The Tragedy of L'lle Derniere Have you ever heard the story of the great tragedy that occurred on L'lle Derniere on that fateful night of August 10, 1856? Last Island it is called in English. Almost directly south of New Orleans, on the Louisiana coast, some distance west of the multiple mouths of the Mississippi river, lies Barataria bay.

Barataria bay was where Jean Laffitte, the red-headed gentleman buccaneer, used to hold his headquarters and divide his loot. Follow the coast line westward from there on your map and you will find a string of islands. The most westerly of these is Derniere -Last Island.

A century or more ago L'île Derniere was a gay resort. Old Creole families from New Orleans, fashionable French and Spanish planters, merchants from various places along the coast, together with their women -the beauty and chivalry of the old South, dark people with olive skins and soft voices, used to gather there for a season of gayety each summer.

Famous was the cooking, and even more famous were the wines and the champagnes served there. Orchestras would be brought down from New Orleans and at the grand hotel built on the white sands, merrymakers held gay soirees. They loved L'lle Derniere, these fashionables, because of its remoteness. It was well beyond those other islands-Caillou, Cassetete, Calumet, Wine island, the twin Timbaliers and Gull island.

They loved L'ile Derniere, Last Island, because of the latanier growing nobly there and the wild camomile which yellow-starred its meadows where the milch cows, brought down for the season, grazed in contentment. They loved L'ile Derniere because, thus exposed to the open gulf, the summer breezes seemed cooler and fresher, purer and sweeter than anywhere else along the coast.

Today Last Island is a ruin. It is desolation. It is haunted by fiddler crabs and buzzards, by gulls and reptiles. A few scrawny, wind-beaten trees, all leaning away from the gulf as if they were old, bony hags running from some peril, maintain insecure root there. It has been thus, si-lence and solitude, since that day, August 10, 1856.

Something more than four hundred persons were in the great hotel that day. Suddenly the waters of the gulf started to surge. Higher and higher, swell on swell, out of a dead calm. The barometer fell. Down, down, down

Then the wind began to rise. It blew sixty, eighty, a hundred miles an hour. All faced death-and all knew it. Some one started the orchesestra and the dance was on. A few drank toasts. Better to die bravely than in fear. Outside the wind blew a tumult. I know how that wind roared. I can hear it. I lived through a tropical hurricane myself one time. It cost 1,700 lives. One does not for-

The wind sounds like a thousand heavy trains rushing through at immeasurable speed. You hear each train in the distance; you hear it bear down upon you and you hear it pass and fade far away-like a moan. You feel that your breath is being sucked out of your body, and it is not well when your neighbors' houses pass

The storm at Last Island was like that. Only the waters rose, too, and invaded the broad hall where women danced in Spanish shawls, gowns from Paris, and silken shoes. Terrified cries rose with the screech of the storm as waves and wind tore the building asunder. Men and women and a few children floated on the wildly tossing seas. Some did not

A few clutched debris, billiard tables, doors-anything. Out of the four hundred or more, the legend says, only a handful survived. Two or three men and a child or two, perhaps, were cast up on the shores of the mainland still alive.

The grand hotel went away-vanished in the midst of a waltz. The shrieks of the women and children lasted but a moment or two. Tropical hurricanes are like that, I know Did I not live once through such a night when 1,700 died? Surely, one does not forget!

Sufi-ist Wedding Rites

Join English Couple

In a specially consecrated room before an altar draped with gold curtains, and with six lighted candles and incense burning, the first wed ding to be solemnized in England according to the rites of Sufi-ism was held in Brighton recently. The bridal couple were Miss Ivy Orchard and Manfield Williams. The service was performed by the woman head of the order in England, Murshida Saintsbury-Green, who was dressed in black. The bridegroom's father read passages from the six religions included in Sufi-ism, and, kneeling before the altar the bride and bridegroom faced others' fingers. They then raised the palms of their hands, into which corn of Hindu, Buddhist, Zoroastrian, Hebrew, Christian and Islamic religions.

silks, or if not silk then gay cotton or linen prints or fanciful woolen weaves -all of which go to make up the much-talked-of hat and scarf sets.

In the case of the blouse contrast is again the goal-two colors of jersey, a light and a dark tone, or print with plain and so on. No style item is more loadly heralded than that of white with a touch of color. A white jersey or crepe blouse is piped, perhaps, with chartreuse green or very likely bright red, for red-and-white is a combination much exploited.

Not alone as to hats and the blouse, but coats and frocks-in fact in its every phase does fashion emphasize the contrast theme. The coats in the picture happily interpret contrast both in matter of color and fabric. The model to the right employs diamond shaped insets of cloth of a different color, also bordering the revers and sleeves with the contrasting weave.

The coat to the left is interesting not only because of its contrast trimming, but the fact that it is double breasted is significant. Double-breast

Between the ever handsome single skip fox and the multi-skip choker of sable or marten there is considerable rivalry this season. The variety of new mountings makes the new chokers almost irresistible. In the picture Barbara Kent, one of screenland's fa vorite daughters, demonstrates the ef fectiveness of a multi-skin choker with the sleeveless mode.

The individual notes acquired by the scarfs illustrated typify the new trend in arrangement of marten and sable scarfs. In very luxurious models as many as twelve sable skins are inter worked, although the majority are styled with from two to five skins

Uncle Sam Says "Gimme!"

Ey ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WON'T be long now until Incle Sam will be saying to is children, "Gimmie!" and approximately two and a half million individuals and nearly three-quarters of a million groups of individuals will be digging down in their pockets and handing over a certain part of their 1928 earnings to their Uncle. who is in need of this money to aid ing a nation of more than 120,000,000 and guaranteeing a continuance of their "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness." All of which is by way of saying that the filing of income tax returns by corporations and individuals and the payment of the first installment of the 1928 income tax is due on March 15.

Just what that means was indicated by a newspaper editorial writer who observed recently that "Many persons are bothered not so much over payment of their income taxes as over the complicated task of making them out. Even the man who finds, after an allnight session with his income tax blank, that he owes the government only twenty-nine cents, has to go through the same complicated processes as the man who is entirely out of the 'enclosed-please-find-stamps' class.

ment of the United States, many individual states impose an income tax. Municipalities have not become addicted to the practice, but if they should, the average man, who has to sit up late to clear up the difficulties involved in checking up his milk bill, might as well prepare to ask for a week's vacation in which to pursue the elusive and many times beclouded issues which the ordinary tax blank

"Income taxes in the United States are a Twentieth century product. Springing out of the stress of wartime conditions, they have flourished to such an extent that an occasional bumper crop prompts the government to hand back the surplus. The states have not yet complained of overflowing treasuries. At this time millions of amateur accountants, each armed with an adequate supply of lead pencils, a ream or two of note paper, textbooks on mathematics, government circulars and 'hope that springs eternal,' are squaring away for the annual great American task of 'filling out my income tax blank."

It was just 20 years ago that Uncle Sam decided to impose an income tax upon his children, for it was on July 12, 1909, that the Sixty-first congress proposed to the legislatures of the various states the following amendment to the Constitution: "The congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes. from whatever sources derived, without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration." This amendment was accepted by all of the states except Connecticut, Florida, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah and Virginia. It was declared to have been ratified as Article XVI, or the Sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, and became a law in a proclamation of Philander C. Knox.

secretary of state in President Taft's cabinet, on February 25, 1913.

Last year Uncle Sam collected a total of $2,174,543,102.89 in income tax. This represented a total of 3,247,-703 returns of which 2,529,569 were individual and partnership and 718,134 were corporation. Of the total tax $882,727,113.64 was paid in by the individuals and partners and $1,291,845,-989.25 by corporations. To realize what vast sums Americans have paid out of their pockets into Uncle Sam's pockets, all you need to do is take a look at the following table of income tax collection during the last ten

America is universally looked upon as the richest nation on earth and an interesting commentary on how the wealth of the individual American increased, especially during the war, is shown in the income tax returns dursame period given in the table above. In 1913 a total of 357,598 returns were filed; in 1914 there were 357,515; in 1915 there were 336,652 and in 1916 437,036. Then came the sudden wave of prosperity during the war and in 1917 the number of returns jumped to 3,472,890. From then on there was a steady increase in the number of individuals who filed income tax returns. In 1918 there were 4,425,-114: 1919 saw 5,332,760 filing returns, and in 1920 the number reached the peak with 7,259,944. Then a revision of the income tax law caused the number to drop to 6,662,176. It rose to 6,787,481 in 1922 and then jumped to 7,698,321 in 1923. In 1924 a total of 7,369,788 persons filed income tax returns. In 1925 there was again a sharp drop in the number of income tax returns to 4,171,051.

On February 26, 1926, President Coolidge signed the Revenue Act of 1926, a new law for the year 1925 and thereafter which fixed the normal tax rate for individuals at 11/2, 3 and 5 per cent for net incomes from $4,000 up to $100,000. It also decreased the surtax rates and increased the personal exemption of a single person to $1,500 and of a married person or head of a family to $3,500. It also raised to $20,000 the amount of income which may be considered as earned and taxed at lower rates. The first five thousand dollars of net income in all cases is deemed to be earned.

Some interesting facts on the income tax situation, especially in regard to the increase in amount of such tax being paid into Uncle Sam's pocket, despite rate cuts, were contained in a recent press dispatch from Washington which reads as follows:

Washington .- Joseph . S. McCoy, government actuary, has made an analysis of income tax statistics of the United States for four years, and points out some remarkable facts. For 30

McCoy to furnish the ways and means and the finance committees information on which to frame tariff and tax measures. His opinion is con-word on federal taxes.

Mr. McCoy compares the calendar year of 1924 with that of 1927. "The total taxable net income for 1924 was $18,122,963,821, returned by 4,090,-034 individuals, while for 1927 it was $18,082,610,787, returned by only 2,458,859 individuals," said Mr. McCoy, "That is, practically the same net income as was returned in 1927 from 60 per cent as many individuals as returned similar inne in 1924. The net income returned those with incomes in excess of $10,000, however, increased from $6,673,-598,635 in 1924 to $10,105,817,127 in 1927. The net income alone did not increase, but the total net tax returned increased from $689,134,185 for 1924 to $826,245,497 for 1927."

Commenting on the showing made, Mr. McCoy said: "The strange, almost unbelievable fact is revealed by these statistics that, in spite of the reduc-tion of the tax rates by fully 40 per cent, out of the total number of returns aggregating 7,298,481 for 1924, 4,122,242 individuals in 1927 returned net taxes of $137,111,312 in excess of that returned for 1924. The average tax returned for 1924 was $95.79 and for 1927, $200.45—an increase of average tax of 199.26 per cent and of gross tax of 19.9 per cent, as compared with a reduction in the number returning taxable net income of 39.9 per cent and a reduction in the average tax rate of about "The reason for this aromaly is clearly the enormous increase in the number and income of the larger, together with the elimination of so many of the smaller, taxpayers.

Mr. McCoy asserted that the collections show that Secretary Mellon was right when he told congress that a "reduction, within reason, in income tax rates results in a greater tax yield."

"Another thing shown," Mr. McCoy said, "is the displacement of individual by corporate business. The 1927 preliminary returns show that the income trom individual business was $3,528,702,060, while the total gross income returned by corporations was $127,106,521,548. The total net income returned by taxable individuals for 1927 was $18,082,610,787, as compared with $8,068,200,905 taxable net income returned by corporations.

"The entire income returned by individuals from wages and salaries was $10,046,866,086, as compared with only $3,528,702,060 as the returns for individual business. This would seem to indicate that immense sums must be paid to taxpayers as wages and salaries by corporations.

The marked effect of the new income ax laws upon the wage earners is reflected in the returns of incomes from wages and salaries for 1924 as compared with similar returns for 1927. In spite of the great increase in incomes, and in creased prosperity, these returns for 1924 totaled over $3,700,000,000 more than did similar returns for 1927. This is accounted for by the personal exemption in-crease of 50 per cent for single persons and of 40 per cent for married persons and heads of families, which reduced the number of returns over 3,100,000 individuals from 1924 to 1927."

Mr. McCoy based his study on the "preliminary statistics of income" for the calendar year 1927.

"The total number of individuals mak ing returns for 1924 was 7,298,481, while for 1927 only 4,122,242 made similar re-turns, a reduction of over 43 per cent." he pointed out. "This was caused by the increased personal exemptions provided by the revenue act of 1926. "The number returning net income in excess of $10,000, however, is another story. For 1924 there were 256,500 of such returns, as compared with 343,856 for 1927, an increase of over 34 per cent. The number returning net incomes of over $100,000 for 1924 was 5,694, and for 1927, 11,067, an increase of nearly 95 per cent. The number returning incomes in excess of $1,000,000 for 1924 was 74, and for 1927, 283, an increase of almost 283 per cent."

the primitive Polynesians. They swam six or seven different ways, including treading water, and would dive to the nottom of deep water. A common institution among the Indians was the sweat bath. They would sweat in a specially constructed sweathouse, which was closed up to keep the heat in, and when they thought they had sweated enough would suddenly run outdoors, giving warwhoops, throw themselves into the cold water, and after a while re-enter the sweathouse

Four more steps, three-and now she knelt beside the camera. Crouchown lot lay between her and the ing low, she opened her pocket for car in the alley, yet she could see her matches. Headlights of a car shone down the street, slower, lights off, and it stood not ten feet away. Were her hands paralyzed with her heart pounding so hard? Could she? Indeed she could!

The very heavens took up the blaze of light that burst from the flashpan and lighted up the alley with the brilliancy of day. White-faced men ran, too, late, but far. Glass crashed, a raw smell filled the air and a car broke the state limit on speed.

Safe behind bolted doors, Jean shivered and shook with great waves of goose-flesh and chattering teeth. "If I had some of their old stuff," she muttered. "It might help to warm

After a hot-water bottle and a woolly blanket had done their work, she reconstructed the scene. "Of course," she exclaimed, every now and then, "that's just who it was, and I had not thought of him."

Two days later, Jean McAllister, Rev. John Mansfield and the two state motor cops walked into the store of George Stayman. Looking up, he saw her advancing with her stalwart background and ran harried fingers through his hair.

"You can fill this lady's order, Stayman," said one of the cops nonchalantly, "and if she wants anything you think you can't supply you can say so right now."

With trembling hand he took the slip of paper and checked the items: Better lighting of the town, especially the alleys.

Employment of a trained policeman, by the support of the council.

"Yes," he stammered, "I will see that this is filled immediately." While he was getting the material part ready, Mr. Mansfield hummed easily:

"One hand in the hopper, the other in the sack

Gents step forward and ladies step back."

As they went up the street, with the state cops making a noisy start on their motor cycles, Jean said quietly, but with triumph, "I could have paved this town with silver-if that film had turned out well.'

Millions of "Sacred Cows" Now in India

The fact that there are more dairy cows in India than in any other country in the world, with the United States running second is surprising news, based on a report of the United States dairy bureau. Russia is a close

"When we consider that there are 22,000,000 dairy cows in the United States, the fact that India has even more changes the popular conception of that country," says Miss Dorothy Buckley of the Connecticut unit of the National Dairy council. "The sacred cow of India is part of our popular idea of that country, but the fact that she exists in such large numbers is quite astonishing."

When the real value of milk as a food is compared in these countries, the United States leads without a question. The health significance of the dairy cow in this country is largely due to the popular education along nutrition lines which, as Miss Buckley points out, is reaching individual mothers in every home. The necessity of a quart of milk a day in building the best health for each child is generally recognized.

Miss Buckley also finds that improved methods of breeding and management makes the products of the dairy cows in this country superior to those of the greater numbers in Russia and India.

Honoring Naturalist

Transforming of an unsightly hollow surrounding the home of the great naturalist, Audubon, at West One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street and Riverside drive, New York city, the purchase of the residence itself and the creation of the whole into a park adequately honoring the memory of the naturalist, is proposed by the Women's League for the Protection of Riverside Park, according to an announcement of a division chairman. Mrs. Mamia Teasdale Wheless.

The tract, purchase of which is sought, lies in a hollow many feet below the level of Riverside drive, and presents an unattractive appearance. The establishing of he park is recommended in line with the plans of the city for a great extension of the park and playground system, and the beautifying of Riverside drive, Gotham's famous water-front boule-

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipa-tion, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong druga? A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle. Trouble in Flocks

Troubles are exceedingly gregarious in their nature, and flying in flocks are apt to perch capriciously.—

Cling to Strange Ways

There are many strange peoples in the broad steppes and plains of Asiatic Russia, and they have strange ways that the Soviet government will be long in changing, no matter what efforts are made. One of these peoples is the Kalmucks. One of their peculiar practices is to cast their dead out in open fields for dogs, vultures and other scavengers of the sort. It is a matter of pride with them to see the bones [ picked clean in short order-it augurs well for the deceased. If, on the contrary, the body is neglected or only partly devoured they take it for a sign that the departed led a wicked and depraved life. The religion of the Kalmucks is Lamaism.

of the most assiduous in the world. Of course, one hears that King George of England and King Victor Emmanuel of Italy are the greatest, but Mr. Ackerman will tell you this is not so, as they interest themselves in the stamps of their own realms only. The New Jersey congressman makes his collections general.

Recently Mr. Ackerman has added to his collection, at much expense, a complete set of the pre-revolutionary stamps. These stamps are very rare.

Stamp collecting has long been a fancy of famous men, but Mr. Ackerman has made his efforts a sort of cooperative venture, which has led him into many associations. He thinks nothing when in London or Rome of acquainting the palaces and their occupants of his presence. There has been much swapping of stamps with King George and King Victor as a result. Only recently Mr. Ackerman traded a rare British African stamp with King George in return for another British empire stamp of which the king had duplicates.

Mr. Ackerman has another hobby, too. One of his relatives who died several years ago left him a set of letters, including one by each of the Presidents of the United States, Mr. Ackerman had the set handsomely bound and then decided to do a little collecting of letters himself. His efforts have been fruitful and his assortment of autographs and documents is highly prized.

Can't Reach Market

The Pan-American Union says that though Paraguay is noted for its wonderful orange crops, the oranges are allowed to go to waste by the thousands because of lack of transporta tion. In the republic there are only 274 miles of railroad and practically no highways which penetrate the regions where oranges grow. Oranges raised near the railroad and near the Paraguay river are shipped in larger quantities to Buenos Aires.

He had n er learned the power of self direction. He had to have a manager or a boss to bring out the best that was in him. Cross knew a good deal about engineering. In fact, in college it looked as if he might become a really outstanding engineer. He had no initiative, however. He could follow directions admirably. If a piece of work were mapped out for him, he would carry it out to the last detail. It was when he was left to his own devices that he got into difficulty. When there was no one to give him directions he seeemd lost, uncertain, ineffective. He found it difficult to set himself to work; it seemed impossible for him to institute anything new or out of the ordinary routine. So long as he had a job under the supervision of another man things went well with him, but put him upon his own resources, and he was lost. He knew how to obey, but he had no understanding of how to command either himself or others. He has been out of college twenty years and is little further along the road to success than when he started.

I got to the window and looked The moon was shining just as might have been expected. The stars were twinkling wherever the moon gave them a chance. The branches were waving in the night air. In short, everything was functioning quite according to Hoyle. But the ghosts were still gone-wholly and absolutely gone.

I turned to Josephine. "They haven't come back," I hissed. "I-I don't believe they were really ghosts

"Because they're gone?" quavered Josephine, blankly. "Oughtn't ghosts to go? I thought-"

"No, you didn't," I snapped. My nerves were still jumping. "You

If They Were Ghosts, I Wanted to See

haven't had time to think. Tomorrow you might have thought, but not tonight. You-"

I hushed-suddenly. I heard a board creak outside our door Of course it might have creaked of its own accord. Animate beings may not be totally depraved, but inanimate things such as boards and stairs and so forth certainly are, especially when they are alone with you in an old house. So that board might have creaked spontaneously, just to scare

Only I knew it hadn't. I knew it had creaked because somebody had trod on it. I knew it. And it didn't scare me a bit. Ghosts can scare me, but humans can't. I'll admit I was a little bit flustered, but that was all I had supreme confidence in the bolt and lock on our door. Grandpa Dinsmore didn't build strong for nothing And besides I had Josephine with me, and Josephine was a tower of strength in any emergency, simply because she didn't have a single nerve in her whole body. And then, of course, there was Mr. Braxton down stairs; I knew he was minus an arm and an indefinite number of ribs, but somehow I felt that if the worst came to the worst he would save us. So I wasn't scared-much. But of course I didn't want to disturb him. The doctor had told me not to. So-

With great dignity I got up from the window and walked to the bed and got in. Then I snuggled down beneath the covers by Josephine's side It was rather cold, so I pulled the covers over my head and lay perfectly still.

After a while I spoke, "Josephine," I said.

No answer.

"Josephine," I repeated.

Still no answer! I turned the covers down and stared at Josephine.

The light was not very strong (it was only moonlight), but it was strong enough for me to see.

Josephine was asleep! What do you think of that?

She was asleep. Just as if there wasn't a single ghost in all the wide, wide world. I was simply disgusted. But of course I wasn't mean enough to wake her. I dropped back on the pillow and let her sleep on-the sleep of the just woman made perfect.

I want to make myself quite plain about what followed. I have been laughed at so much about it that I don't propose to stand for any more misunderstandings.

In the first place I did not go to sleep again. I lay still, and perhaps I closed my eyes, but I positively did not go to sleep. When I first heard the music I thought it came from the river or from an automobile on the road. I was just as wide awake as I ever was in my life. And I heard it. Then after a while I realized that it was a great deal nearer than either road or river. In fact it was not far away at all. It was near; in fact, it was in the house. I shivered all over when I was certain of that. But it was a delightful shiver. Now that I had already seen two ghosts I was prepared for nearly anything. I had never heard of a ghostly band that played dance music and certainly not of one that played "Too Much Mustard" (I had recognized the tune), but I was quite willing to believe in

At first I thought I would waken Josephine, but I decided not to do so. Very carefully I got out of the bed and into my slippers and wrapper and crept to the door. The lock was well oiled and turned easily and I opened the door a crack and peeped out into the corridor. Instantly the music seemed a little plainer. Most certainly it was downstairs, probably in the ballroom.

Come to think of it, why shouldn't there be dancing ghosts in the old house? Of course, ghosts might find it hard to stand such an architectural conglomeration of styles as Dinsmore's Folly. But, after all, if old tales were true, lots of people had stood it in Great-grandfather Dinsmore's time, and perhaps their ghosts had become inured to it. ()r perhaps they had been doomed, for some awful sin they had committed, to come back and view anew the horrors of the style.

Anyway, it was either ghosts or real people who were playing and dancing downstairs. If they were ghosts I wanted to see them. And if they were real people I wanted to see them still more. The two spooks that Josephine and I had seen on the lawn were entirely conventional They acted just as you would expect a ghost to act. But dancing ghosts were different. If they really were ghosts, of course I should be terrified. But then it would be so splendid to be able to tell about them in the future. On the other hand if they were merely people dancing in my house at midnight 1 wanted to know who they were. The end of it was that I slipped out in the corridor and down the stairs.

The lower hall was dimly lighted and I had no difficulty in moving about. The music came clearer now. It was undoubtedly in the ballroom. Then, abruptly, it stopped and I heard a hum of ghostly voices, at least I supposed that they were ghostly, though they did not sound very different from ordinary tones. I crept to the ballroom door and peeped in.

Then I almost dropped. The great room was filled with an awful white glare that sizzled and burned and cast a dreadful greenish glow, And ghosts! There were enough ghosts there to supply the Society for Psychical Research with material for a year. They were not of the sheet variety. They were costumed ghosts in full Eighteenth-century regalia-ladies with powdered hair and bare necks and arms and expanded skirts and men with ruffled shirts and perukes and knee breeches. They were talking together, too-talking very much as people talk nowadays. In fact, if I had not known that they must be ghosts-for they really couldn't be real-I would have thought that they were ordinary guests at a fancy ball. And over all hung that awful white light. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Speak Clearly When Addressing the Deaf

To the person with imperfect hearing there are two kinds of speakers who are regarded with dread: those slovenly speakers who articulate im perfectly, and those uneven speakers who in a single sentence rise to their full vocal capacity and then sink to a whisper, observes Dr. Dana W. Drury, in an article on the fatigue that comes from imperfect hearing, in Hygeia Magazine.

When that which is at best a distorted sentence becomes further disfigured by imperfect utterance, the burden imposed by misfortune is made heavier by needless careless

First Use of Cigarettes

The earliest reference to the cigarette occurs in literature in 1842. where it is stated that cigarettes were smoked in France and Italy Laurence Oliphant is generally credited with the introduction of the cig arette to English society. It did not toed to the window. I don't know become popular, however, until 1870, Phelps in Scribner's ness on the part of the very persons who might help to make the load lighter.

One of the most effective helps that can be rendered to the deafened is gentle speech, well modulated, of an even tenor and above all, articulate, Doctor Drury urges. When it is necessary to increase the voice volume, this should be done with due regard to evenness of tone and distinctness of articulation.

"I Don't Kn w Music, But-" Quite ofter one hears the expression, 'I don't know anything about music, but I like," etc. An unexpected variation on this well-worn theme pleasantly saluted my ears while engaged in conversation with a clever woman in a town in northern Connecticut. She had returned from the service at church and remarked casually: "I don't know anything about music. but I hate our choir." - William Lyon

DROOF OF DYES is in the dyeing

> Words won't dye a dress, or coat, or sweater. It takes real anilines to do that. That's why Diamond Dyes contain from three to five times more anilines than any other dye-by actual test.

It's the anilines in Diamond Dyes that do the work; that give the colors such brilliance; such depth and permanence. It's real aniline that keeps them from giving things that re-dyed look; from spotting or streaking.

Next time you have dyeing to do-try Diamond Dyes. Then compare results. See how soft, bright, new-looking the colors are. Observe how they keep their brilliance through wear and washing. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree Diamond Dyes are better dyes. The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye, for silk or wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. When you buy—remember this. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

to Lure of Mirrors New Yorkers are noted for collecting and watching anything unusual, and particularly anything usual. Excavations for buildings, subways or sewers are favorite attractions. It was quite incomprehensible, though, why such a mob clustered about the window of a little shop in a side street that otherwise was almost depopulated.

The window, it was discovered, contained nothing but mirrors-big mirrors, little mirrors, artistic mirrors, funny mirrors.

The spectators were coeds, and the women did not outnumber the men, either. Girls were flourishing lipsticks and rouge, men were adjusting ties and studying different expressions of their faces. One man was very plainly flirting-through a pretty mirror in the center of the window-with a pretty girl at the other end of the window .- New York Sun.
