CONTROL MOSAIC BY GOOD ROGUING

Remove Entire Root System of All Diseased Plants.

In the control of mosaic in red and purple raspberries, roguing out diseased plants has been demonstrated to be a successful control measure.

The use of stock practically free from mosaic is essential in setting out new plantings of red or purple raspberries. All wild and cultivated raspberries should be removed within 200 or 300 feet of the new plantings. Success in keeping mosaic under conrol depends upon careful roguing the first and second years.

The roguing must be done so as to prevent the scattering of aphids on the diseased plants, as these tiny insects carry the infection from one plant to another. It is also essential that the entire root system of all diseased plants be dug up and removed from the planting, for all parts of diseased plants harbor the mosaic virus. To be on the safe side, the plants adjacent to a diseased plant should also be removed, for in many cases they have already been infected when the diseased plant is discovered. The first roguing should be done as soon in the spring as the leaf symptoms are definite enough, which is usually in late June. One and twoyear-old plantings should be regued at least two or three times during June, July and August. Planting mosaicfree stock and roguing should insure practically no losses from mosaic for five years under average conditions.

Most standard varieties, such as Cuthbert, Marlboro, June. Ontario and Columbia, are easily rogued, but mosaic spreads rather rapidly in them so that they are scarcely profitable if mosaic is very prevalent. Herbert and St. Regis, on the other band, escape infection quite regularly, while Latham, a new variety, shows considerable resistance to the disease in that the plants are less seriously affected than those of more susceptible

Perfect Apple Variety Not Yet Been Discovered

There is no such thing as a perfect apple variety. All of them have their faults. However, every variety is at its best in certain parts of the country and many of them are quite exacting as to soil requirements. Even the human factor enters in. A certain man may make a great success with a certain variety where another would fail. In this day of specialization, a man must "know his apples." Now for the red Delicious. It is a high-priced apple, a good eating apple, it has been highly advertised and the consuming public is quite familiar with it. It is listed among the apples for commercial planting, it has an at tractive appearance when well grown and some growers have made a success with it. On the other hand, it is often a very shy bearer.

Fruit Trees Respond to

Any Good Fertile Soil

Fruit trees, like other crops, respond to a good fertile soil. The fertility that is applied artificially by most farm folks is largely barnyard manure. In too many cases, in their desire to treat trees properly, the planter is inclined to put fresh manure in the holes, immediately about the roots of the trees. This is about the worst practice that one can follow in the planting of the trees, for it will nearly always result in the death of the trees if any quantity of manure is used in this way at the time of planting. The fertilizer should be cultivated into the ground immediately about the surface of the ground, and not too far away from the tree, but by all means keep it away from the roots at time of plant-

***************** Horticultural Hints

*************** Cherry trees, more than almost any other fruit trees, should be planted early in the spring.

Community efforts in the eradication of orchard pests are as important as any other community movement.

While pruning is in fact one method of thinning it does not entirely take the place of hand thinning. The thinning of fruit as a means of relieving the trees of exhaustion has undoubtedly a direct bearing upon crop production.

Grapes can be pruned any time during the dormant senson except when it is cold enough to freeze the wood, at which time the vines are very brittle and will easily snap off if they are handled.

The grape vine, as commonly grown, needs at least eight feet of space each way. The vines are set commercially eight feet apart in the row and the rows ten feet apart, so that wagons, sprayers and cultivating tools may pass between the rows without damage to the vines.

ington.' As the annual celebration of Moth er's Day-it is May 12 this year-approaches, all Americans should be interested in the story of this mother who gave to the nation one of its greatest men. Washington himself once said that his mother was the most beautiful woman he ever saw. but even more interesting than this natural tribute paid by a son is the testimony contained in a letter written in 1772. Curiously enough this letter was found in a deserted house Lear the York river during the Civil war. It reads as follows: "Wms Burg, ye 7th of Octr. 1722--Madame Ball of ter and Her Sweet Molly have gone Hom Mama thinks Molly the Comliest Maiden She Knows She is about sixteen yrs. old, is taller than Me is verry Sensable, Modest and Loving Her Hair is like unto Flax, Her Eye are the color of Yours and her Cheke are like May Blossoms. I wish You could See Her.

The "sweet Molly" referred to in that letter was Mary Ball, who ou March 6, 1730, became the wife of Augustine Washington, a friend and neighbor of her father's, and it was on February 22, 1732, that she gave birth to the boy who was destined to be the founder of a new nation. In addition to being a woman of great beauty Mary Washington seemed to have been a remarkable woman in many respects, "A silent, serious, woman, she was, self-contained, selfrespecting, and reserved," says an early writer. "During the forty-six years of her widowhood she managed her household and farm without the assistance of any adviser and reared her children to usefulness and honor. and saw them go forth into the world equipped for its work and pain. That they each and all revered her, and sought her council in every emergency is sufficient testimony of her worth and ability. Mrs. Washington's lack of personal ambition and her constitutional reserve were qualities which prevented her from becoming popularly known to the public, even at a time when the people were eager for any opportunity to show her honor But no demonstration was ever made in her behalf and there is but one in stance recorded when she appeared in public with her son"

Another tribute to Mary Washington is contained in the statement of Lawrence Washington, of Chotank, who wrote as follows: - "I was often here (at the home on the Rappahannock) with George-his playmate, schoolmate and young man's companion. Of the mother I was more afraid than of my own parents; she awed me in the midst of her kindness; and even now, when time has whitened my locks and I am the grandfather of a second generation, I could not behold that majestic woman without feelings it is impossible to describe."

"Mother and son were much alike in character, personal appearance and conduct. Both were wanting in hu mor and imagination, and both possessed in an extreme degree conscien tiousness, gentleness and determination," says the writer previously referred to. More recent historians have shown that more than once during Washington's early life there was a clash of these two strong wills, but there was a strong bond of affection between them, nevertheless.

At the outbreak of the Revolution Washington, realizing the dangers which the war would bring to Virginia, tried to induce his mother to move into town from her home on the Rappahannock opposite Fredericksburg. She had previously declined the offer of a home with her daughter. Mrs. Betty Washington Lewis, declaring that she preferred to rule her own home. But at last Washington's insistence prevailed, and in March, 1775. he and his sister moved her, still protesting, into a home in Fredericksburg, which Washington had bought from Michael and Esther Robinson in 1772. It was a part of the original Kenmore estate. Betty Lewis' home. The garden was separated from the Kenmore garden by a fence and gate. Just as it was American women who erected the monument to Mary Washington. so it was a group of American women who have preserved the unpretentious cottage where Mary Washington lived from March, 1775, until August.

Although Mary Washington had strenuously objected to leaving her plantation, she soon grew very fond of her little home in Fredericksburg, and enjoyed being near her daughter and her church at which she was a constant and devoted attendant. It was in this home that she lived, far from the dangers her son was encountering in the fight for liberty, but she was in constant receipt from him of news of that struggle. Here she received the courier to tell her of his splendid victory at Trenton, and it was here that he came to her after the battle of Yorktown, accompanied by French and American officers. It was on this occasion that for the one and only time she shared the honors that had come to her now-famous son. A grand ball was given in his honor in Fredericksburg and the proud mother, leaning on the arm of her son, was the belle of the evening. It was here, too, that Marquis de

LaFayette came with Washington's nephew, Robert Lewis, to pay his respects to the mother of the greatest American. She received the courtly Frenchman in her garden, met all his fine phrases with dignity and gave him her blessing when he bade her good-by. As he left he said to a friend, "I have seen the only Roman matron of my day." It was in this little home, too, that the last scene in the association of the Washington mother and son took place. In the spring of 1789, Charles Thompson, secretary of congress, arrived at Mount Vernon to notify Washington that he had been elected the first President of the new nation. After preparing to accompany Thompson to New York, then the capital of the United States, Washington rode to Fredericksburg to say good-by to his mother. Both knew that this would probably be the last time they would see each other, for Mary Washington was then past eighty years of age and suffering from cancer. After an affectionate greeting between mother and son, so says one account, Washington said, "The people, Madam, have been pleased, with the most flattering unanimity to elect me to the chief magistracy of the United States; but before I can assume the functions of that office I have come to bid you an affectionate farewell. So soon as the public business which must necessarily be encountered in arranging a new government, can be disposed of, I shall hasten to Virginia-" "You will see me no more," she interrupted him, "my great age, and the disease which is rapidly approaching my vitals, warned me that I shall not be long in this world I trust in God. I am somewhat prepared for a better. But go, George, fulfill the high desti nies which Heaven appears to assign you. Go, my son, and may that Heaven's and your Mother's blessing be with you always." She died on August 27, 1789, and was buried in a spot on the Kenmore estate which she herself had selected.

For many years the Mary Washington home belonged to various owners. In 1890 an effort was made to take it down and erect it again at the World's Columbian exposition in Chicago. The protest which this plan aroused resulted in the purchase of the house by the Association for the Preservation of Virginian Antiquities. Since that time it has been in charge of a Fredericksburg branch of the association which has opened it to the public. Last year it was the scene of a special observance of Mother's Day, and future years may see this spot become a national shrine on Mother's Day each year, when all Americans join the women of Virginia in honoring the mother of the first and greatest American.

I can't think how I'd have felt when I looked into Bill's face in the evenin', when the day was done from coats of straight and monotonous if I'd been listenin' to love words from lines to the animated fluttering cape some other man! And I know Bill felt the same way."

"Aunt Dora," burst out Harris Boyd, for God's sake, what are you driving at? One would think-"

"I'm drivin' at this, Harry," she answered him while her trembling hands fumbled in her bosom; "here's the note Leonie left. Read it-and then tell me that you've neglected her until she's fancied all this! Tell me, Harry, that it's all an awful mis-

He read the note, the color ebbing slowly from his face.

"But it's true, Aunt Dora!" he said. Though I had no idea Leona knew! But it's true."

"You mean," and the shadows under Aunt Dora's eyes looked suddenly darker, her features thinner, "you mean you do love the nurse, Harry?" Her voice quavered; the fullness was gone from it.

"Aunt Dora!" the young doctor came and placed his hands on her shoulders. "You don't understand!" She shook him off. "You're not a Boyd! Your mother would've hated to hear you acknowledge a thing like that! She would have loved Leonieif she's as sweet as she looks in her picture! But the nurse-do you s'pose she'd have loved a woman that'd listen to a married man's love makin', Harry? You knew your mother; would

"No," he said. "No Aunt Dora, I'm sure she wouldn't! But times have changed. Now men and women have their friends after marriage-"

"Oh, friends, yes! But sweethearts -no! Did you know, Harry, that the human heart is a queer thing? It's big enough to hold a world full of friends and neighbors and relatives, but you can't find one that you can squeeze two lovers into! Why, you'd never be contented to love this other woman, and yet live with Leonie, Harry. As I said, the Boyds are hotheaded about their love makin'! Come and sit down, Harry, and tell me what it is about this other woman that we cannot find something ten times nicer about Leonie!" So she pleaded his cause of happiness that night as a lawyer might plead at the bar. And the next morning he sent Leona a wire that brought her flying back to her home to him.

"I think," said Aunt Dora, "that I'll go away and leave you two to your honeymoon. I can come back some other time, as your Uncle Bill used to say, two's company-"

"Oh, no, no!" cried Leona. "Don't leave us, Aunt Dora! We've so much to learn yet, and we want to sit at your feet, like the two children that we are, while you teach us a way to solve some of the problems of life! Please don't go-"

"No. Aunt Dora," joined in Harris, "because you're going to teach Leona how to make biscuits and jam, and you've got to remind me every night here before this fire about the things the Boyd men did and didn't! You've got a lot before you, Aunt Dora, a whole winter's job of it, to get us on our feet again-since you've pulled us out of the mire!"

Monte Carlo Suicides Given Prompt Burial

Monte Carlo, in one of the prettiest corners of the Riviera, on the Mediterranean, is perhaps the most widely known gambling resort in the world. But little is known, heard or seen of the many suicides that overflow its hidden and unmarked cemetery. To visitors the world's most (in) famous gambling casino is a gilded palace, but back of all the gilt lies the "city of nameless men." Thousands of men and women who go to Monte Carlo to match their wits and luck against the cards and rolling balls lose everything they have. They choose the great salon of the casino in which to end their lives.

But such an occurrence never stops the games, and funerals are never seen on the streets. Details of Monte Carlo deaths are always suppressed. When a suicide occurs casino guards promptly screen off the body with portable screens, and the games aren't even interrupted. Soon the covered body is taken to the basement, and, if unclaimed by the next morning, it is buried before dawn, without funeral services. Burial is in the casino's hidden cemetery beyond the edges of the town; and no stone marks the grave. So many suicides have occurred since the cemetery was laid out that it is now filled, and a new site must be chosen. Crime is never published in the town newspaper, the Monagasque, and all police, except those on traffic duty, keep out of sight. There are no hospitals, no ambulances and no plume-decorated horses to sadden one's sojourn there.-Adventure Mag-

Handkerchief in History

The handkerchief is one of the refinements of Roman civilization. It came into general use in polite society during the reign of Henry VIII of England. It is probably connected with ecclesiastical costumes and may have been an outgrowth of the maniple, which was originally of linen and worn over the fingers of the left hand and used for the same purpose for which the handkerchief was used to n certain extent in France in the Eight. eenth century. At this period handkerchiefs were richly ornamented. Women adopted the use of colored handkerchiefs as soon as the taking of snuff became an established custom.

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless. Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

"Insult" to Refuse Light

peal court has upheld a man who complained against another for refusing to give him a light on the street. The specific charge was insult and offense. Like most laws, this law against insult and offense has a common-sense background, although it may be abused by frivolous, or childish, or spiteful application. The law is designed primarily to curb those persons who are grossly offensive and rude to their neighbors and so are likely to create breaches of the peace. A comparable law was that on the staute books of some of the states of the United States long before prohibition, which forbade drinking alcoholic liquor on trains. Experience had proved that many times train drinkers became drunk and abusive and a menace to their fellow passengers. The great trouble with such laws as that upheld in Dresden is that they are often wrongly applied. Any man asked for a light late at night by a burly stranger in a deserted street might well think that the old scheme of asking for a light preparatory to pulling a robbery of the wayfarer was about to be tried. Certainly, the average person in the United States looks

Still, a law against insult and offense might be a boon for lightweights in subway crushes or would-be ticket buyers at some New York theaters.

> Fines up to $100 and even imprisonment are the penalties which threaten the Germans who refuse a light to a stranger in the street anxious to ignite his cigarette, cigar or pipe.

This is the great surprise for the German world of smokers provided as the verdict in the case before the Dresden court of ameal.

Herr Krause, hurrying home one night last year through the streets of Dresden, had somewhat brusquely refused the request d a fellow pedes-him to light his cigarette on the glowing end of the cigar Herr Krause was smoking.

The petitioner took Herr Krause's refusal so much to heart that he purstred him and had him arrested by a policeman, who took Herr Krause's address.

The owner of the unlighted cigarette then proceeded to sue Herr Krause before the civic court for insult and offense, which under German law is punishable with heavy fines and even imprisonment. Herr Krause was found guilty of having insulted the would-be-smoker and was sentenced to pay a small fine.

He appealed against this verdict, however, and the Dresden court of appeal absolved him from the fine, but declared at the same time that 'the refusal to oblige a person with a light can constitute an insult."

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

* It was the last of May and along the railroad right of way as I rushed through the prairies, I could see the wild flowers blooming. Civilization has pushed them back to more remote and undisturbed regions or has utterly destroyed them, excepting in these strips of prairie land which the avaricious plow share has as yet left untouched. I wish there were a law that they must be left undisturbed. More and more these natural gardens along railroad tracks are being put into cultivation. Wheat and oats and corn are growing in the rich soil and more's the pity, the flowers are disappearing.

There are wild strawberries in the grass. I can see the white blossoms as we ride by, and fast as we roll along I can see occasionally the glint of the scarlet berries ripening in the sun. I have eaten strawberries at Kenilworth where they grow as big as crab apples, and I have tasted the prize varieties from a dozen sections of the country. There are none so sweet and satisfying as those we used to pick out of the prairie grass as we sought them on our hands and knees on the way from school.

There are great gardens of phlox-Sweet Williams we used to call the flower. I can still see on the teach er's desk in the old district school house the bunches we used to gather and present to her to show our affection or to win her favor. Along the hedge rows wild blackberries are blossoming, white as snow. We gath ered the luscious berries in the summer years ago and mother made them into jam. I can taste it yet.

There are patches of purple spiderwort, and violets and tall, graceful shooting stars rising on their single slender stem. I wonder if down in the marshy places buttercups and lady's slippers are still growing. It was a real occasion when we found a lady's-slipper blooming. We did not know then as I know now that when we picked the flower we wounded the plant to death. I am sure I should have left it untouched much as I wanted to hold the delicate blos som in my hand, had I not been ignorant of the result of my plundering. There are roses on the uplands-fragrant, delicate, not to be compared with any cultivated rose which floral geniuses have developed. Give me the wild rose before any of the rest of them. Some of the flowers I have almost forgotten so long ago it is since I have wandered among them The sight of them brings back almost forgotten memories, however-names of which I have not thought for years, experiences which I but dimly recall, associations which were very close in those days. I am H child again, wandering barefooted through the prairie grass, picking my way carefully lest my feet suffer There are for a time no responsibilities, no duties, only the wild flowers and the song of the meadow lark to enjoy. #### OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipa-tion, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

THE STORY

Hilton Hanby, prosperous New

York merchant, has purchased a country place—the Gray house, near Pine Plains. Miss Selenos, a former tenant of the Gray house, calls at his office and we one him that the house is un-der a curse. Further alarming details are impressed upon Adolf

Smucker, Hanby's secretary, by a man who claims to have been chauffeur for Sir Stanford Seyer irritably.

Again he smote his brow.

When the liveried elevator starter at the Hanby apartment house intercepted Mr. Smucker and desired to know his business, the Weehawken philosopher saw in this precaution only another instance of the tyranny of the rich; and when, after some delay, he was shown into his employer's rooms, he was overripe for speech. The girl who opened the door looked at him coldly as she demanded his name.

"Tell Hanby, Smucker is here!" he said loudly. "A. Smucker!"

"I asked your name, not what you were," she retorted.

"My name is Smucker-Adolf Smucker-and Hanby has to see me at once!"

He was shown into a small room. which led, as investigation proved, to a gallery running along one side of the apartment. Below him was a spacious drawing-room. Through an arched opening Smucker could see a party of diners. Dining, and it was past nine o'clock!

This, then, was what a duplex apartment meant. The Smuckers had never been quite sure. They were certain only that it was a symptom of the criminal extravagance of the untaxed rich, won at the cost of the "Old Smucker here?" Hanby exclaimed. "Are you sure?" He turned to his wife. "Dina, do you hear that? Smucker from the office is here."

"That odious little man! Well, he won't mind waiting until we have finished. You'd better send him a cocktail or something. You can't leave us, just as you are going to spring this great surprise. Hanby turned to one of the servants

"Mary, ask Mr. Smucker to be kind enough to wait, and ask if he'd like a cocktail. See if he will leave a message."

Mr. Smucker looked at the cocktail greedily. Some day pretty girls like this one in neat black and white should bring him cocktails when he thirsted; but they should not sneer at him. If they sneered, they should be lashed. "Mr. Hanby asks you to wait," said Mary Sloan, not softening the blow "He's busy. They're in the middle of dinner."

"At half past nine?" "That's what I said, Mr. Mucker."

"Smucker, Smucker!" "As he won't be through yet awhile, Mr. Smuckersmucker, do you want to send a message?"

"No!" the man roared. "I won't! Absolutely I will not! Tell him and his wife I come on a matter of life and death. Tell him to leave his boon companions for a moment, and he will go back to them a saddened man!" With the possible exception of Adolph Smucker, Hanby had not an enemy in 'e world. His children adored him, and his help remained until removed by marriage or death. Mary hurried back. She was interested in the announcement her employer was about to make. He was

is still a good car

THE Model T Ford led the motor industry for twenty years because of its sturdy worth, reliability and economy. Those same reasons continue to make it a good car.

As a matter of fact, nearly one-fourth of all the automobiles in use today are Model T Fords. Millions of them can be driven two, three and even five more years with reasonable care and proper replacements. Figures show that the average life is seven years.

Don't sacrifice your Model T, therefore, but take it to the Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of putting it in Al shape. A very small expenditure may be the means of giving you thousands of miles of additional

For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. This price includes new bearings, reboring cylinders and any other work necessary. Parts are extra.

Valves can be ground and carbon removed for $3 to $4. The cost of tightening all main bearings is only $6. The labor charge for overhauling the front axle is $4.50 to $5-rear axle assembly, $5.75 to $7.

New universal joint will be installed for a labor charge of $3. Brake shoes relined for $1.50. Rear spring and perches rebushed for $1.75. The cost of overhauling the starting motor is $3. A labor charge of approximately $2.50 covers the overhauling of the generator.

It will pay you, therefore, to see your Ford dealer and have him put your Model T in good running order. By doing so you will protect and maintain the investment you have in your car and get months and years of reliable transportation at a very low cost per mile.
