DAIRY

TEST DAIRY COWS FOR PRODUCTION

Eliminates Unprofitable Animals From Good Ones.

"The herd improvement test advances the breed in two ways," said H. W. Norton, speaking at Cornell university. "It gets rid of the low-producing, unprofitable cows, and discovers those animals capable of high production, the real seed stock of the breed."

Mr. Norton, who is superintendent of advanced registry for the Holstein-Friesian association, says that the herd improvement test meets the requirements of hundreds of breeders who have not felt warranted in undertaking advanced registry testing. Unlike the advanced registry test, in which the individual cow is the unit, this test includes the entire herd and is designed to furnish the owner a definite knowledge of the production of each individual member of the herd. It began January 1, 1928, and for the first year 269 herds including 6,318 cows representing 36 states were on test.

"The improvement test will also furnish valuable information regarding sires. Improvement of the breed must be effected largely through the sire; and since heavy production is the chief consideration, it follows that the selection of sires having ability to transmit high production is a matter of the utmost importance," said Mr. Norton. "In the past we have selected sires with a long line of high-producing dams, but this is not an absolute guarantee that the sire will transmit heavy producing ability to his daughters. The only real proof that a bull possesses this much desired characteristic is the fact that his daughters are heavy producers. Such bulls are commonly called proven sires. To date, we have few of them. Advanced registry testing, as commonly practiced, does not prove the sire, because only the best daughters are tested."

"Testing all the daughters of a bull is the real check of his ability to transmit the factor for high production, and this will be one of the outstanding features of the herd improvement test. Herds which continue with this test year after year will show the influence of the sire by comparison of the productions of dams and daughters. As a result many valuable sires will be saved for service, and not slaughtered before their real worth is discovered."

Careless Handling of a Bull Always Dangerous

Careless handling of a bull is dangerous. Safety demands that the simple principles of good herdsmanship be used, without fail, every day of the year. First, every bull should be dehorned as a calf. Second, every bull should have a strong ring put in his nose when he becomes a yearling. And whenever it is necessary to handle him, a strong bull staff should be attached to the nose-ring. Third, every bull in service should be confined to his exercising pen. Never under any conditions should anyone "trust" a mature animal. Even the bull with the habit of holding his head near the fence to be petted—the so-called "gentle as a kitten" bull—should never be trusted. When he displays his skill at butting in an attempt to catch and crush a hand or object, it should not be looked upon as mere "playing." Instead it should be looked upon as a warning.

Dairy Facts

Salt should be added to all grain mixtures in amounts of 1 to 2 per cent by weight.

Potatoes may be used with success although a heavy allowance of them to a cow will produce milk of poor flavor.

The farmer who has a dry pasture should not hesitate to cut some green corn or sorghum and throw it over to the milk cows.

After the heifers are safe in calf gradually increase the grain ration up to three months before calving and then feed besides alfalfa hay and silage, six to ten pounds of grain a day until a week before calving.

Any feed which is relished by the cow, such as corn, oats, bran, and linseed oil meal, is palatable. We must cater to the cow's appetite if we are to get most milk out of her.

Some farmers like to milk so well that they keep ten poor cows rather than five good ones.

The dairyman who wants a good milk cow must raise her himself. Good milk cows are not for sale except in case of death or divorce.

Stubble or stalk fields are all right for ordinary cattle, but they are not good enough for the dairy cow. If she uses her energy foraging the fields she does not have much left for milk production.

Pretty Things that are made at Home

THE "PILLOW PET"

HAVE you a "pillow pet" in your home? If not your fancy pillow collection lacks one of the cleverest novelties brought out this season.

Most every woman likes to take some sort of fancywork along when she goes summer vacationing, so that fingers be not idle during leisure hours spent at the beach or on cool shady hotel verandas. A "pillow pet" cushion is delightful "pick up" work—no bother of "stitches to count," just simple quilting according to a well defined stamped pattern for the quilted border. A deft bit of embroidery "dolls up" the cunning little dog or cat which is to be applied on the silken background.

That's why they are called "pillow pets," because to the center of each cushion top either a wee dog or kitten cut out of thin leather or suede is stitched as you see in the picture. So there you have it—a household pet which neither barks, bites nor scratches, while it contributes a charming decorative note in the living room. Materials for these cunning "pillow pets" are obtainable in almost any fancywork department. The work itself is very easy. The padding, which is stamped ready to quilt, is laid on the wrong side of the silk and basted together. The stamped design on the padding is worked with a running stitch with buttonhole twist that matches or contrasts the silk as preferred. The sketch in the lower right corner of this illustration demonstrates the method of handling. The right side of the silk will then show a perfect quilted patterning (See finished cushion above to the left in the picture).

Embroider the little animals cut out of leather, as sketched above to the left of a kitten, embroider the pupils of the eyes in green, outlined in white or black. Make the whiskers black or white.

Before applying the design to the pillow, baste the outline of the animal figure so that the stitches will come through to the silk as a guide for its correct positioning on the pillow top. Place the little cat or dog, as the case may be, over the bastings and apply the design to the pillow with long and short stitch, using black twist. Stuff the appliqued motif with a thin layer of padding before completing the stitching so as to give it a round shapely body. After the quilted silk cover is sewed together insert pillow.

Even the younger generation is apparently developing a vainglorious hat-consciousness. Perhaps it is due to the example set by their mothers and elder sisters, who take such pride in being smartly hatted or perhaps the fact that designers of juvenile millinery are themselves giving such enthusiastic attention to the creating of children's headgear. Be the cause what it may millinery modes for the very young present an unusually interesting array of hats this season.

This season's hats for tots range from the simplest banded straws and felts to cunningly devised models made from fabrics of every sort. Among the straws stressed in the little folks' section crochets play a leading part. Smooth linenlike-straws which are so in favor for grownups are alike popular for juveniles and juniors. As for their elders, this season's straws for the very young are distinguished by their charming col-

right, before sewing on the padded silk. Work eyes, nose and mouth in contrasting colors to give a realistic effect. Stitch the pupil of the little dog's eyes in solid black with lower part outlined in brown, then outline the whole eye in black or white. Embroider a few stitches around ears, legs, tail and body. NUB OF PRUNING OF APPLE TREES

For Growing Fruit Work Best Done in Winter.

Recent remarks made at a horticultural meeting by John Nordine, Lake City, Minn., give the gist of the whole pruning principle in a nutshell. He says:

"In our times we are finding individual planters in the country who have set out what are called commercial orchards. These orchards are not giving the results that they should, and a good many farmers are getting discouraged and giving it up and saying that fruit trees cannot be grown in our state successfully. Others are trying to fertilize their orchards, spraying them, but when it comes to the pruning they are helpless, and they go out and get a man who says he has been pruning some but don't know much about it; and it don't take a man of this kind long to destroy further the fruiting quality of any orchard."

"The pruning of fruit trees consists chiefly of two things: (1) what may be called the mechanical pruning of the framework of the trees or so forming the tree that it may be able to take care of a heavy load of fruit or to withstand a strong wind or carry up well under a heavy snow. (2) The pruning for growing fruit and fruit buds. The mechanical pruning should be done when the trees are leaved or in the first part of June. The pruning for growing fruit should be done when the tree is dormant, and then done only by cutting away small branches of apparently blind wood, and the small blind spurs near the fruit buds, all unnecessary limbs inside the tree that produce only shade and cross the fruit bearing branch, rubbing off both bark and buds. In other words, the tree should be pruned so as to make it easy to spray the tops and let the sunlight in to every part of it. Then you have gone a long way to produce the fruitfulness of a tree."

Bud Moth Damages Fruit as Blossoms Are Open

The chief injury to apples done by the bud moth comes just as the blossoms are unfolding, the caterpillars burrowing into the buds cut the blossoms and leaves at their base. In seasons when the bloom is light and when the conditions are unfavorable for pollination the destruction by the bud moth of blossoms which might produce fruit constitutes a serious menace.

The bud moth caterpillars may also eat into the young apples, especially where a leaf overlaps the fruit, causing the fruit to drop or resulting in deformed apples unfit for the market. Losses as high as 48 per cent were sustained from this cause the past season, while losses of from 25 to 35 per cent were not at all uncommon. It is reported from the Geneva station. Economical control of the bud moth can be obtained by following the routine spray schedule.

Well-Drained Gravelly Loam Will Help Grapes

Grapes do well on a wide range of soils, but they prefer a well-drained gravelly loam. They require good drainage and will suffer far more from wet feet than from lack of a fertile soil. The subsoil should not be so heavy that it will hold the water. For best results it should be light and porous, such as a gravelly loam.

The vines will grow on soils too poor for any other crop, but that does not mean that they thrive best under such conditions. It merely means that they do better than other crops. On very poor soils the vines make such poor growth that they cannot produce good crops and require constant fertilization or the yield drops very greatly.

Peach Aphid Emigrates to Herbaceous Plants

With the exception of the black peach aphid, all the species migrate from the fruit trees in late spring and early summer to various herbaceous plants. They return to the foliage of the trees in autumn. The black peach aphid feeds chiefly on the bark of sprouts and on the smaller branches of peach trees. The plum-thistle aphid feeds on the under surfaces of the leaves and on the green tips of branches. The other species confine their attack to the leaves which frequently are severely curled. Many of the injured leaves may fall from the trees in cases of pronounced infestation.

Fertilizer in Orchard

One's orchard, like all other crops, should have fertilizer to produce a good crop. Peach trees should have little nitrogen and a high per cent of phosphate and potash; for other fruits, such as plums, cherries, apples, and pears, the above is also good. A mixture of one part cottonseed meal, two parts phosphate, and two parts potash is good for the trees mentioned, and the amount can be determined according to age of tree, one pound of fertilizer to each year.

WHICH RULES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Hammers is a physician, a perfectly healthy one, too, who has seldom been forced to take any of the drugs which he carries around with him when he goes out to make his professional calls. Besides being healthy, he looks the part, a statement which cannot truthfully be made of every man who admits that he is well. Hammers believes that fat kills a good many people, or if it does not directly put an end to them, it at least does its best to put an end to their existence. People dig their graves with their teeth, he claims, and they begin to work at it early in life. They let their stomachs rule their heads and shorten their lives by such slavery. Any sensible person, he claims, might easily and comfortably live to be a hundred or more if he would eat little, exercise regularly, and get proper sleep. The main trouble is we eat what we like, and worse than that we eat too much of it even when we know it isn't good for us. Now, I shouldn't eat strawberries, but I do. As a well-known columnist says: "I'd rather have rash than no berries."

It is very strange how we let our brains rule our stomachs. Mrs. Crane knows perfectly well that she is never comfortable after she eats meat, nor are those who are near her happy. Does she refrain from eating meat and confine herself to pulse as did Daniel and his young companions in Babylon? Not she.

"That baked chicken" (or roast turkey or broiled steak, whatever it may be) "looks awfully good," she says, when everyone is being served at dinner. "I don't believe a little piece would hurt me." And having taken a little piece and finding it delicious, she passes her plate for a second helping, and the ordinary consequences follow.

Groves lays on flesh very easily. Raw cabbage and beets would fatten him if he would eat enough of them. He knows very well if he would only use his head that he should eat sparingly if he would keep thin and feel his best, and he usually intends to do the sensible thing. But he has an appetite like a threshing machine. Everything tastes good to him, and the more he eats the better things seem to taste. You know the result. His stomach wins the contest; he overeats and so gets heavier and heavier as the months go on.

We make regulations, and it is not for me to say unwisely, as to what people may drink, and we argue that we are doing humanity service by regulating affairs, and contributing to the happiness and health and the prosperity of the country, and yet I suspect that there is quite as much disease and distress and death resulting from overeating as there is misery resulting from overdrinking or drinking the wrong things. We let our appetites rule.

Wins Fame as Sleuth

Canton, Ohio.—Ora Slater never read Sherlock Holmes nor heard of S. S. Van Dine, but he is a detective of fictional qualities just the same.

Slater has figured prominently in three famous Ohio murder mysteries. He solved the Nesbitt case at Troy a few years ago, and later conducted the investigation of the mysterious shooting of Don Mellett, the Canton publisher.

One of his recent cases was in connection with the death of Margaret Heldman, twenty-year-old wife of a Lorain furnace salesman. Wilbur O. Heldman, her husband, was charged with the murder.

Slater's method of solving homicide mysteries is to trace down every clew, question every possible suspect, search minutely for a loophole—he reads there always is one—and then peer long and patiently through the loophole.

The detective gained a local distinction in Indiana, his native state, handling investigations for the government during the World War. Afterward he became a private detective in Cincinnati.

One morning Mrs. Jake Nesbitt, young Ohio State university graduate, was found beaten to death in her Troy home. Jake helped the officers seek the slayer, at first believed to be a vagrant. Slater was called in. Nesbitt said he slept at home the night before the murder. The lower portion of his pajamas could not be found. That was Slater's loophole.

Jake eventually confessed the murder. He had burned the pajama trousers after killing his wife during a quarrel.

In the Mellett murder Slater faced a blank wall until a mysterious telephone call from Massillon, later traced to Ben Rudner, convicted as the "pay off" man in the plot, provided the loophole.

Slater is a long-distance talker and a story teller of interest. Often he has dismissed a suspect merely by talking him into security.

Motor accidents have increased by 500 per cent in the past ten years.

Tattooing Days Gone Except for Sailors

Norfolk, Va.—The popularity of tattooing is waning. This is the opinion of the needle and ink artists who follow the trade here.

"Tattooing has seen its best days," one veteran holds. "The late czar of Russia was tattooed and there was a time when many society folk took to it, but now our work is confined chiefly to sailors." The veteran needleman believes people get tattooed because "they are still savages underneath, and they like to get themselves up to look pretty."

Would Go "Home"

Stockholm.—After 250 years of exile from their ancestral homeland a Swedish colony which now numbers 800 villagers and farmers of Gammalsvensky in the government of Cherson, southern Russia, has appealed to the Stockholm government to be brought back to Sweden.

Their story is that of a community exiled for centuries yet always dreaming of their homeland, and for generation after generation rigidly maintaining their native schools, language, customs and religion. Their ancestors left Swedish shores about 1670, and for 100 years were settled on the Estonian island of Dagoe.

In 1781 Empress Catherine II of Russia ordered them to the Ukrainian steppes near the falls of the river Dneiper. Cossacks escorted them on that forced march. Their caravans, like the wagon trains that crossed the western plains of America in the days of '49, crawled 1,200 miles to the new home.

The journey took nine months, and more than half the colonists died on the way. In 1792 the group numbered only 200 persons, according to the cherished church record of the Swedish vicar.

When forefathers of the group left Sweden, Dagoe island and all the Baltic territory belonged to Sweden. The liberties they had enjoyed under Swedish rule were taken from them in 1721 when Russia, expanding toward the sea, took possession of Baltic shores. Russian landowners attempted to force the Swedish settlers into a condition of serfdom.

The Swedes sent deputy after deputy to the empress, and at last, in 1780, succeeded in getting an imperial ukase which defended their rights, a precursor of the liberty granted all Russian peasants 80 years later.

But under the new freedom the colony was ordered to the Ukrainian steppes.

The tenacity with which they have clung to Swedish culture, a record piously preserved in parish Bibles, has aroused deep admiration through Sweden and the government is studying plans to help the Gammalsvensky colony realize its ambitions.

Mark Heroine's Trail

Vaucouleurs, France.—The trail of Joan of Arc, Maid of Orleans, is to be marked permanently as France's tribute to her on the five-hundredth anniversary celebration of her exploits. Her progress from the little town of Domremy to the court of the dauphin at Chinon; to Orleans, where she raised the 160-day siege; on to Reims, where she crowned the dauphin, King Charles VII; to St. Denis, close to Paris, and eventually to the stake at Rouen in the north, is to be described serially in stone tablets set up at points of greatest importance in connection with her story. It will take 18 months to put them in place.

In all, the trail will cover more than 3,000 weary miles which the girl soldier, clad in armor and riding a white horse, traveled in less than fourteen months of terrific campaigning. She always pushed forward faster than her seasoned warrior counselors advised, never resting or sparing herself.

This little town, a few miles from peaceful Domremy, where Joan, daughter of a landed peasant family heard the voices which started her on her military career, was the starting point of her journey. The story begins at dawn February 23, 1429, when Joan, disguised as a young merchant and accompanied by six faithful local followers, set out for Chinon and the court of the dauphin, to tell the story of her voices and offer her sword to France.

She rode a white horse, given her by an uncle, and she left her mother and father in angry tears, berating her for her willfulness.

She was a big, healthy girl of eighteen years of age, strong from working in the fields, tending her father's flock and doing the housework of a medieval peasant cottage. Eighteen months later she met her death, almost too feeble to stand up. War, hardships and imprisonment made a white-faced, hollow-eyed shadow of the peasant girl.

Joan raised the siege of Orleans April 29, 1429. She crowned the dauphin king of France in the Reims cathedral July 16 of the same year.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Why Animals Become Independent Early

The reason why humans become independent so much more slowly than animals is because animals are guided by instinct, while humans depend on their ability to learn. The animal is born with the instinct to use its facilities, while the development of the human intelligence is a slower process.

X-Ray Used on Flies to Help Human Race

Washington.—Flies which have long been held in bad esteem as spreaders of disease are about to do their bit in helping the human race. They are being used now for studies of the effect of X-rays on future generations. In flies, the harmful effects of these rays appear in the third and fourth generation, Dr. Mary B. Stark of New York city reported recently. She has exposed flies to X-rays for varying lengths of time.

While the individuals exposed continue to grow and breed, their descendants die off. Doctor Stark believes this is because the reproductive cells of the grandparent or great-grandparent flies were injured by the rays. This injury is inherited and finally causes death. In this same way cancer may be produced in third and fourth generations of flies.

Doctor Stark believes that the experiments on flies will throw some light on this problem in human beings. Her theory is not accepted by all scientists, however. Because the human race breeds slowly, it will be some time before the inherited effects of X-rays can be noticed in man.

Cattle and Airships Have Close Relation

In the construction of two new dirigibles the United States will have to sacrifice 1,500,000 cattle.

The part the cattle take in the construction of the most modern form of transportation through furnishing the "gold-beaters' skin" for the airship forms a new chapter in the romance of industry.

"Gold-beaters' skin" is nothing more or less than a small tough section in the intestine of a steer. It got this name from the Middle Ages, when goldsmiths discovered that by putting gold between two strips of this skin they could hammer it for days, making the finest gold leaf without tearing the skin.

Its great strength, along with its tightness of texture, and the further fact that it permitted less diffusion of gas than any other known substance, recommended it for balloon work. This was tried in England before and during the World war and proved successful.

Give these energetic seeds a chance in your garden

ENERGETIC seeds take no more digging, or raking, or caring for in a garden, than seeds that are not so full of the spirit to live. But think of the difference at harvest time! The energetic seeds withstand disease better — grow better and stronger — produce more vigorously and more abundantly.

The Ferry's Seeds that you can buy today at the "store around the corner" are surprisingly energetic. What is more, they are fresh. What is most important, they are purebred! These Ferry's Seeds came from plants that measured up to the Ferry standard in size, color, flavor, productivity — plants that have handed their inheritance on.

They are pedigreed seeds!—in the strict sense you mean when you say a race-horse is pedigreed. Their parents, grandparents, great grandparents — all were of fine true stock, without an inferior strain.

Doesn't this mean something to your garden? Send for the Ferry's Seed Annual to plan what you want. Remember that Ferry makes thousands of tests a year to determine the trueness of every seed you now can spill into your hand from a bright Ferry packet. Garden facts in the Annual make it far more than a catalog. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Dept. H, Detroit, Michigan.

Give your garden its best possible start with Ferry's purebred Seeds.
