WOMEN'S CLUB HOLDS FINAL MEET OF YEAR

The Twentieth Century Club met Saturday, April 13, at the home of Mrs. G. A. Prescott, Jr., for its last regular session of the season. About thirty members responded to roll call. Report of the financial success of the play, "The Womanless Wedding," showed $204.00 realized, which amount goes to the fund looking toward a community building. Miss Worden gave a splendid talk on the fine spirit of co-operation shown by the members during her two years in the office of president of the club, and wishing for her successor the same hearty and willing assistance. Business being dispatched, the meeting was turned over to the program committee and the following excellent program was rendered:

Piano Solo, Mrs. Hattie Conant; Game Conservation, Mrs. Edna Boomer; Fiano Duet, Mesdames Lois Prescott and Lois Giddings; Forest Conservation, Mrs. Jessie McLean.

Mrs. Milver Hamilton Johnson, who is visiting in the city, favored us with two delightful songs, and Miss Bruce gave a reading, "The Old-Fashioned Garden," which concluded one of the best programs given during the club year.

The social committee then served a pot luck lunch, which sustained the well known fact that when it comes to eats, the Tawas City ladies surely do excel.

This closes the club work for the year 1920-1921, and we trust that when October comes, each one will respond to roll call, remembering the object of the club.

SCHOOL NOTES

High School

Baseball practice has begun. Our schedule in the bi-county association is as follows:

April 26—Whittemore, here. May 3—Oscoda, there. May 10—Harrisville, here. May 14—East Tawas, here. May 17—St. Joe, here.

Let's remember these dates and give our high school team our encouragement. One noticeable fact in regard to the schedule is that circumstances cause all but one game to be played on the home diamond.

Class parts have been assigned to the Seniors. Theodora Look, having the highest average for the high school course, is the Valedictorian. Onale, Main and Wallace Leslie, being second and third in their averages, will give the Salutatory and Prophecy, respectively.

We are certainly proud of our oratorical representatives because of their excellent work at Alpena last Thursday evening. Elvera Kasischke, delivering "The American College," won first place in the oratorical contest, and Delta Leslie, delivering "Joan of Arc," took the same place in the declamatory contest. We repeat, "We are proud of them."

Seventh and Eighth Grades

We again have the picture which is given to the room that it represented by the most parents at Parent-Teachers meeting.

This being the last week in the month, there were several examinations given which will help determine the marks on the report cards.

Rose Watts had the misfortune of being bitten by a dog while going home. She was absent because of it.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Marvin Mallon, Richard and Jessie King, and Ray Cox have the most stars on our P. T. A. chart.

Two of our afternoon opening exercises periods are spent in making bird books.

Mildred Quick brought a pretty program for our room.

We are preparing for examinations which will be given Friday.

Third and Fourth Grades

Mabel Brown, Mildred Cholger, Joy Smith, Golden Ziehl, Walter Zollweg, Thelma Herman, Laurie Frank, Betty Holland, Marian Lickfeldt, Thomas Metcalf, Lyda Moore and Harvey Remppert received "A" in spelling every day last week.

Harvey Remppert has not missed a word in spelling for the past five weeks.

Primary

Leona Monroe of Millington entered the first grade Wednesday.

The second grade dramatized the story of "Hansel and Gretel."

Ruth Clark, Eugene Wagner, Irene Ulman and Anna Louise Burr had perfect in spelling this week.

The girls' side of the "Temple of Good Health" is growing faster than the boys'. Come, boys!

Ward School

Maxine Brown visited our room on Wednesday and Mrs. Fitzhugh on Friday.

Our perfect spellers last week were Ada Malcolm, Myrton Leslie, Norma Jean Musolf, Lucille DePoty, Florence McDonald, Ellen Malcolm, Bobby Fitzhugh, Herbert Cox, Jack Swartz and Junior Gustafson. Herbert Cox has had perfect spelling lessons for four weeks.

Nelson Thornton visited us Monday afternoon.

LOCAL STUDENTS WIN 1ST PLACES IN ORATORY

The local community has cause to rejoice because of the success of its high school orators at the sub-district contest which was held at Alpena Thursday evening, April 11.

Elvera Kasischke, using "The American College" as her subject, was the unanimous choice of the judges for first place in the oratorical part of the contest. Delta Leslie, not to be outdone by her worthy colleague, also won first place in the declamatory work with "Joan of Arc."

Supt. H. H. Gilpin of Rogers City, Principal John D. Sibley of Rogers City, and Rev. J. D. Kennedy of the same place, acted as judges.

Each of the contestants at the sub-district contest received a splendid dictionary as a gift from the Detroit News.

Both of our students have been coached by the high school English teacher, Miss Crosby, who accompanied them to the contest.

Elvera and Delta will represent our school at the district contest which will be held not later than May 3. We have not yet been informed where this contest will be held. We wish them "good luck" and we know that both will do their very best.

RITA'S WHITE HANDS

(By D. J. Walsh.)

GEORGE watched his wife as she stood facing the group of people. In the intervals between her readings he frequently forgot just how nice she could look. He felt puzzled at the vast difference of Rita in the home and Rita in public. He didn't pretend to listen to the long and exceedingly sentimental selection that his wife was giving; he cared nothing for poetry. He was comparing her modish appearance with the bizarre lady of the breakfast table. Then her rest robe had given him an uneasy sense because of its casual fastenings and the metal wavers in her hair had imparted a weird look to her small head. Her runover slippers had lost the ribbons and were tied with raveled rags of different colors. And George knew that, had he disparaged this frugal habit of using rags, she would have pleaded economy.

At this point in his reflections he sighed, quite forgetting where he was. He was thinking of the cold cream that she lavishly applied at night and which she seemed reluctant to wash off before breakfast. In fact, she often permitted it to remain all morning and the city soot had a way of mingling with the emollient. George didn't especially enjoy Sundays for this reason—he liked a woman to look sweet and neat at table and the belated meal Sunday mornings did not make for appetite. At least, the breakfasts she served were not sufficiently ultra to cause any oblivion to surroundings.

"I wish," he spoke aloud, with vicious emphasis, "that I might never again see an uncooked cereal—" the raised loggion of his ample neighbor recalled him to his surroundings and he slumped down into his chair, rosy with embarrassment.

And the slim creature in softest silk with gleaming wavy hair read on soulfully, waving a white hand to accentuate a passage.

That white hand deepened his sense of injury. The brief admiration caused by Rita's appearance had vanished and his thoughtless speech, aloud, further annoyed him. "Why must she keep her hands so sacred?" he asked himself. "After all, our hands are supposed to be given some employment. Suppose I suddenly shut up my shop because the work spoiled the shape of my fingers?" He grinned involuntarily, but the remembrance of the sticky gloves worn by the interpreter of poetry lingered. Rita disliked scrubbing or washing because it spoiled her hands. Sewing pricked her fingers and dishwashing was done only because she knew a housemaid was entirely out of the question. When all the dishes were soiled she piled them in the sink and ran the hot water over them and then picked them out disdainfully to dry. The gloves, worn nights and at other odd moments when she sat plunged in soulful reflections, connected with her readings, had left a trail of marks on the doors; the telephone, especially, was smeared with cold cream and George had learned to wipe it off before attempting to touch it.

The reader closed the exquisitely bound limp-leather volume: "To me that interpretation is wonderful. Life is what we make it. A wretched affair of makeshifts and worries or something ideal. Each glorious day should be filled with beauty"—she hesitated with a gentle smile—"or, at least, that is my conception of life. Life should be the interpretation of beauty."

The overdressed guests of Mrs. Randall Tremaine clapped decorously. Mrs. Tremaine was a wealthy woman who demanded constant flattery and adulation. Her friends were composed of a group of climbers who hoped to enter the sacred portals of society by clinging to her scanty but exceedingly expensive skirts. Rita had been presented to her as a striving young person, who constantly reached for the better things of life, and who—this was the part that pleased the prudent Mrs. Tremaine—would give readings absolutely without charge, because she wished to read before the best people.

"Beautifully interpreted," wheezed a very thin old man with a dyed mustache of an unnatural black. "She grasps the fundamentals of the better life."

As George dazedly turned his head to see who had made the comment he heard this tart whisper: "That's the man who lives in the flat above us; he beats his wife every Saturday night—"

George wondered savagely why he limited this exercise to Saturday nights, then blushed at his elemental nature.

"You did very well, my dear," Mrs. Tremaine's voice rang out. "Your interpretation of a woman's place in life is charming. Your husband is very much to be envied—" a ponderous hand was playfully wagged in George's direction, who weak-mindedly smirked back—"come and sit with me while I talk to you a bit."

Rita, blushing at the flattery, swam along in the wake of her patroness.

George, convinced that the evening would never end, had stifled three yawns more or less successfully when he was again aroused by Rita's name: "Yes, my dear, she is the wife of a common carpenter. He works in his own shop. Some one said he was here tonight, but I hardly think Mrs. Tremaine would permit that. I'm going to invite her to read at my evening in Woodlawn. She isn't well enough known to charge anything and a reading is as good as anything else. Just so it is from some well-known poet, people will swallow any—" Some people stirring between them shut out the rest of the conversation.

George sat digesting his status in the society of climbers. He had built his shop on the side of a large lot which he owned, planning to put up a modest home on the other half. Rita, however, had been so expensive a proposition as to prevent the carrying out of the plan. The shop was far out and so far she had succeeded in coaxing him to rent an apartment nearer the city. It kept her in touch with important people and he could just as well take the car to work, she had explained. He had given in weakly at first, thinking that he could save the money to build, but her clothes had cost a great deal, reading in wealthy houses necessitated many changes and she hated sewing. In fact, their life was given over to her art. "To the interpretation of the beautiful," he told himself grimly as he placed her handsome evening cape over her shoulders as she had shown him how to do.

She was very silent on the way home. Once inside the uncared-for flat she sat down and began pulling out her hairpins. She had an odd look on her face. "George, Mrs. Tremaine made a suggestion tonight. She said she had done a great deal for me—"

George, getting a drink of water at the sink, turned and stared at this. "I thought it had been the other way around," went on Rita doubtfully, "but she said that she thought it about time I showed a disposition to reciprocate. She wants you to do over the library—that is, put in new black oak panels and drop beams in—"

"I haven't applied for any work," interrupted George. "I have more work than I can do."

Rita's white hands twisted together painfully. "Why, she doesn't mean to make an estimate and be paid. She wishes it done as a token of—"

"The beautiful, I dare say, Rita, this is the last straw. I have weakly hesitated because I wanted you to be happy, but as you said yourself tonight, 'Life is what we make it; each day should be filled with beauty.' Now, I propose to run things hereafter. There is no beauty in this dusty untidy house. You are going to throw away your limp volumes of scarlet leather and billious greens, put away your ridiculous silk dresses and wear good, sensible gingham or whatever women wear to work in. We are going to have real breakfasts and you are going to be neat—"

Rita's eye had begun to flash and now she rose so that her eyes were nearly level. "George, have you been dreaming, or what is it?"

"Just woke up!" he snapped, thankful she hadn't cried; that was what he had dreaded. "No more sickly poetry for you. What has it gained for you except snubs? Who cares anything about you except that you furnish a free entertainment? And now this Tremaine woman tries to fool you into giving her a token"—he stamped his foot as he spoke and there was a prompt knocking on the radiator below; flat dwellers respond instantly to noise. "That's another thing. You haven't helped me any so far, but I'm going to see to it that you stop being a drag. I shall start the cottage at once and the day it's finished we move in. No more paying rent and carfare when I have ground paid for and ready. If you are too proud to live next door to a carpenter shop, why—" He stopped, longing to give in and eat his words as he saw her astounded face. She was his wife and he loved her, but yet: "Life seems to me an awful muddle," he thought drearily; "Rita could be so fine—in fact, she is," he finished loyally and turned to her. She looked so slight and frail that he could not lay down the law any further; perhaps she would compromise—

Rita had been running her hand absently over the dusty windowsills. She was very white but there were no signs of tears. "George," she said clearly, "I never noticed before how tall you were, you look splendid. Why didn't you tell me you didn't care for my readings? I liked to be praised and I guess I thought you would care more for me if other people thought me talented, but tonight when Mrs. Tremaine spoke of some return do you know I began to, as you say, 'wake up'? Poetry is all very well, but after all, one's husband—" She seemed to be searching for words as she examined her dusty finger and the man listening experienced a great throb of thankfulness. "This flat doesn't look as it should, I think it will be a distinct relief to move and start fresh and have no foolish pretenses."

"Then you won't feel badly—" he knew he was weak, but he wanted to make sure.

All the enthusiasm that she had poured into her readings seemed to have been deflected into this new idea—that of making home life pleasant. Rita wasn't stupid—she just hadn't thought. "I wonder if it's too late to look over those plans you have for the cottage? I think I can promise you a different looking place tomorrow night." Her face told him that she had changed her interpretation of life.

SHORT-JACKET CLOTH SUIT; MANY WINSOME BONNET TYPES

ALL that there's nothing can outclass a natty two-piece tailored suit, when it comes to "good style." One never makes a mistake in selecting a simple tulleur like the one in the picture for general wear. It is a very late and a very youthful model of navy blue flannel—has the smart circular-cut skirt and the cardigan jacket silhouette.

And do not neglect to take note of the scarf! More and more fashion depends upon the gay scarf to add the finishing touch to any and every tulleur. Speaking of scarfs, the mode has so elaborated upon the theme that "scarfology" has become a most complicated yet fascinating study of color, fabric and design. Then, too, there is the art of wearing to be mastered, which is as important as the scarf itself.

No longer is the scarf a mere triangle or square or oblong of silk. It's all that, with a thousand and one startling innovations introduced both as to the scarf itself and the new tricks in the way it is worn.

One of the swankiest ideas is the one-side scarf adjusted so as to reveal a single streamer. This idea is not only carried out with accessory scarfs, as is shown in the picture, but necklines of coats and dresses feature the one-side scarf effect in ingenious ways.

Among recent scarfs is the triangle which has a slot cut in one end, through which the other end is pulled, thus doing away with tying it in a knot. You will like this model. It is so practical.

Color contrast takes the place of printed patterns in many of the latest scarf versions. That is, half of a triangle will be navy perhaps, the other half bright red or tangerine, or the combination may be black and white or possibly purple with chartreuse.

Then, too, there are many flying ends to some of the scarfs. They con-direction rather than pass up a tangerine straw.

If your spring costume is navy take this tip—buy a clever hat which contrasts navy with chartreuse. Two shades never looked more stunning together. To the fascinations of color and straw, a third is added—the winsomeness of the shapes themselves. This surely is a season when "bonnets is bonnets," including every type from little cloches and cunning scoop fronts with shallow crown to "baby bonnet" effects with their plaited frills at the back. The new Paris shapes remind over and over again that when it comes to bonnet brims there are contours and contours.

One also realizes that either a hat has a brim or it has none. Which is to say that the fact of brims coming in does not mean that snug toques and caps are going out—which accounts for the fact of the bonnet group in the illustration concluding with the portrait (in panel below) of a very smart toque made of felt with novelty straw leaves for the crown.

Of the four bonnets shown the first is a lime-colored bangkok with matched velvet ribbon.

A black ballbunt cloche tipped with white is pictured in the oval to the left. Fashion is especially highlighting black and white millinery for spring. Note that one side of this brim is longer than the other, which is one of the favorite silhouettes this season.

To the right is a very charming model featuring the new shallow crowns and the widened-out-at-the-sides brim. These cunning bonnets are worn back of the face sufficiently to show a bit of the hair.

Paul Revere Rides Again

THE ALARM

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON
So through the night rode Paul Revere,
And so through the night went his cry of alarm.
To every Middlesex village and farm,
A cry of defiance and not of fear,
A voice in the darkness, a knock at the door,
And a word that shall echo forever
more!
For, borne on the night wind of the Past,
Through all our history, to the last,
In the hour of darkness and peril and need,
The people will waken and listen to hear
The hurrying hoof-beats of that steed,
And the midnight message of Paul Revere.

Stamp Act dispute. His pictures were mostly political caricatures and historical scenes connected with the struggle for independence. In addition to being a cartoonist, he was also something of a poet and he usually explained his caricatures with good-humored, sarcastic verse. He was a portrait artist of considerable ability, two of his subjects being John Hancock and Samuel Adams.

As a side line for all these activities he also practiced dentistry. The following advertisement appeared in the Boston Gazette and Country Journal, prior to the Revolution.

Whereas, many persons are so unfortunate as to lose their Fore-Teeth by accident and other ways, to their great Detriment, not only in looks, but speaking both in Public and Private—this is to inform all such, that they may have them replaced with artificial ones, that looks as well as the Natural & answers the End of Speaking to all Intents by PAUL REVERE Goldsmith, near the head of Doctor Clarke's Wharf, Boston.

Two years later this same paper carried the following advertisement by Paul Revere, dentist:

ARTIFICIAL TEETH
PAUL REVERE

Takes this method of returning his most Sincere Thanks to the Gentlemen and Ladies who have employed him in the care of their teeth, he would now inform them and all others who are so unfortunate to lose their Teeth by accident and otherwise, that he still continues the Business of a Dentist and flatters himself that from the Experience he has these Two years (in which time he has fixt some Hundreds of Teeth) that he can fix them as well as any Surgeon-Dentist, who ever came from London. He fixes them in such a Manner that they are not only an Ornament, but of real Use in Speaking and Eating; He cleanses the Teeth and will wait on any Gentleman or Lady at their Lodgings, he may be spoke with at his shop opposite Dr. Clarke's at the North End, where the Gold and Silver Smith's business is carried on in all its Branches.

One bit of Revere's dental work is historic. When the body of Gen. Joseph Warren was removed from the temporary grave on Bunker Hill, the identification of the body was made certain by Revere who recognized the wire he had use in setting an artificial tooth for the general.

Ever think of Paul Revere as a publisher and seller of song books? Well, he was! In the Boston Gazette for February 4, 1765, appeared this advertisement:

Just published and to be sold by Josiah Flagg and Paul Revere in Fish

Street, at the North End of Boston—A Collection of Psalm Tunes in two three and four parts from the most Celebrated Authors; fitted to all Capital measures and approved by the best Masters in Boston, New England. To which are added some Hymns and Anthems; the greater Part of them never before printed in America. Set in score by Josiah Flagg, engraved by Paul Revere.

Although Longfellow made his ride to Concord famous, the fact is that he had previously taken others which were more remarkable and fully as important as that one, even though they were not so spectacular. He was selected by the Committee of Correspondence to carry the news of the Boston Tea Party to New York and Philadelphia and, leaving Boston on December 17, he reached Philadelphia the day after Christmas. His next ride was to carry a message in regard to the Boston Port Bill, which became a law on March 1, 1774. On this occasion he broke all horseback records to Philadelphia, reaching there in less than six days. But one of his most important took place on December 13, 1774, when he carried word to Portsmouth, N. H., that a large garrison of British soldiers for Fort William and Mary was on its way there. Acting upon Revere's warning the New Hampshire patriots went to the fort, forced the surrender of the small garrison consisting of a British captain and five soldiers and carried away a hundred barrels of gunpowder which were hidden under the pulpit of the Durham meeting house. Most of this powder was put to good use at the battle of Bunker Hill.

During the Revolution when the British evacuated Boston they tried to put the cannon at Fort Independence out of commission by breaking the trunnions. It was Paul Revere who made them serviceable by inventing a new kind of carriage. It was also Paul Revere who was sent to a Philadelphia powder mill to get plans for a similar one to be operated in New England. The proprietor refused to allow him to make drawings of any kind, but Revere looked over the mill, returned home and from memory built a powder mill that was a great success. After the war Revere resumed his trade as a goldsmith and also built a factory for casting church bells and bronze cannon. When copper bolts and spikes began to be used instead of iron for building ships he conducted a series of experiments which led to the building in 1801 of a large plant at Canton, Mass., for rolling copper. He was the first man in this country to smelt copper ore and to refine and roll copper into bolts and sheets. Some of his copper bolts went into the making of the famous frigate "Old Ironsides" and the plates on the Massachusetts State House dome are made of copper supplied by Paul Revere. Several of the bells which he made are still in existence and one of them to this day calls people to worship in All Soul's Unitarian church in Boston. This same bell is famous as the "Abolition Bell" because it was tolled for John Brown on the day he was executed.

Paul Revere, merchant, is another role he played. A copy of the Independent Chronicle and Universal Advertiser dated January 1, 1784, carries an advertisement stating that he could supply the public with "An importation of metal goods, door locks, shot, playing cards, Irish linens, German serges, etc., at his mart directly opposite the Liberty Pole, South Boston."

Watch Your Feet

Asked whether people abuse their stomachs or their feet the most, Dr. William S. Sadler of the American Magazine replies unhesitatingly, "Their feet." He explains that people have had a little sense knocked into their heads about overeating and wrong eating, but precious little regarding their feet and their care.

Around Orchard

PREVENT WORMY APPLES BY SPRAY

Use Arsenate of Lead After Petals Begin to Fall.

To a codling moth—which is a soft gray little butterfly-like thing—an apple tree has just one use. And that is as a convenience for raising some more codling moths. Your rights in the matter as owner of the tree count for nothing with this narrow-minded pest. It is given up wholly to the idea that the world should be filled with codling moths. And unless you get out your spray-rig at the right time this mania will likely be carried far enough to ruin your chances of nice sound apples.

For every codling moth that comes along about the time the blossoms fall will lay eggs on the tiny little apples that are just forming. And from these the well-known apple worms are hatched—they in turn to become other moths to lay more eggs to make more moths and so on until, if a person didn't step in and gum the game up, he wouldn't have an apple fit to eat.

You do this and save your apples by spraying with arsenate of lead, just after the petals begin to fall—before that, you'll poison the bees which are among your best friends, without doing any more good. The arsenate of lead should be used at the rate of a pound and a quarter to fifty gallons of water. Get it all over the tree—in a fine mist. And don't wait any later than the fall of the petals, for then the tiny apple ends close up with the worm inside safe from the poison.

There are other fruit troubles of a fungous nature—blights and rots—which also begin to develop at this season. To halt these you add lime sulphur to the arsenate of lead. You can buy the prepared form, and this is handiest and just as cheap as making it, especially for a small orchard. It comes either in liquid or powder—of the former add a gallon and a half to each fifty gallons of the spray mixture, and of the latter add four pounds to the same amount.

Immature Twigs Are Too Weak as Scaffold Limbs

One-year-old trees of some kinds, such as the apple and fig, have the form of a straight whip, in which case it is only necessary to remove the top at the desired point. However, trees like the peach, apricot and plum usually have several small, side branches below the point where the top is removed, which must be considered.

The mistake is sometimes made of cutting the longer of such branches back four to five inches from the trunk in an effort to force them into scaffold limbs or of removing them entirely close to the trunk. In the first case, such immature twigs are too weak to form the basis for scaffold limbs. Though one or two may be sufficiently heavy for this purpose, this number alone would make an unbalanced tree. In the second case, if the twigs are cut close to the trunk, basal buds are destroyed which may be needed later for the development of scaffold limbs.

Vineyard Location Has Lot to Do With Grapes

The location of a vineyard often has a lot to do with the quantity of the grapes produced. In a hilly country low spots should be avoided, because they do not provide either the air or the water drainage that is necessary. Pick out the high spots, and the vineyards will not be so apt to suffer from frost damage. In level sections this point is not so marked, but even there the higher spots are more desirable.

Near large bodies of water the temperature does not change rapidly and such sections are usually well adapted to fruit growing because of less damage from late frosts in the spring, and early frosts in the fall.

Horticultural Notes

The young pear trees need pruning quite similar to that of the apple.

Give your fruit trees a dormant spray of lime sulphur before the buds begin to swell.

Prune back the tops of young fruit trees at the time of planting, the degree of pruning differing with the character and habit of growth of the species.

Summer pruning is sometimes practiced in vineyards where the growth is rather heavy. The object of such pruning seems to be the removal of growth that would interfere with cultivation.

It is a pleasing sight as well as a financial asset for the grower to have an orchard of uniform, properly headed trees. This can be obtained only by purchasing young, vigorous trees, which will allow the height of head to be regulated according to a fixed standard.

Elephants Made Trouble

The herd instinct among elephants is so strong that one was responsible for the destruction of the greater part of a station on the Burma railways, says a writer in the Atlantic Monthly. "Some years ago a German firm of dealers in animals purchased from us a baby elephant, and delivery of the animal was accordingly taken at a camp near a railway station in upper Burma. He was put into a car and the car slung into the siding for the night. The calf, unused to such treatment, started to trumpet his little heart out. This was disastrous, for it quick ly fetched in all the elephants in the vicinity, who began by wrecking the car, which was soon smashed into matchwood, and, having freed the calf, started on the station. Fortunately we were able to leave the German firm fight out the intricate question of damages with the railway authorities."

Commissioner for the appointment of three disinterested Special Commissioners to determine the necessity for said Drain, and for the taking of private property for the use and benefit of the public for the purpose thereof, and the just compensation to be made therefor.

And Whereas, This Court did on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1929 upon a due examination of such application and of all the proceedings theretofore taken in the premises, find and declare the same to be in accordance with the statute in such case made and provided, and did thereupon, by an order entered therein, appoint Saturday, the 27th day of April, A. D. 1929, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, as the time, and the office of the Judge of Probate in the City of Tawas City, in said county, as the place when and where a hearing upon such application would be had, and did then and there order that all persons whose lands were to be traversed by such proposed Drain, and who had not released the right of way, and all damages on account thereof, to appear at the time and place designated and to be heard with respect to such application if they so desire, and to show cause, if any there be, why said application should not be granted.

And Whereas, There is now on file with this Court a description and survey of such proposed Drain, from which said description and survey it appears that the lands to be traversed by such Drain, and the commencement, general course and terminus of such drain are as follows, to-wit: (a)

Minutes and specifications in the matter of the Alabaster-Whitney

Drain; deepening, widening, cleaning out, straightening, and extending same in Alabaster township, Iosco County, Michigan, for the description as follows:

Beginning on the county line between Iosco and Arenac counties, at the N. W. corner of Section 1 of Whitney Township; thence running East along the North side of county line road, 1250 feet to the corner of Sections 33 and 34, Alabaster township; thence North in old ditch line, west side of line between Sections 33 and 34, 2679 feet to a bridge; thence crossing said Section line road, and running along the old ditch line on East side of said road, 2214 feet; thence angling N. 36½ degrees E. 141 ft.; then N. 18½ degrees E. 312 ft. to the bridge on Section line road between Sections 27 and 34; thence along line of old drain, 1304 ft.; then straightening same and running N. 10½ degrees E. 800 ft.; N. 5 degrees E. 530 ft.; N. 3½ degrees E. 1320 ft.; N. ¼ degree E. 550 ft.; N. 29 degrees W. 870 ft. to the bridge at corner of Sections 21, 22, 27 and 28; thence North along the line of old drain, on the East side of road between Sections 21 and 22, a distance of 1991 feet, to a point of Station 139 plus 61.

The total distance of said deepening, widening, cleaning, straightening and extending said drain is 13961 ft., or 2 miles and 206 1/10 rods.

Station stakes and grade hubs are set every 100 ft. along said drain, and at angles and plus stations.

Station stakes are numbered in consecutive order, commencing with Station 0.0 at the county line and continuing to Station 139 plus 61 at the end on said extension.

Station stakes and hubs are placed 15 feet right of the center of the drain from beginning to Station 39 plus 29, then 15 feet to the left of the center of drain to Station 61 plus 43 at angle; then 15 feet to the right of center of drain to the end thereof. If it becomes necessary to change the center line from the hubs, the change will become part of these specifications, and the right is reserved to make any such changes.

All grade hubs are required to be left in their original positions when said drain is completed.

Two roads of right of way will be required on each side of the center line of said drain for digging and for depositing of excavations. All loose stumps, timber and brushwood shall be removed from the entire width of said right of way, and shall not be covered with excavations from said drain.

In clearing said right of way, all green standing timber not interfering with the digging of said drain, shall not be injured or cut.

All water courses entering said drain, either natural or artificial, shall be left open and unobstructed, at the completing of said drain.

The width of berm on each bank of said drain shall be 3 feet. At all points where said drain passes under any fence, and it shall be necessary to remove any portion of such fence, the contractor shall keep such fence in repair, and shall rebuild such fence when drain is completed, provided, however, that when drain shall run parallel to any fence and its removal becomes necessary for the construction of the drain, on the surveyed line thereof, the contractor shall remove such fence, and shall not be required to rebuild the same.

At all places where said drain runs parallel to a highway, the excavations from the drain shall be deposited on the center of said highway, as much as may be required, and levelled to a 20 foot road-bed by the contractors.

Bridges and culverts, permanent and temporary, will be erected and constructed as required by law.

All tubes along said drain should be removed and bridges 8 foot span should be built in place.

Said drain will be divided into Sections as follows: No. 1, from Station 0.0, on the county line, and cleaning out and deepening, etc. to Station 61 plus 43, distance 6143 feet; No. 2, from Station 61 plus 43, cleaning, deepening, widening, etc. to Station 79, distance 1757 feet; No. 3, from Station 79, straightening, etc. to Station 105 plus 50, distance 2650 feet; No. 4, from Station 105 plus 50, straightening, etc. to bridge at Station 119 plus 71, distance, 1421 feet; No. 5, from bridge at Station 119 plus 71, along highway, deepening, widening, etc. to end of extension at Station 139 plus 61, distance 1990 feet; total distance of the five Sections, 13961 feet, or 2 64/100 miles (2 miles and 206 1/10 rods).

The slope of each bank of said drain shall be 1½ ft. horizontal to 1 ft. vertical, from the county line to Station 40; then 1½ to 1 on roadside; and 1 to 1 on East side to Station 61 plus 43; then slope 1 to 1 through fields to Station 120; then slope 1½ to 1 on roadside; and 1 to 1 on East side to end of extension.

The width of bottom shall be 6 feet to Station 120; then 5 feet.

The depth of said drain from the grade hubs, the amount of cut at the center, and the width of surface excavations, at each station are given in feet and tenths and are as follows, to-wit:

Specifications
Starting at Station 8 of the profile made by John W. Applin, which station is located 800 ft. from the Saginaw Bay west, on the line of the Alabaster-Whitney Drain, thence running west 2640 feet. Set 3 rows of ½ pound sticks of dynamite 2 ft. apart and 2 ft. deep, the center row being placed on the center line of said Drain, which said dynamite shall be exploded. Then 2 rows of the same sized sticks of dynamite 2 ft. apart each way and 2 ft. deep, set one row on each side of said center line and one foot distant from said center line.

Said dynamite to be exploded, and then one row of ½ pound sticks of dynamite to be set 2 ft. apart and 2 ft. deep on the said center line, said dynamite to be exploded.

Said dynamite to be exploded with a battery and electric primers and in sections of 100 ft. at each shot. Sufficient time to wash out loosened dirt must be allowed between shots. No shooting will be allowed to be done except the wind is blowing across the ditch at the rate of at least 15 miles per hour, and when the thermometer stands at 70 F.

The contractor will be required to furnish all tools and materials subject to the approval of the Drainage District Board. He will also be required to furnish bonds as required by the Drain law.

And Whereas, It appears that the names of the owners of lands who have neglected or refused to execute a release of right of way, and all damages in any way arising or incident to the opening or maintaining the proposed Drain, together with the descriptions of the tracts of lands owned by such persons, severally, and placed opposite their respective names are as follows: viz.: (b)

And it further appears that the several descriptions or tracts of land owned by any minor, incompetent or unknown persons, or non-residents of the township of Alabaster and Whitney township the execution of a release of right of way and damages for which has been neglected or refused by them, are as follows, viz.: (c)

Anna Westerland, the NW¼ of SW¼ of Section 22, Alabaster township; J. A. Brugger, NE¼ of NW¼ of Section 13, Whitney township; Fred Rollin, SE¼ of SW¼ of Section 12; A. E. Minard, parcel in Lot No. 1, Section 13, Whitney township; Gus Hockrattle, parcel Lot 44 Section 12, Whitney township.

Therefore, You, the said (d) non-residents described above, and you the several owners of the following described lands, to-wit: (e) as above described in this citation, and each of you are hereby cited to appear before this court at the time and place last above set forth, to be heard with respect to such application, if you so desire, and show cause, if any there be, why said application for the appointment of three Special Commissioners, as aforesaid, should not be granted.

A little foresight will mean a finer garden

THERE is a surprise when you first taste the melting sweetness of Ferry's sweet corn. It is not ordinary sweet corn by any means. Nor is a plump, red, smooth-skinned Ferry tomato like an ordinary tomato. Nor are the Ferry's Seeds that grow these like ordinary seeds.

Ferry's purebred Seeds, you buy inherited quality. Quality is bred into the seeds. A careful up-breeding of vegetables and flowers has been going on in the Ferry trial gardens for 51 years. This means that the Ferry's Seeds you can plant today came from parent plants and grandparent plants that were themselves purebred. Sixty thousand tests are made annually in the Ferry gardens for germination. Thousands of other trials are made for size, form, color, resistance to disease. So far as is humanly possible, we determine that every crop will meet the Ferry standards.

Ferry's Seeds are easy for amateurs to make grow well, and are naturally the choice of professional gardeners. They are fresh for planting now, at the "store around the corner." No packet of Ferry's Seeds is ever carried over by the dealer for sale the second season. Send for the Ferry's Seed Annual. It is more than a catalog. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Dept. H, Detroit, Michigan.

Your garden will have its best possible start with Ferry's purebred Seeds.

"Laundry" for Pets

Wapakoneta, Ohio.—A dog laundry is a somewhat new and novel business but two young boys of twelve and a pretty little titan-haired girl of ten successfully inaugurated such an enterprise, and already can look back on a month of actual operation of cleaning dogs and cats at a profit.

The partners in what is probably Ohio's most unique and unusual business, Charles Fleming, Jr., Fenton Hamilton, and Margaret Hamilton, sat back in their "office" here and discussed with all the nonchalance of seasoned business leaders their occupation.

The firm is known as "Fleming, Hamilton & Company, specialists in rejuvenation and renovating the soiled coats of cats and dogs, mongrel or pedigreed."

beauty shop. Prices to fit the pocket-book of any dog or cat, large or small, big and fat, scrawny or otherwise," daubed in approved advertising fashion.

On the wall, inside the "office," hangs another sign, written neatly and plainly to catch the eye of the prospective client. It reads:

Tan dogs washed—20 cents. Black dogs washed—20 cents. Spotted dogs washed—25 cents. Curly-haired dogs washed—20 cents extra.

Burrs and chewing-gum wads, the bane of all well-groomed and dapper doggies "beau brummeis," get the special attention of the trio of dog beautifiers.

The pet cleaners assert on their price lists that dogs and cats committed to their care will receive "kind treatment, and no soap in their eyes."

For 10 cents extra the pets will be called for and delivered.

The company is extremely versatile in their methods of conducting the business. Certain feats of beautification can be executed "for a consideration," according to one of the numerous signs or price lists decorating the walls.

Suppose you want the dog's tail curled, with perhaps a little kink here and there in the hair. The firm will put a permanent wave in the tail or hair—how permanent has not yet been demonstrated—"guaranteed not to fade," the sign reads.

New Haven, Conn.—What was termed "the most remarkable fossil that has ever come to light," has been placed on exhibition at Yale's Peabody museum. It is a Nothrotherium, a type of ground sloth that lived in Arizona 1,000,000 years ago. The sloth was trapped in a pit and even portions of its hide and sinew were preserved in the accumulations of ages in which it was buried.

Indian Census

Washington.—Counting Indians may sound like a simple occupation, but Miss Rachel Jenss, who has tagged 50,000 Navahos for their great white father in Washington, found there was a trick in it.

She just has completed a census of the chiefs, medicine men, squaws, papooses—all the Indians on the Navaho reservation in northern Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico, for the Indian bureau of the Interior department.

"When I started," she said, "I walked miles and miles on roads along the canyons and—I couldn't find an Indian! I had white guides.

"Then I thought of getting an Indian guide, and when I did I found that previously I had been walking past and over Indians all the time. The Navaho guides took me down the canyons and into the recesses of the hills, and there we found large groups whose presence could not even be suspected from the upper trails."

The census was made in the absence of birth certificates in the tribes. The Navaho reservation contains vast stores of undeveloped wealth, and the

Tourists Use "Fort"

Fort Wilkins, Mich.—The unprotected borders of the United States and Canada, an oft-cited example that two peoples can live in peace, revives the story of Fort Wilkins, the last army post on the northern boundary line.

Not since its garrison marched away shortly after the Civil war have its confines echoed to martial tread. It now is a state park, and tourists camp beneath its trees, where sentries alert for the war cry of Indian braves once walked their posts.

Just a cannon shot away, across the water of Lake Superior, is the imaginary line separating Canada from the United States.

Never once in the life of the old fort was a gun fired from its confines in hostility. Fort Wilkins was established in 1844, temporarily abandoned in 1846, reoccupied in 1869 and finally deserted in 1870.

The post was built at the end of Michigan's thumb, the Keweenaw peninsula, as a protection to early copper miners and settlers against Indian aggression. There, too, lurked in the minds of officials that the United States some day might need to defend its northern frontier.

The first garrisoned troops, who built the post, hewed the logs from virgin timber. Later the buildings were clapboarded and when the state took over the post the fort was well preserved.

Protecting the inclosure on the north and east was a stockade of posts, fastened with hand-made wooden pegs. Lake Fanny Hooe provided protection on the south side, and there was a rapidly flowing stream on the west.

The post, although somewhat modernized by the summer's flow of motorists, remains a page out of the past in the industrialized present of Michigan's copper country.

DAIRY FACTS

ONION FLAVOR IS CAUSE OF LOSS

Pest Is One of First Plants to Appear in Spring.

There is little sale for milk bearing the aroma of the wild onion, and when butter has this flavor, it is next to impossible to eat it.

"Yet we have the wild onion with us in many of our best pastures," says John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Carolina State college. "This pest is one of the first plants to appear in the spring and is also a visitor in late fall. Fortunately during the summer months, the plants die down and thus give no trouble. Onion flavor makes milk practically unsalable and the butter made from cream with this flavor is usually sold to a renovating plant at a very low price."

This loss is always handed down from the creamery to the milk producer since the price that a creamery pays for butterfat is determined by the price it receives for butter. It is important, therefore, to keep this flavor out of the milk, states Mr. Arey. One of the best methods of doing this is to take the cows off of the infested pasture at least six hours before it is time to milk.

Mr. Arey states that tests made with the herd of dairy cows owned by the North Carolina experiment station have shown this to be an effective way of ridding milk of onion flavor. The tests further show that this plan should not cause any great inconvenience to the average dairyman. The period of time during which the wild onion is most prevalent is usually short and so the plan need be in operation only a few weeks. If properly carried out, the method will save the dairymen thousands of dollars each season.

Milking Very Important Part of Cow Management

The udder of a cow is a delicate organ and very sensitive to abuse or improper handling. Some persons seem to have an idea that it is simply a sack into which the milk gathers to be drawn off at milking time.

The udder, in fact, is just one large collection of cavities or milk-secreting glands lined by many cells or small pouches and surrounded by a network of arteries and veins. During the day and night these arteries are bringing together the various constituents of which milk is composed, such as fats, proteins, water, ash, etc.

Along toward milking time these cells have collected their full capacity of milk-producing elements, but not until the actual process of milking is begun do the numerous cells in the udder start to give up their contents, which gravitate to the milk cistern in and above the teat.

There is no denying the fact that milking the cow is a very important phase of her management. This is especially noticeable when she has been hustled into the barn with a dog at her heels or otherwise excited.

Profitable Production of Average Dairy Cow

A dairy cow will not pay her expenses, in the opinion of Prof. J. H. Fuller, head of the dairy husbandry department at the University of New Hampshire, unless she produces at least 7,500 pounds of milk per year. This production, which he considers necessary to meet such charges as feed, labor and overhead, is nearly 3,000 pounds greater than that of the average cow in the United States.

Professor Fuller suggests a minimum of ten cows for each full-time worker, assuming that the man who cares for ten cows will also do other work about the farm. He says that a man with fifteen cows can well afford a milking machine and recommends the use of litter carriers and drinking cups to keep labor costs on the dairy farm to a minimum.

Fall Freshening Offers Some Big Possibilities

It is not surprising that the good dairyman has his cows freshen in the fall, since it gives him the high milk flow during a season when he can control and keep uniform his rations and stable appointments. Then, too, winter is the time when dairy products bring the best prices, for a large proportion of the population of milk producers have their cows freshen in spring, and do not supply silage, roots or even good dry rations. For that reason the heaviest supply of dairy products is offered in spring and summer and the light supply in fall and winter.

Limiting Milk Yields

Milk yields may be limited by an insufficient supply of lime in the feed. Corn, oats, timothy and redtop are low in lime while the legume hays are high. A ton of soy-bean hay contains about eighty times as much lime as a ton of shelled corn. Legume hay crops, particularly alfalfa, yield two to three times as many nutrients to the acre as the non-legume hays. Besides this, the legume hays excel in palatability and in vitamin content.

CHAPTER XI

While I stood outside the door collecting my thoughts the three inside kept up their talking. The first words I caught completely were Father's. He seemed to be explaining matters to Josephine. "The whole thing is simple enough," he said, as nearly as I can remember. "The X Y Z people have been trying for years to get the A B C railroad away from me. A month or two ago I found out that they were about to succeed. I thought I could beat them if I could find the owner of a thousand shares that I had been trying to trace for some time. Mr. Paul here found her for me."

Father paused as if to glance toward somebody and I heard Mr. Paul's voice murmur something in reply. Good gracious! Was Mr. Paul there too? How did he get in? Did everybody know about Father except me?

"They belonged to your mother, Fred, my boy," went on Father, "and Paul got her proxy for me. But later I discovered that another friend of mine had sold me out and that the X Y Z was pretty sure to win. So—I could hear Father chuckle—"Josephine," he interrupted himself, "did you ever read that story about how Baron Blank of Blank castle saved himself away back in the Middle Ages? Baron Dash lived in another much bigger castle near him and had been trying to gobble him for a long time. And Baron Blank guessed that it was only a question of time till he went down the big fellow's gullet. Finally he got wind that Dash was to make a desperate attack on him on a certain night. And he more than suspected that some one in his garrison had arranged to play traitor. So he simply blocked the big gates and lowered the portcullis and raised the draw bridge, and all that. Then he marched out with his entire force and circled around behind Dash's castle and waited. Pretty soon Dash came out with dozens of men and marched away into the night. When he was well out of sight Blank hurried up to the gate of the castle with his men as bold as you please and called to the guards to open up. They supposed it was Dash coming back and opened up readily. Then Blank rushed in and cut down the half dozen men who had been left and took possession. When morning dawned the two barons had simply exchanged castles. And Blank had gained one three times as big as the one he had evacuated. He beat off Dash's attacks, and drew in men from all around and soon made himself the most powerful baron in the entire region."

"Well," went on Father, "that's what I did. Since the X Y Z wanted my road I decided to let them have it, but to make them pay high for it. And I did make them pay. Oh, yes! I made them pay. And I took the money they paid and bought X Y Z stock with it. When the next stockholders' meeting comes around, as it will soon, the X Y Z will find that while they were grabbing my little road I was grabbing their whole big system. And, if Mr. Paul is right in what he tells me, it is the X Y Z road itself and not the individual directors who have bought the A B C. The

I caught my breath. I remembered what Fred had said to me on that horseback ride at the beginning of the whole trouble. Could he be about to—No, it was too preposterous! Still—"Well, what is it?" It seemed to me that Father's voice had grown a little harsh.

"I want to marry your daughter, Josephine," said Fred.

Josephine! I caught my breath again. Josephine! Good gracious! Could Fred have been talking about Josephine all the time when I thought he was talking about me? If so—well! It was a fearful blow to my vanity, all right. And coming right on top of my finding out that Father had taken pretty nearly everybody except me into the confidence. It was heartrending. And when I remembered that Mr. Braxton had gone away without any adequate explanation and that I didn't know who he was, anyhow, it was simply crushing. I didn't wait to hear Father's answer. I didn't wait for anything. I just turned and ran.

Somehow I stumbled down the stairs to the second story and turned along the corridor to my room. I wanted to bury my nose in the pillow and—Oh! Let it go at that.

Then, abruptly, I stopped. A noise, faint but unmistakable, came from somewhere below and stopped me in mid career. I went to the balustrade and looked down.

I saw nobody. But I saw something. A faint yellow glow, that had not been there before, illumined the hall. For a moment I could not make out where it came from. Then I saw that it must be from the doorway that led to the basement stairs.

I was scared, I'll admit, not so much because I ascribed any supernatural powers to those nocturnal visitors as because I didn't know who or what they were. They might be robbers, for all I knew. Nevertheless, I was mad and heartless and reckless and didn't care what happened. So I marched straight down the stairs to the basement door on down into the lower regions.

The cellars were low and vaulted and divided up by big pillars. I rushed along. Pretty soon I saw that the brightest light came from behind an extra big pillar a little way ahead on the right. It was a different sort of light from that in the rest of the house. It had the same whittish, greenish, bluish, glary quality that I had noticed in the ballroom the night before. I recognized it in a moment and knew I was on the track of my ghosts. I poked my head round behind a pillar and looked.

I almost fainted. Right in the middle of a small quadrangular place under the strongest glare of the lights was a cot on which a man lay sleeping. And stealing toward him, dagger in hand, came a woman—a woman dressed in a long flowing gown of white. There was no mistaking her intentions. Murder was written in her very gesture.

I would have given anything to have screamed but I couldn't do it. I couldn't move. Terror paralyzed me. Then beyond the woman I caught sight of Perkins. He was working his head backward and forward just like the old vulture that he was. That broke the spell. With a shriek I rushed forward and flung myself between the murderer and her prey. "Stop! Stop!" I shrieked. "Stop! You devil!"

And then the woman stopped. And I saw that she was Miss Labert. She was apparently quite as much frightened as I had been. She dropped the hand that held the dagger. Then—"Gee," she said, "if it ain't the little Dinsmore kid. What do you know about that?"

I gasped. I was not an expert on murders, but I was certain that this was not at all the sort of remark that a thwarted murderess ought to make. A sickening feeling that I had made some awful mistake swept over me.

Then behind me I heard the cot creak as the sleeping man jumped from it; and before I could turn he caught me in his arms.

"You dear brave girl," he cried, in my ear. "You're the dearest, bravest, loveliest girl I ever saw in all my life."

It was Mr. Braxton's voice. I twisted my head and looked over my shoulder. It was Mr. Braxton who held me.

I suppose I shrieked and pulled back. I know I faced completely around.

But Mr. Braxton did not let me go. Instead he smiled.

"You darling," he said. His lips were very near mine.

I hesitated. Then slowly I swayed forward and—Oh, well. You know! Then I heard a ripple of applause behind me and a voice asked: "Did you get it, Jimmy?" And another voice answered: "You bet I did. It'll be a peachinero, too. She didn't cloak the action a bit!"

I wrenched myself round, horrified, bewildered, amazed—Oh! Anything you like. Two or three men were standing about a black box, on which was mounted a tripod. One of them was turning a crank attached to the box.

I think I understood then. But Mayo didn't wait for the knowledge to permeate. "It's all right, dear," he said. "We're moving-picture people. Perkins let us use the house in making our new play. We were nearly done when you and your sister turned up and we just had to finish it, or lose all that we had done. You see, we had used the locations in earlier scenes and we couldn't possibly duplicate them successfully elsewhere. You'll forgive us, won't you, dear?"

"Then—then—I had grasped the main fact, but I was slow in absorbing the details—then you were only acting in that automobile. You weren't really hurt?"

Mayo smiled. "I was acting, yes," he said. "But I was hurt, too. There wasn't any deception about that part of it. But the doctor strapped me up and I managed to get through the rest of the scenes that night. And tonight there wasn't much to do. I only had to be murdered—"

"Murdered!" I gasped; then I laughed nervously. "Oh, of course I'm a goose," I agreed. "But—but—"

"Come and Shake Hands With You, Son-in-Law to Be."

I glanced around and dropped my voice to a whisper—"in the ballroom last night you—you really kissed her and you—you seemed to like it so and—"

But with a joyous laugh Mayo gathered me into his arms.

It almost seemed as if this was somebody else's cue to butt in. Any way they did it. "Here! Here! Here!" protested a voice.

I looked up and saw Father and Mr. Paul and Josephine and Fred glaring at us with eyes as big as saucers. "Hello, Dad," I said, happily. "Come and shake hands with your son-in-law to-be."

Dad seemed paralyzed. For the first time in my life I had knocked him completely out. His lips moved but he couldn't say a word. He simply gulped.

But Perkins saved the situation. Perkins was still there, though I quite forgot him. Now he sprang forward and shook his skinny fist in Mr. Paul's face.

"Oh, he!" he cried. "You said you couldn't act, did ye no? Ye pair chief Gin ye care to see 'The Murder at the Chateau,' ye'll find out whether I cut act or no. Who's the rule now, I'm askin' you. Who's the rule now?"

Mayo whispered in my ear. "We had to give the old man a part in the play or he wouldn't have let us use the house," he explained. "Mr. Paul seems to have told him once that he couldn't act and he's hated him ever since."

I understood.

Well! That's about all. Dinsmore's Folly is in steady demand now at enormous prices to picture companies who find its varied architecture very valuable. Father is head of the X Y Z system. Jimmy—Jimmy was the cameraman—finished up the picture he had taken of Mayo and me and gave it to us for a wedding present. I guess it's about the only bona fide picture of a really truly unconscious courtship in existence.

(THE END.)

Not When, but How Much?

An extremely successful business man was giving an address on "Commercial Acumen" to a class of students.

The business man, in speaking of his career, mentioned a certain company which had been wound up on account of its shady practices.

"Of course," he said righteously, "as soon as I realized that there were possibilities of dishonest profit being made, I got out of it."

One student rose with an air of interrogation.

"Er—will you finish the sentence?" he asked. "How much did you get out of it?"—Stray Stories.

Esperanto by Radio

A recommendation that transmitting stations broadcast communications in the Esperanto language within the limits of their possibilities was a feature of a meeting at Lausanne, Switzerland, of the International Broadcasting union. A survey showed that 108 stations in Europe, Asia and the United States send out messages in Esperanto. The station at Geneva makes weekly broadcasts in this language.

Sanitary
 In the good old days one could eat anything and everything, without counting calories or vitamins or worrying about germs. But in this age of gang wars and hygiene it is different. The grownups still are inclined to rebel and backslide, but the children take to it naturally. The other day two urchins paused at a hot dog stand and one said: "Gee, let's get a barbecued sandwich!" "No," said the other seriously, "I wouldn't let anyone but a druggist put up a sandwich for me."

World's Oldest House?

An architect's drawing, believed to be by far the oldest in the world, discovered in Mesopotamia, is described by Dr. J. Stur, a Viennese engineer. This four-thousand-year-old equivalent of a blue-print was in fragmentary condition, but three of the pieces fit accurately together, showing part of the ground plan of what must have been a very large house. The walls and doorways for 17 rooms are indicated by accurately and cleanly drawn lines, and cuneiform notes give the dimensions. The largest room was 40 by 46 feet, and the scale of the drawing is 1 to 360.—Science Service.

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming. The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headache, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drug store and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

result is that I shall really own both roads, for I own the X Y Z, and the X Y Z owns the A B C. Haw, haw, haw!" Father chuckled deep and long. Then he went on. "I owe a lot of it to you, Paul; and to you, Fred," he said, "and I want to thank you both. Later, I'll be able to give you a more substantial evidence of my gratitude." Fred got up. I knew he got up, though I could not see him. There was something in his voice that told he was rising. "You can square things with me right now, Mr. Dinsmore," he said. "I've been wanting to ask you something for a long while, and this is my chance."
