beans in this state.

Practice Essential in Making Grain Mixtures

Since there is seldom a deficiency in carbohydrates and fat when the dairy cow has all the roughage that she can eat, a roughly balanced ration may be obtained by balancing the protein of the grain mixture to go with the roughage and disregarding the carbohydrates and fat. For low to medium-producing cows good alfalfa hay and corn meal make up a reasonably good ration. To go with alfalfa hay, some grain mixtures are as follows: Mixture 1—200 pounds corn, 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 100 pounds linseed oil meal. Mixture 2—100 pounds barley, 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 300 pounds corn oil meal. Mixture 3—200 pounds corn-and-cob meal, 200 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 100 pounds cottonseed meal.

If prairie hay is used as roughage the ration may be as follows: Mixture 1—100 pounds corn, 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 250 pounds linseed oil meal. Mixture 2—100 pounds barley, 100 pounds alfalfa meal, 100 pounds corn oil meal, and 200 pounds linseed oil meal.

Minerals Are Often Fed When There Is No Need

"Mineral feeds are being sold to many farmers who have no real use for them," says Dr. C. H. Eckles, chief of the dairy division of the University of Minnesota. "If a dairy herd is fed legume hay in winter together with a fair grain ration, and is on pasture in summer, the owner is wise to forget all about minerals unless his herd shows abnormal conditions, such as chewing bones or gnawing boards. Bonemol alone, or mixed with ground limestone, supplies the minerals usually needed when a deficiency occurs."

Accelerating, the motorist came within a few feet of the fox and then maintained the gap separating them. The speed increased until the car was making 30 miles an hour, with the fox just a few jumps ahead.

Whether the fox could have "stepped on it" a bit more is not known for the motorist allowed the fox to set the pace. Perhaps if the animal had been pressed, it might have stretched the speed up a few miles an hour. The race continued for perhaps a quarter of a mile, when the fox seeing a gap in the fence, went through it in two or three quick jumps, then slowed down to a sort of high-bouncing run, and was soon lost in the corn.

Famous London Bridges
Old London bridge, begun about 1170, was completed in 1209. It carried a row of timber houses, which were frequently burned down but the main structure existed until the beginning of the Nineteenth century. The old bridge was the center for book-sellers and other tradesmen. On it stood the chapel of St. Thomas of Canterbury and a tower on which the heads of traitors were exposed to view. The present London bridge was begun in 1824, and completed in 1831. It is borne on five granite arches, is 923 feet long, 65 feet wide, and 56 feet above the river.

Lemming an Odd Creature
The head of a scientific expedition into the Arctic region reports that they were unable to obtain many of the small land mammals, as trapping is impracticable during the brief stops and under the midnight sun. The past year or two has been notable for a shortage of all smaller mammals, particularly Arctic hares and lemmings. The lemmings occur at times in countless millions, forming abundant food for foxes, and their recurring periods of scarcity and abundance are reflected in the fur returns of the Arctic regions.

The Reflections of a Young Married Woman are not pleasant if she is delicate, run-down, overworked. She feels "played-out." Her smiles and good spirits have taken flight. It worries her husband as well as herself.

One woman says—"I take this opportunity to speak a word of praise for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I speak from my own experience when I say the 'Favorite Prescription' will do all that is claimed for it. I would earnestly advise any woman who feels weak and nervous, or in any way run-down in health, to try this remedy. It gave me health and strength as nothing else would."—Mrs. E. Iceberg Boat Invented

Designed for travel through ice fields of the Arctic region, a special boat was recently perfected by a German engineer. It is shaped similar to a giant sled, is of heavy armor steel and is propelled by wind-pressure turbines. The inventor believes that when it meets an iceberg it will slide over the obstacle.

Mother Tells How Milks Emulsion Saved Her Son's Life

"In November, 1918, I wrote you in reference to my son's condition at that time. He had just gotten over the flu and double pneumonia and it looked as if he would never be a well boy again. His lungs were very weak and he had an awful cough. We thought he was going into consumption. He had pneumonia four times. This had taken all of his vitality and left his lungs in a very bad shape."

"I saw Milks Emulsion advertised in the Birmingham News, got a large bottle and gave it to my son. It did him so much good that I kept on giving him Milks Emulsion until he had taken 125 bottles and now I am very proud to tell you that my boy is a well, strong young man, 18 years old, and in excellent health. I give Milks Emulsion the credit and praise for having saved his life."

"You can publish this letter if you like, as I am very grateful to you for what your Emulsion did for my son. MRS. J. A. BRADLEY, 1927 1/2 Avenue D, Apt. A, Birmingham, Ala."

'Taint Right

A chance remark overheard by a mother of a small boy was repeated by her to the father.

"John, it's positively shameful the way Junior talks," she said, "I just heard him say: 'I ain't never went nowhere.'"

"Shameful?" raged the father. "It's worse than that! Why, the young whelp has traveled twice as much as most kids his age!"

Helped at Change of Life

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine at the Change of Life. I would get blue spells and just walk the floor. I was nervous, could not sleep at night, and was not able to do my work. I know if it had not been for your medicine I would have been in bed most of this time and had a big doctor's bill. If women would only take your medicine they would be better."—Mrs. Anna Weaver, R. F. D. No. 2, Rose Hill, Iowa.

Use your milk house only for the care and handling of milk, not for storing tools and implements. Milk needs all possible care to keep it clean.

A half-gallon cow is as expensive as a half-hearted farm laborer. They should both be sent down the road.

Cows are improving every day but we haven't found any cows giving dry milk, and they know better than we how to water their milk.

A tubercular cow is not always noticeably poor in health or unthrifty. Some vigorous looking beasts are reeking with the disease. A good veterinary and a good serum test will soon tell you the truth.

DOING THE DULL THING

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"How much easier it is," I heard a man say the other day, "to do a dull thing from choice than from necessity."

There is a misconception in the minds of youth that some day if one accomplishes the tasks set by teachers and parents and people in charge of things, there will come a time when one can do as he pleases, when everything that comes into the day's work will be interesting and pleasant and easy, or if there are tasks which do not have these characteristics, they may be sidetracked and shunted off for some one else to do.

The theory is quite false, and one might much better learn early in life to do the dull uninteresting thing and to learn to do it cheerfully from choice.

When I was teaching English composition one of the rules of the game was that no papers were to be in late without a penalty of reduction of grade. There were very few members of the class who did not at one time or another drop a late theme on my desk with apologies at times, of course, and explanations, but the task of writing something dully had grown dull, and so had been delayed and accomplished only at the last moment from necessity.

Stanley never had a late theme, so far as I recalled and I one day remarked to him something of his regularity and promptness.

"I don't like writing," he confessed, "and I don't find it easy. My brain seems to atrophy when I face the task of putting thoughts down upon paper. For that reason I get at the work when I am freshest. I choose to do the dull thing first. If I did not, possibly I would never get it done, or at least I should do it with less enthusiasm and success if I pushed it into the last minute and did it hurriedly."

He had the right philosophy. Doing the dull thing from choice, it finally lost its dullness, for he became interested in writing, he took it up as a profession, and today he is making a living from scribbling his ideas upon paper.

Things are dull, people are dull, often because we are ourselves uninterested or uninteresting.

"Now I want you to be pleasant to Mrs. Crane tonight," Nancy says to me when we are going out for the

Men Safest Drivers

Washington.—The perennial family argument as to whether man or woman drivers get into more automobile accidents can at last be backed up with some facts and figures that indicate sex differences.

Records of man and woman taxi-cab drivers in a Pennsylvania city have been watched for an entire year by Dr. Morris Viteles and Helen M. Gardner of the University of Pennsylvania.

The results, reported in the Personnel Journal, show that the woman taxi drivers were responsible for three times as many accidents as men, though, judging by claims following accidents, the women were more successful in keeping out of serious trouble.

These men and women operated the same kind of car and all equipment was regularly overhauled. Both drove in stormy weather and in the same traffic conditions.

The men, however, were more experienced, on the whole, than the women, for some of the women were not experienced drivers when hired, but were given a thorough course of training and immediately placed on cabs. This would seem to be an important psychological factor, but the taxi-cab company records could not be kept in such detail as to show whether the new driver offsets inexperience with excessive caution or whether this caution oversteps the mark and leads to an excessive number of cases of collisions.

About 2,000 men drivers were on the employment rolls at a time and about forty women. The men drove 28,431,719 miles in the year and had 7,311 accidents. The women drove 348,979 miles and had 268 accidents.

In terms of revenue the women had three and one-half times as many accidents per thousand dollars as the men.

A special study of accident costs in one representative month showed that there were 191 claims in the accidents of man drivers and four claims in cases involving woman drivers. The claims indicate that women got into less serious mixups than the men, for the total cost of claims against men was $14,605, as compared with $75 against woman drivers.

The psychologists conclude that the figures from the study "favor the point of view that the present generation of woman drivers is more susceptible to accidents than the present generation of man drivers."

They also state: "The extent to which this is the result of relative inexperience in driving or of a sex-determined difference in susceptibility to accidents in traffic cannot be finally determined from an examination of the present data. The fact, however, that a sampling of women suffer more accidents when driving under the same conditions as a somewhat similar sampling of men is clearly established."

Lives Without Stomach

London.—A man can live and thrive without a stomach, provided that not too many of the pancreatic glands are cut away. This has been proved by an operation of removing the stomach and stitching the upper part of the small intestine to the gullet, performed in the Batley hospital in Leeds and now reported in the British Medical Journal.

The man on whom the operation was carried out was in such a condition that the removal of the stomach gave him his only chance of life. The doctors decided to give him that chance, and cut away the stomach bit by bit until it was completely removed.

As some of the pancreatic glands could be saved, the patient was not without digestive juices and soon could take nourishment. After 24 hours he took some water, and the quantities were gradually increased. Then milk and tea were added and at the end of 10 days he could have as much food as he asked for. Solid food was taken at the end of a fortnight.

After a month the man was out of bed and eating ordinary food, though in small quantities and often. An X-ray examination after five months showed that the operation was entirely successful, and at present the patient appears to be in good health and able to do a reasonable amount of work. He enjoys his food. The operation is regarded as a surgical marvel.

Relies on Indian Map

Lexington, Ky.—Six barrels full of precious silver and coins valued at about $400,000 is the objective of J. D. Stamper, who has taken a lease on land in Carter county, about 80 miles from Lexington, where the treasure is reported to be.

Mr. Stamper said: "I feel confident the treasure is there and that I will find it. I am the only man that has ever found all the earthmarks noted on the map and that actually came across a cave such as described in my treasure map."

The treasure is said to have been buried by Indians who left Kentucky after the arrival of the white man. Silver was plentiful with the redskins, and when they made their hasty exit they buried the treasure in a cave in Carter county.

They drew a map of the cave, its location and the ground marks that distinguished it, and in 1811 one Robert King, a fugitive from Europe, came upon a band of Indians camped in Kentucky. King made himself at home with the tribe.

King had no intention of leaving Kentucky with the Indians, and when the tribe left they gave him the buckskin treasure map as a farewell gift.

King searched for the treasure, but was forced to give up, due to lack of aid. When he died in that vicinity he gave the map to an Indian by the name of Robert Tinder. Tinder was unable to find the cave, and when he felt the approach of death called an old friend, J. A. Rhoden, now living near Nevada, Ohio, to his bedside and gave him the map.

Rhoden gave the map to Stamper who is a native of Carter county and familiar with the land in the section where the cave is located.

THE STORY

Edith Dinsmore inherits the architectural monstrosity known as "Dinsmore's Folly" from her grandfather. She visits the place and Fred James, newspaper reporter, appears in quest of a story. Mr. Paul, right hand man of Edith's father, proposes and is rejected. While riding with James, Edith's horse bolts and she is rescued by a stranger, who does not give his name. With her sister, Josephine, and Fred James, Edith attends a prize fight. When police raid the place she is rescued by the same stranger. She learns his name is Braxton and allows him to think she is a poor relation of the Dinsmores. Telling her father she is in love with Fred James, the old gentleman arranges for Josephine and Edith to take a trip to Japan, with their Aunt Candice. On the pier, the girls hear newshoys calling "All about the Dinsmore Indictment." Excited, they allow the vessel to sail without them, but with Aunt Candice. They find their home surrounded by a crowd denouncing Curtis Dinsmore as a thief. He has disappeared. Edith and Josephine take refuge at "Dinsmore's Folly." As the girls are entering the grounds an auto with a single occupant, a man, crashes into the wall and is thrown into the river. The victim of the accident is taken into the house, too badly injured to be moved. Edith recognizes him as Braxton. While she is chatting with him, a visitor, introduced to Edith as Miss Lambert, arrives. The girl is annoyed at the visitor's apparent friendliness with Braxton. Calling Mr. Paul on the telephone, she hears her father's voice.

"How? On the water?"
"Of course not. On the pier. Before the boat started. We're no hydro-aero girls."
"But," Fred came nearer, "let me understand this. You left the steamer before it started?"
"Certainly, silly! One-half minute before it started. I saw a newspaper with that story about Father, and Josephine and I hurried ashore and stayed to help him."
"And—and—you didn't tell Miss Candice?"
I shook my head. I really did feel guilty about leaving Aunt Candice. "We didn't have time," I extenuated. Then Fred laughed. Oh, how he laughed! He laughed till I grabbed Josephine and spun her around and marched toward the door, leaving Mr. Fred plante la, as my French nurse used to say. Then he stopped laughing and apologized.
"Don't go!" he begged. "I'll stop. But really—you haven't seen the late edition of the newspapers, have you?"
"No. What?"
"Maybe you noticed that I was a bit startled when I saw you?"
"We did. But what?"
"You weren't missed until the steamer had been at sea for five hours. Then your aunt wanted you, and you couldn't be found. She was sure that you had been with her long after the boat started. A mistake, of course; probably she was feeling—"

"Bilious. I know. Go on."
"Thank you. She was feeling bilious and had lost count of time. Anyway, you couldn't be found on board then. And the ship had been rolling a good deal—there's a bit of a blow on out at sea and so—well, to cut things short, the captain wirelessed in that you had been washed overboard and lost. You ought to read your obituaries!"

"Obituaries! You don't mean it."
"Don't I, though! Look here." Fred unrolled a crumpled paper and spread it out.

I wonder why a stage reporter always carries a notebook and never a newspaper. No reporter that I ever knew carries a notebook and none of them fall to carry a crumpled newspaper. Sometimes they put memoranda on the edge of the paper and sometimes they pull a wad of copy paper out of their hip pocket and write down a name or a date or something like that on it, but they never, never carry notebooks. Yet every stage reporter does. Why? It beats me.

Anyway, Fred spread out the paper. "Look here!" he repeated; and Josephine and I both looked.

There, in big black type, spread clear across the page, we read:
Dinsmore's Daughters Drowned Disappear From Steamer in Mid-ocean
Their Aunt, Miss Candice Dinsmore, Changes to Another Steamer and Starts Back to New York

Below was a long story about Josephine and me, telling how we had sailed on the steamer Silver Heels, and how we had disappeared but hadn't been missed till hours afterward, and how the worst was feared. Further on was a long account of our beauty and virtues. The writer undoubtedly meant to be flattering, but he didn't succeed very well. In fact, he—well, I suppose he did his best. But he needn't have said that I wasn't "out" yet. Of course I wasn't, but—well, there was no need of his saying it. After praising us up he went on to portray the grief of our friends on receiving the news of our demise. It made me feel awfully happy to think everybody should be so miserable about us!

"Oh, Josephine," I gasped. "Isn't it perfectly delightful to have people cry over you!"
Josephine did not answer. But Fred did. He chuckled. I caught him in the act.
"I—I beg your pardon," he cried, hastily, when he saw my expression. "But—it just struck me as comical. Of course none of your friends could possibly have heard the news before the paper was rushed out on the street. But—but of course they will grieve over you when they do read it and, so—so the morgue-keeper was justified in saying so. He knows it will be the truth."
This was some consolation, of course; and equally of course, it was interesting to know what people would say of you after you had—er—passed away.

I was about to say this, when I remembered the curious expression that Fred had used. "Morgue-keeper?" I echoed. "What a horrid word. What on earth is a morgue-keeper?"
Fred explained. "Why," he said, "he's the man on the paper who keeps the obituaries. If it hadn't been for him the paper never could have got such a lot about you so quickly. He got the details out of the boneyard."
I shrieked at this; and then Fred explained in words of one syllable. He said that every paper had a library of envelopes filled with clippings about everybody who is famous or notorious and uses them to make up a sketch of their lives at short notice when they are married or divorced or arrested or killed or elected President. Newspaper men call the collection the boneyard or the morgue. "Of course," finished Fred, "you aren't notorious—yet."

I did not pay much attention to this jab, for it had just occurred to me that Father, wherever he was, would probably be watching the papers and would see this account and would be worried to death. I had asked Fred about Father the minute he came and I had been trying ever since to ask him again, but he had talked so much I couldn't get in a word edgewise. But now I did.

"Oh, Fred," I cried, "do you think Father will see the papers? He'll be so terribly shocked. Can't we let him know somehow that Josephine and I are safe? Where is he, anyway?"
Fred stared. "Don't you really know?" he questioned.
"No," I shook my head, miserably. "We don't know a thing. We came here when we found that the town house was shut up; and we haven't seen a soul we know till you turned up. Don't you really know anything about Father?"
Fred shook his head. "I'm sure he's all right," he declared, positively. "But I can't say anything more. The indictment is all bunkum, you know; and you mustn't worry about it a bit. It's a part of a game. A bunch of Wall Street crooks are trying to freeze your father out of the A. B. C. railroad. They stole a march on him and got him down for a minute. But he'll turn the tables before long."
Just then the doctor came to the door with Perkins, and I jumped at the chance to change the subject.

But I didn't need to change it. Fred did it for me. The doctor had stopped on the step to give Perkins some order, I suppose; and the moment Fred caught sight of the bag in his hand and noticed his professional air he went white as a sheet and grabbed my wrist. "Who's sick?" he demanded. "You don't mean—"

"Of course not, silly!" I answered. "Of course not. We're all right. It's poor Mr. Braxton."
"Mr. Braxton? Who is Mr. Braxton?"
"Mr. Mayo Braxton. He was hurt and—oh! You don't know anything about it, do you? You don't even know Mr. Braxton, do you? Oh, yes, you do, too. I forgot. But wait a minute."

The doctor was coming down the step, and I ran to speak to him and to ask after Mr. Braxton.
The doctor sniffed. "He'll be all right in a day or two, if he isn't excited too much," he said, pointedly. "Good night, Miss Dinsmore." He walked away before I could think up anything to say in reply.

So I went back to Fred and found Josephine telling him of our adventures and particularly of Mr. Braxton. I thought it was Josephine's turn to do some telling, so I kept quiet and let her tell. Then I mentioned the fact that it was Mr. Braxton who had saved my life when Gypsy bolted that day, and that Fred had met him and—
Here Fred interrupted. He seemed startled. A lot of things seemed to be starting Fred that evening. "Braxton," he said, "why, good Lord! Mayo Braxton? That's—that's—" He stopped.

"That's who?" I demanded eagerly.
But now it was Fred's time to hesitate. "I don't know," he said. "I thought I remembered the name, but I guess I was wrong. However, we'll see. May I see him?"
I hesitated. "You heard what the doctor said about exciting him," I said, reluctantly. "We really oughtn't to—"

"All right. Tomorrow will do," Fred looked at his watch. "I've got to go," he said. "It's a long way back to town. But first I'd like to know what you girls are going to do. You can't possibly stay here. You'd better let me take you to my mother's house for tonight anyway and—"
But I shook my head. "That's awful sweet of you," I said. "But we can't possibly run in on Mrs. James in that unceremonious fashion. Besides, we've got to stay and take care of poor Mr. Braxton."
"Oh!" Fred looked volumes. "So it's poor Mr. Braxton, is it?" he asked. His tone irritated me. "Of course it's poor Mr. Braxton," I said sharply. "He saved my life, and he's my guest and I'm not going to leave him to Perkins' tender mercies."
But we're awfully grateful to you all the same, Fred."

"You seem to be. All right. I'll have to fix it some other way. But before I go, tell me what I am to say about you two coming to life. It will be a big scoop for me. You don't mind if I print it, do you?"
I looked at Josephine, and Josephine looked at me. Then Josephine took the words out of my mouth. "You may use your own judgment," she said. "Print it if you think it is best—and if you think Father will see it—and if you think he would want you to. We'll trust you."
Josephine was right, of course; Josephine always is right, though she isn't often as quick as she was this time; and I chimed approval.

Fred bowed. "Thank you," he said. "This touching confidence goes straight to me hear-rrt. Now, if you'll let me use your telephone for a minute I'll bid you a fond adieu."
Josephine took him to the telephone and I stayed on the steps, watching the moon. Nobody who knows me will believe this, of course. A few weeks before I shouldn't have believed it myself. That I, Edith Dinsmore, should sit and hold my hands and stare at the moon was too preposterous. And that the face of the man-in-the-moon should suddenly change to that of Mr. Braxton—Oh, what's the use? I suppose we all come to it sooner or later.

Just how long I sat and mooned I don't know. I suspected later that it was a good long while, but at the moment it seemed quite short. That was why I didn't even wonder over Fred's slowness in telephoning and why it didn't occur to me to ask him and Josephine—when they did come back—what they had been up to. But probably it wouldn't have occurred to me anyhow. Josephine was the last person in the world I would have suspected of being up to anything. If I had her reputation for innocence I could have lots of fun.

When they did come back—hurriedly—Fred stopped by me. "I've just telephoned mother," he said, "and she's coming over to stay here tonight, so that you won't be alone. Tomorrow we'll see what else can be done. Good night."

Below Was a Long Story About Josephine and Me.

First Trial by Jury

Is Held in Tokyo

Tokyo held its first trial by jury without any serious mishaps. One of the few complaints which were heard came from the 12 jurors, who were compelled to spend two nights in the District Court building. Trial by jury is a new thing in Japan, having only been introduced by law on October 1. There have been a few such trials in other cities, but Tokyo's first waited until after the close of the enthronement celebrations. The 12 men (women are not going to be allowed to vote) chosen to pass on the guilt or innocence of the accused, put up with the many novelties of their position until it came time to retire. Then they found that foreign style beds had been provided for their comfort and this was a little bit too much. Sleep in them they did, but it is learned on good authority that several of the jurors had to be coached by their companions on how to negotiate the soft pillows and white sheets in true Western fashion. In this first jury chosen in Tokyo there were, with others, a noodle shop keeper, two sake dealers, two farmers, a dye-stuff dealer, a machine-shop worker and an office employee. They ranged in ages from thirty-five to fifty-four years.

Save the Fine Laundry

20 Mule Team Borax is a great help. It softens water, aids soap, and deodorizes as it cleanses. Eliminates hard rubbing, whitens clothes, and is perfectly harmless. Borax saves the hands and saves fine laundry, too.—Adv.

Range Gun Fires Steel Balls

A range gun to be used in teaching gun laying and pointing has been invented by Capt. E. H. Stillman, assistant professor of military science and tactics at the University of California. The gun, a wooden affair worked by a spring, fires quarter-inch steel bearing balls. The spring tension is so adjusted that one inch on the range equals fifty yards. The steel projectiles fall on a sand table eight by fourteen feet in size, and tiny bursts of sand mark the shell paths. Small wooden model battleships are used for targets—on ranges equivalent to 24,000 yards.

Considering It

The High Forehead—We're going to have a musical program at the club next Saturday. It's to be a Meyerbeer evening. You'll be there?
The Low Brow—That depends. Is Meyerbeer the real stuff or just one of these kickless, near beer propositions?
"You seem to be. All right. I'll have to fix it some other way. But before I go, tell me what I am to say about you two coming to life. It will be a big scoop for me. You don't mind if I print it, do you?"

I looked at Josephine, and Josephine looked at me. Then Josephine took the words out of my mouth. "You may use your own judgment," she said. "Print it if you think it is best—and if you think Father will see it—and if you think he would want you to. We'll trust you."
Josephine was right, of course; Josephine always is right, though she isn't often as quick as she was this time; and I chimed approval.

"Deodands" Would Set King Up in Business

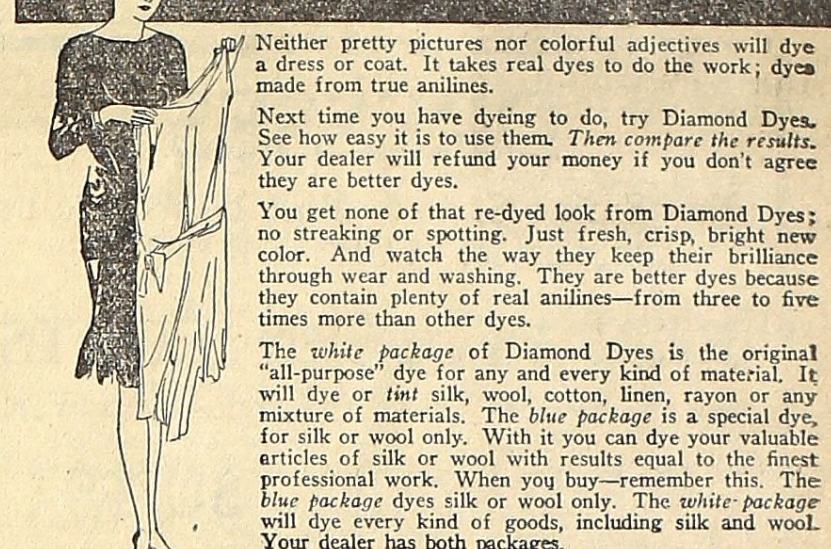

If it were customary or possible for the king of Great Britain and Ireland rigidly to exercise his royal prerogatives, he would, in the course of a few months, become the owner of many vehicles, especially motor cars, that traverse the streets and roads of his kingdom, since he is entitled to all deodands.
A deodand is "an article which has proved the immediate and accidental occasion of the death of any reasonable creature." This right was for hundreds of years enforced as a means of swelling the royal exchequer and, legally speaking, could still be enforced.

If a man were killed, by being run over, the vehicle and its contents, as well as the horse, became the king's property. The number of "reasonable creatures" (and dogs might be included by some within this category) run over by motors in England would keep the king in automobiles until he would be obliged to construct many garages.

Improve the taste of milk this way—and your children will drink more of it . . .

SAYS one of America's leading physicians:
"Two tablespoonfuls of Karo in a glass of milk not only improves the taste of the milk but doubles its food value."
This doctor's advice is valuable—for he knows children and he knows Karo.
"Serve plenty of Karo to the kiddies—especially underweight children, in milk, on cereals, on sliced bread. Watch their weight increase!"
All children like the delicious flavor of Karo—it appeals to their "sweet tooth."
And—do you know why Karo is so splendid for children? Because each ounce of Karo contains 120 calories—the energy-giving value of Karo is nearly twice that of eggs and lean beef, weight for weight.
What is good for children is also good for the entire family.
Make Karo and pancakes a frequent breakfast habit.

SCHOOL NOTES

Van acted as judges. We greatly appreciate their assistance. J. A. Myles acted as presiding officer. Mrs. Forsten and Miss Crosby counted the ballots after they had been given by the judges. It may be added, incidentally, that Mrs. Forsten counted the votes for the orators and Miss Crosby for the declaimers.

Due to the fact that there has been some doubt about the accuracy of the counting of the ballots for the orators, we are publishing the ballots of the judges with their consent.
