London Gets Photoradiogram From San Francisco

The transmission of the first commercial photoradiogram from San Francisco to London, utilizing the new transcontinental radio circuit which Mayor Walker of New York opened, was announced by R. C. A. Communications. Inc. The picture, shown above, was posed and developed in the Hollywood studios of Radio Pictures, the motion picture producing organization of R-K-O, rushed by sirplane to San Francisco, and there filed for transmission to London, via New York. This feat marked the first time that a photograph has traversed a distance of approximately 6,000 miles to its destination, in commercial radio transmission. The photograph shows Henry Didot, French consul at Los Angeles, and Henry Bancroft-Livingston. English vice consul of the same city, with Bebe Daniels and Betty Compson grouped around a representation of the northern hemisphere topped by a radio

"Lost: 500 Congressmen"!

The "Congressional Burying Ground", Washington, D. C.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ST: 500 Congressmen! Such is the wording of a headline or a want-ad. which might have appeared in the newspapers throughout the country recently, thereby providing newspaper paragraphers with ample material for one of their well-beloved jests at the expense of our representatives in the national legislature. Although such a statement has nothing to do with the 530 men and women who are now in session at Washington, it is true, nevertheless. Ask An-

Anson Wold is the man who has just seen his great work, "Biographical Directory of the American Congress-1774-1927," go to press. Mr. Wold, who was brought to Washington from Minnesota 29 years ago by Senator Knute Nelson, was for many years a clerk in the census bureau. Four years ago the congressional joint committee on printing, headed by Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, authorized the publication of a new congressional directory, and Mr. Wold. secretary of the committee, was assigned to the task. For the last four years he and his assistant, F. L. Fridley, have been at work on the gigantic task of compiling the biographies of 9,000 men and women who have served in the two houses of our national legislative body. Now their work is done, and within a few weeks libraries throughout the country will receive copies of the work, which libraries say is one of the most used volumes in their collections.

But despite the fact that Mr. Wold and Mr. Fridley have sent out something like 35,000 letters, communicated with persons in nearly every part of the world and toiled unceasingly to make the directory complete in every detail, there are in it 500 biographical "blanks" that they still are trying to fill. The roster of those who served in congress, of course, is complete. But the "blanks" have to do with birthdays, burial places, professions and politics.

Take, for instance, the case of William Wilson. He is listed in the directory thus (and his is the shortest biography in the book) "Wilson, Wil liam, a representative from Pennsylvania; was elected to the Fourteenth and Fifteenth congresses (March 4, 1815-March 3, 1819)." Or this one, "Woodruff, Thomas M., a representative from New York; elected as a Democrat to the Twenty-ninth congress (March 4, 1845-March 3, 1847); engaged in the furniture business in New York city, where he died about 1854 or 1855." Here are some other unsolved mysteries: Alexander Wilson was a representative from Virginia in the Ninth and Tenth congresses but neither the date of his birth or the date of his death is known. For that matter it is not even known where he lived in Virginia. Asariah Boody, a representative from New York, died as recently as 1885, and yet his burial place is unknown. Alfred Moore Gatlin, of North Carolina, served in the Eighteenth congress. Then he moved to Florida. which was then a wilderness, and no further trace of him has ever been found.

As an illustration of the difficulties which the two congressional biographers have experienced, take this case: for two years they searched for a who wrote the "Star-Spangled Ban- the Fortieth congress. In the comner," hoping that she might be related to or know something about two other Keyes who were Maryland representatives in congress. They found her eventually but learned that she knew nothing about either of the two men. Then there is the case of a distinguished Marylander, John Hanson, who was president of the Continental congress in 1781-82, and who is often referred to as "the first President of the United States," since he served as President under the Articles of Confederation. The directory says that Hanson is buried at Oxon Hill in Prince Georges county, Maryland, but Mr. Wold admits that this may be only tradition, since Hanson's grave has never been found. Maryland historians have tried to solve the mystery without success, and a Boy Scout organization has dedicated itself to make a search and help locate the grave.

Not only has the progress on the directory been hampered by the absence of reliable information but by receiving information which turned out to be misinformation. Frequently this was supplied to them by wellmeaning relatives or descendants who had no more authentic data than that offered by family tradition, which is notoriously unreliable. Curiously enough some relatives or descendants refused to supply any information at all, declaring that the congressional relative or ancestor had dishonored the family name. One such case concerned a representative who had withdrawn from congress when his state seceded from the Union at the opening of the Civil war.

Other difficulties are explained in the foreword to the biography by Mr. Wold. Prior to 1809 apparently no effort was made to publish a directory of congress. The earliest known directory is entitled "Places of Abode of the Members of Both Houses of Congress, First Session of the Eleventh Congress." This was a pamphlet of 15 pages, published by R. C. Weightman in 1809, and contains the names and locations of boarding houses, arranged alphabetically, which are followed by names of senators and representatives residing therein.

"Directories, containing added congressional information, compiled and printed under contract by private firms," the foreword continues, "appeared from time to time. Though. still printed by contract, the congressional directory for the first session of the Thirtieth congress, issued in 1848 by J. & G. S. Gideon, assumed an official air by bearing the title-page words 'Compiled and published for the use of Congress by the Postmaster of the House of Representatives.' Similar information was carried on titles up to and including the first session of the Thirty-eighth congress.

"At the beginning of the second session of the Thirty-eighth congress, a joint resolution, approved February 14, 1865, was unanimously adopted, providing for the compilation and publication of the first congressional directory under the supervision of the joint committee on public printing. The committee held numerous sessions, obtained and examined like publications issued in foreign countries, and finally decided upon a work similar in essentials to The House of Commons, published in London since "Biographical sketches of senators and representatives appeared in 1867 in the first edition of the congressiongranddaughter of Francis Scott Key, al directory for the second session of piler's note it is called a 'proof edition,' and has approximately 235 biographies of senators, representatives, and territorial delegates.

"It is referred to as being incomplete, and in 1868 was replaced by a second edition which contained a few more sketches. The directory for the third session, printed in 1869, contains approximately 280 biographies.

"The work of preparing and publishing a biographical directory to include all the preceding congresses was first undertaken by Charles Lanman in 1859. It bears the imposing title, 'Directory of the United States Congress." There have been at least six subsequent editions, which were intended to give up-to-date and authentic biographical data. Since Mr. Lanman's last volume, however, the succeeding compilers appear to have done little more than to add such information as could be obtained from the congressional directories published during each session of congress. It seems that no effort to correct, revise or perfect the work of former compilers was eyer attempted, and thus original errors were perpetuated."

Filling in some of the "blanks" in the new directory would have been easy, though, for the compilers, if all of the dead congressman had been buried in the congressional cemetery established for that purpose in the early days of the Republic. That cemetery is one of the most interesting and historical spots in the city of Washington today. In 1807 Christ Episcopal church in Washington first established this burying ground, and a few years later it was chosen as a place of burial for senators and represenatives who died while in office. Since that time 109 government officials have been buried there and monuments have been erected over a hundred of those graves. In addition 85 cenotaphs have been placed in honor of members of congress who have been buried in other cemeteries.

Up to 1835 practically every member of congress who died in office was buried there. Means of transportation were so limited that few families were able to convey the bodies of their dead from the capital. But as transportation facilities grew better this practice finally ceased. By an act of May 28, 1876, congress abolished the custom of erecting cenotaphs and provided that thereafter monuments should be authorized only when the deceased congressman was actually buried in the cemetery.

The first congressman to be buried was Ezra Darby, of New Jersey, who died January 28, 1808. George Clinton, Vice President of the United States, was first buried there, and years elapsed before his body was taken to his old home in New York. But other notables still sleep there. One of them is Tobias Lear, the faithful private secretary to George Washington. Near by are the graves of Push-Ma-Ta-Ha, the noted Choctaw chief; Scarlet Crow, another famous Indian warrior; William Wirt, an attorney general of the United States, and Abel P. Upshur, a former secretary of state and secretary of the navy. One monument has a particular romantic interest. Beneath it, side by side in a single grave, rest the bodies of Capt. Beverly Kennon and Abel Parker Upshur, victims of an explosion of a gun aboard the American frigate, "Princeton," in 1844. Both were natives of Virginia, and the two men formed a friendship in early youth that lasted until the NNE SCOTT was working at her "yellow sheets that ing when she happened to Miss Waterman, her superior in the stock room, fixed upon her. Miss Waterman had bright black eyes, and at that instant they held something that was so much more noticeable than brightness or lackness that Anne was startled. She thought, "Bunny hates me." Bunny was the name that Miss Waterman went by in the big factory; there was no reason for it other than that Lucia Hooper had once given Anne: "She nibbles-when you aren't looking." It came to Anne that she had caught Miss Waterman nibbling now-nibbling Anne herself.

ANNE

Anne's glance escaped instantly and returned to her work. That morning the superintendent had sent in a command for 200 dozen to fill the big order. The work was going on with a rush, and Anne was checking up as fast as she could with care. A single mistake might entail lots of trouble, even the loss of her job. And she wanted so much to keep her job. The money she earned was more necessary now than ever since her mother had had that illness.

But that look of Bunny's-that nibbling look! "She hates me," thought Anne again. "But why?"

At that instant Roland Wight came into the room. Anne kept her eyes down and pretented not to see him. Yet somehow she knew that he was there, knew, too that he was looking at her, knew that Miss Waterman was looking at him with that curious bright, blackness of her eyes. She could see just how he paused, irresolute, then turned toward Miss Waterman. She could hear them talking in low tones.

"Nine and seventeen-are twentysix," Anne said to her pencil and bent her head lower. But she could not help hearing the tones of the two in the room behind her. All the racket of the factory couldn't drown them.

"They're quarreling," she thought. Eight and nineteen are-"

Miss Waterman was angry. Roland gently pacific. But at last he went out rather suddenly. Anne could hear Miss Waterman come close behind her, breathing hard. She felt uncomfortable, as if she were about to be struck, but she kept on figuring.

"If you make a single mistake," said Miss Waterman, tersely. "I'll-I'll see that you're discharged."

Anne lifted her head. Her gray, still eyes met the bright black ones. She smiled.

"Oh, I shan't make a mistake," she replied. "You know, that's the one thing I'm really sure of-the multiplication table."

Miss Waterman jerked. But she went away silent. As her solid, blocky figure receded Anne looked after her contritely.

"Oh, what made me say that?" she sighed to herself. For Miss Water man was stupid at figures and only held her job by sheer force of will power and experience. Anne had pricked her with a particularly sharp little pin, and fear of the effect she might produce troubled her.

The other person in the stock room had, in her usual way, kept out of all this. Mrs. Keene was middle-aged with a son in college, a fine youngster, a year or so older than Anne. Indeed, Anne thought him one of the nicest, if not quite the nicest, young fellow that she had ever met. And his mother was good to her. Mrs. Keene was one of those calm, sensible little women who go about lighting the way for the ignorant and inexperienced. Anne looked at her wistfully, and as soon as Miss Waterman was out of the room for an instant she ran across to where Mrs. Keene was at work.

"I've done something to offend Bun -Miss Waterman," Anne whispered. "I can't think what it is. I wish I could. Haven't you an idea?"

Mrs. Keene turned and looked into Anne's honest, questioning eyes. She looked deep. But still she did not

"Do you suppose she isn't having good luck with her love affair with Roland Wight?" asked Anne. "Still, I don't see what I've got to do with it if she isn't."

Mrs. Keene smiled and tucked back a loose strand of Anne's hair. "You haven't anything to do with it, I can see that," she replied. Then she returned abruptly to her work as Miss Waterman came trotting in. Anne puzzled about the matter till business drove it out of her head. It was business first every time with At noon as she came out of the door Roland Wight stepped up to her. "Come on, Anne, have lunch with me today at the Rialto, won't you?" he pleaded. Anne looked at him in her direct way. He was rather nice and a subboss, but she had no mind to lunch with him in so public a place as the Rialto, or anywhere else, for that matter. She shook her head, trying to be "No, I'm going home," she said, and sped away. Over her shoulder she could see him drop his head, see also behind, saw him also, When Anne entered the stock room after lunch she was ten minutes late, and breathless. There had been an draw interest.

that Miss Waterman, following close errand to do for her mother and she had lost time on the way.

The instant she saw Miss Waterman's face she knew that something had happened, or was about to happen. In her hand she held Anne's own "yellow sheets," and her hand trembled.

"I can't put up with such work as this any longer," she said, pantingly. "I've passed over your blunders as long as I can, or will. And so I have told Mr. Deavenport. I showed him these figures. And he wants to see you in his private office."

Anne turned white. She glanced at the place where Mrs. Keene ought to be, but Mrs. Keene was absent. She was given to sick headaches, and evidently an attack had come on suddenly and kept her away. Anne felt that she had not a friend to stand by her. "Let me see what's wrong," she pleaded. But Miss Waterman kept the sheets back. It came to Anne like a flash that the figures had been tampered with. Could Miss Waterman have done it? But who else was there who would? She remembered that "nibbling" look in Bunny's eyes, which she had caught that morning, and shiv-"You can go right straight to Mr.

Deavenport," said Miss Waterman. Mr. Deavenport was the "big boss," who had mercy for no one who was careless. Anne felt that it was all up with her. And she had been so proud of her job, so happy to think that she could help out at home with that $10 a week. Her lips quivered. She looked into the bright, blackness of Miss Waterman's eyes and sighed-a beaten, miserable little sigh. Then she turned and went out of the room.

It was not far to Mr. Deavenport's room and she had to pass through the big office to get there. Joe Hutton sprang to open the door for her.

"Good luck!" he whispered. He didn't know what was coming. Anne smiled weakly and went in. She marched straight up to the desk where Mr. Deavenport sat, her eyes steady though her lips were white. Miss Marsh, his private secretary, glanced at her curiously. "Miss Waterman tells me you've been having a little trouble with your figures," Mr. Deavenport said. "I suppose you've done the best you could?" "Yes, sir!" Tears sprang. Anne winked them back. "I'm sorry," she gulped. Mr. Deavenport studied her an instant. "I've been thinking for some time of taking you out of the stock room and putting you in the office out there," he said. "Would you' like it?"

Anne's eyes opened wide. She could only say, though with emphasis:

'Oh, yes, sir!" Mr. Deavenport came as near to smiling as he ever did.

"All right, then. You go to Joe Hutton and tell him I sent you. And tell him also to put you on the pay roll for twenty per." He turned to his desk, apparently not heeding Anne's stammered thanks, But Miss Marsh smiled congratula-

Thickness of Invisible

Metal Film Measured

Films of metal so thin that they are utterly invisible to the human eye have not only been produced, but also measured.

In recent experiments to improve the design of photo-electric cells for television, layers of light-sensitive metal known as rubidium, of various thicknesses, were deposited inside glass tubes. When best results were obtained with one particular film the task remained to measure it.

Ordinary methods were out of the question for the metal particles were beyond the range of the most powerful microscopes. Polarized light, which is ordinary light shot through a grating that changes a "round" beam into a flat one, like toothpaste issuing from a tube, is twisted in passing through the metal rubidium; and the amount of twist depends upon the metal's thickness.

By using polarized light the experimenters found the thickness of their best metal film to be just one atom, or about 1-500,000,000 of an inch.

Little Demand for Sails

Sail lofts are a rapidly vanishing industry. Where a dozen flourished along the Portland (Maine) water front 50 years ago, two or three have hard work today in finding enough to keep them busy. Sails still are in demand for yachts and miscellaneous craft, but nearly everything that floats now has auxiliary power and this greatly cuts down the wear and tear on carvas. Six-masted schooners were the best friends of the men of palm and needle. The sail loft that supplied one or two of the big fellows with suits of canvas was sound financially for some time.

"Cowie," Meet Lois Anne

A little girl while at a neighbor's house saw him petting one of his cows. She wished to pet the cow, too. The man said she might, but as she started to do so the cow backed away in fright. The little girl said: "He won't let me." The farmer replied: 'Oh, when he gets acquainted he will." The little girl walked up to the cow and introduced herself, saying: "Cowie, I'm Lois Anne."

FOR ULTRA MODERN BRIDESMAIDS; BRIMS WIDE, SHEER AND GRACEFUL

WHEN it comes to planning costumes for the bride and her attendants, fashion is especially offering some startling new suggestions for apparelling the bridesmaids. tains. However, to those seeking "something different" fashion this season offers a radical change in the costume silhouette.

Today bridesmaids' frocks, as will be seen by this picture, are apt to register an innovation in "lines." snug-fitting princess bodice effect shown here, with its low positioned soft flares, gives a new interpretation to "what's what" for the ultra modern bridesmaid. Either organdie or chiffon, according to the formality of the occasion, lend themselves admirably to the fashioning of such a gown. Flowers, handmade of the fabric, are artfully tinted and posed at either hip, where the princess bodice joins a skirt of scalloped sections. The deep shoulder-cape collar adds a pictur-

Save Freight Costs

A representative of the Australian dairy industry has been making a tour of the world in the interests of the Australian business men. He is now in this country moving through the West and on his way to Canada. While in England he took the opportunity to confer with English business men about the feasibility of shipping butter to that country minus its water content. This plan, if adopted, will mean that the Australians will save more than $1,000,000 in freight costs during a year. The price of the butter could be lowered and the market would be increased. With the water extracted the butter would be even less apt to acquire bacteria of a harmful nature, he said.

Australia ships 40,000 tons of butter to England and consumes 80,000 tons herself. Butter manufacturing is one of the large industries of the country.

Little Journeys in § Americana

By LESTER B. COLBY

Quantrill, the Guerrilla

WILLIAM C. QUANTRILL, alias Charley Hart, alias Ed Hart, outlaw and guerrilla, appears to have been one of the world's greatest monsters. Some writers have tried to make a hero out of him. But the evidence against him is beyond ques-

Born in Canal Dover, Maryland, in 1837, he started to wander when twenty years old. After a brief visit in Ohio we find him in Mendota, Ill. There he is discovered one day standing over a dead man with a smoking revolver in his hand. He claims the man tried to hold him up. Murder is suspected, but nothing comes of it.

After a brief time around Paola, Kan., he goes West across the plains as muleteer with a wagon train. He signs under the name of Charley Hart, because he has left Paola under suspicion of theft, robbery and other crimes. He has a sensational career in Utah as a gambler-big stakes. A few months later he is in Lawrence,

Here his criminal career gets impetus. The border wars are on. Kansas is a free state; Missouri, slave. Clans arise. Guerrilla warfare commences. Those on the Missouri side are called bushwhackers or jaywalkers. Those on the Kansas side, red legs. The Civil war is not Quantrill, in the beginning, tries to run with both packs. He lures slaves out of Missouri and takes them back to get rewards. He mixes horse stealing and highway robbery with murder, Finally he ends up in jail and the rope is all but around his neck. The charges come from Lawrence, Kan.

He escapes and thrives for a time by betraying his associates; luring them into ambush and death. Civil war comes on. The North outlaws him. He goes to Richmond seeking a colonelcy. But the South refuses to accept him.

Only one course is open to him. He is outlawed by the North so he must fight the North. He gathers together his guerrillas. They wear a semi-uniform; a strange, picturesque guerrilla shirt. Each man carries from two to six revolvers. They steal horses and become the finest band of fighting horsemen in the world! Quantrill has many hates but one bigger than all the rest. It is his hate for Lawrence, Kan., scene of many of his crimes-including murders. He sets out for Lawrence.

The start is made with 294 of his own men. On the way he picks up Holt's Confederate command; 104 more. Fifty men meet him at Grand river. That makes 448. Probably a few stragglers join the enterprise; more than 450 in all.

They ride into Lawrence. Quantrill has made a list of men marked for death. It contains the name of every man against whom he holds a grudge. And he is liberal with his hate. At dawn on August 20, 1863, Quantrill rides into Lawrence. He gives one order. It is "Kill, Kill, Kill,"

Seldom in the history of the world has there been anything so terrible as the Lawrence massacre. Between dawn and nine o'clock more than one hundred fifty men and boys are murdered. Eighty women, wives, at daybreak, are made widows; two hundred fifty children orphaned in four hours. Many homes are burned. Stores and hotels become ashes. Property loss is $2,000,000.

Seeing the Confederacy falling, Quantrill is taken with fear. To surrender is sure death. So he flees to Kentucky with a handful of followers. Lee's surrender finds him a fugitive, always running away from his pursuers.

Raiding and stealing, he is living off of Kentucky. Finally the son of a southern family, Capt. Edwin Terrill, only nineteen years old, organizes a company of guerrillas-to fight as he fights-and starts after him. They strike him near Bloomsfield, Ky.

The battle is fast, furious, decisive. Quantrill falls with a bullet through his back and his trigger finger shot off. He is paralyzed, for the bullet has hit his spine. That is on May 10, 1865. He dies on June 6, in the Mil-Itary Prison, hospital, Louisville.

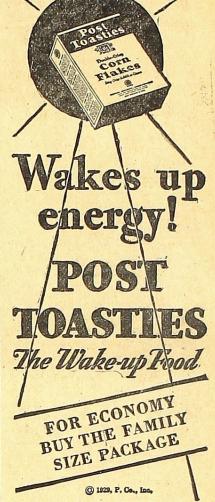

Burial is made in an unmarked grave. Twenty-three years later, in 1888, a historian comes, seeking the spot where Quantrill lies. An attache takes him to a door and points his finger, saying:

"It's out there-where we throw the

College Bills in 1835

Old documents brought to light at Brunswick, Maine, reveal extraordinary economic changes in undergraduate life at Bowdoin college. In 1835 the tuition for an entire year was placed at $24. A year's room rent cost only $10, board in the commons amounted to $40 a year, incidental charges on college bills totaled another $10, Miscellaneous small expenses incurred, such as those for wood, lights, washing, stationery, use of books and furniture, was rated at $30. The entire expense list for a year at Bowdoin came to less than $200

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipa-tion will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello. Illinois, for free trial bottle.

What the Gray House Hid

The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

Hilton Hanby has purchased a country place—the Gray house, near Pine Plains. Miss Selenos. a former tenant, warns him that a former tenant, warns him that the house is under a curse. Further alarming details are impressed upon Adolf Smucker. Hanby's secretary, by a man who claims to have been chauffeur for Sir Stanford Seymour, former occupant of the place. The Hanby's laugh off the warnings. But they are shocked when they hear that the caretaker of the Gray house, a man named Kerr, has been mysteriously murdered Hanby consults his friend Pel-ham. The family starts for the new home. Appleton, a clerk of Douglas and Smith, the agents from whom Hanby bought the Gray house, explains to Pelham, that a dangerous pond near the house, in which several children have been drowned, has since been filled in, but he urges Pel-ham to dissuade Hanby from occupying the Gray house. Hanby and Junior learn that the caretaker was known to the police as "Red Chapin" and had a bad record. Hanby considers asking Leslie Barron, long an admirer of Celia, to join the house party. Mrs. Hanby declares she likes the house, Pelham becomes a mem-oer of the household, with the official title of "house detective." Over the telephone Hanby warned by a woman not to subject his family to the dangers of the Gray house. Leslie Barron arrives making four able-bodied members of the Hanby house-

CHAPTER V

During the weeks before the Hanbys could occupy the Gray house there were no more unpleasant messages or telephonic communications to disturb them. Only one person had interested himself sufficiently to call up Hanby at his office.

The voice proclaimed itself as beonging to a name so indistinctly enunciated that Hanby was not sure whether it was Bayles, Vales, Bailey. or Valley. When he tried to make sure which, the voice replied with no clarifying effect. Hanby thought be might get it later in the conversation. "I am calling you up," said the stranger, "to congratulate you on your purchase of the Gray house. You may recall that we met some time ago at the Metropolitan club."

Hanby remembered lunching at this distinguished club and being introduced to several influential men.

"Thank you," he said cordially You know the house?"

"Very well. I looked over it re cently with the intention of purchas ing it, but the accommodation was in sufficient. As you perhaps know, I bought a larger place at Westbury

Assuredly this was a Metropolitan club member! Thirty rooms were not enough for him. "I want to ask you a special favor."

the voice went on, "I am deeply interested in ornithology. I have even contributed to the literature of the subject. One of the reasons why I considered the Gray house was that it offers a natural sanctuary for birds. There was a lake there, which was filled in not long ago, and is now covered with dense creepers and flowering shrubs. Innumerable birds take shelter there-little birds, I mean-immune from their winged enemies and from man. I beg of you to preserve this retreat inviolate. Our rarer birds are dying out in an alarming fashion."

"What exactly do you want me to do?" Hanby asked. "I want you to do nothing. Leave the place to the songsters. A bird sanctuary is not unsightly. To me it is beautiful. What, after all, are five acres out of two hundred? You will be rewarded by seeing some of our most exquisite song birds." The unknown ornithologist reeled off a list of names that made his hearer dizzy Purple finch, vesper sparrow, song sparrow, nuthatch, chickadee, ovenbird, junco, snowflake, phoebe, bobolink, indigo bunting, rose-breasted grosbeak, kinglet, wren and others."

"It's a fine idea," said Mr. Hanby warmly, "I'm glad you told me. was just going to have the place cleared out, because I thought it was useless. I love birds myself, and I'm all for preserving them."

"I was told that you were a high type of citizen, Mr. Hanby," the voice said gratefully. "I hope to do myself the honor of calling upon you soon.

Good-by !" "Now, who the devil was it?" Han by asked himself.

He spoke of the bird sanctuary at dinner. His family was enthusiastic "It's a beautiful idea," said Dina "I was going to put a sunken rose garden there, but we have heaps of other places." "Why do birds go there?" Tim Hanby asked.

"Because they get food and water there." His father had refreshed his memory on the subject. "There's a spring that keeps the shrubs and bushes alive and flourishing. Blackberries and other wild fruits and ber-des grow there in profusion." "Did you say that the man's name was Bayles?" Dina asked,

"Or Bayliss, or Bailey-something | ships bim. He has driven her abroad like that. He seemed to think that I ought to remember him. He's going to call on us. He's probably a multi millionaire. Tim, I'm going to put you on your honor not to sit by that sanctuary and snipe those trusting warblers and orioles."

Tim, Hanby's second son, had a shotgun and a small rifle, and a passion for using them. A struggle went on in him.

"I promise," he said.

Tim's parents knew that, mischievous as the boy was, he would keep his word. He solaced himself with the thought that there were many rabbits to be had, not to men tion crows, hawks, and bats,

"We are to regard ourselves as guardians of the birds who trust us. I look to the house detective to enforce these rules."

"Aye, aye, chief!" said Bill Pel-

"I like the idea of a house being a sanctuary," Hanby went on, "Once within its walls, and outside worries may not introduce. The Gray house sanctuary-a place sacred to happiness! Happiness is not a vice, as they used to regard it when my grandparents were young. It's a sacred "Wait till we get up there, mes enfants, and I'll undertake, old, decrepit, and pollyannish though I may be, to beat you at almost every sport there is-ten nis, golf, swimming, and equitation.' "When were you on a horse?" Junior demanded.

Young Hanby had a wholesome re spect for his father as an opponent at tennis or golf, but he had never imagined him as setting out to witch the world with noble horsemanship.

"Know, my son," replied Hanby That, like all great Americans, I was reared on a farm. Your grandfa ther's homestead bordered the beauti ful stream after which I am named. If there are any of the old-timers left in that district, ask them what sort of a seat I had on horseback, and you will find that I rode in many a pony race ere I was. Tim's age."

"The next thing to hear is that mother rode over the jumps at the Garden show," said Junior.

"Your mother rode discreetly on a side saddle years ago in Cleveland.' said Dina; "and she is going to do it

"Junior," said Bill Pelham, "never think you can put over anything on those parents of yours. It can't be done. It is my turn to state that in my days of affluence I kept a saddle horse at Durland's."

With these kind but firm words the juvenile members of the Hanby clan relapsed into sulky silence, convinced against their will that, after all, they were not the absolute It.

"I wish my family was like this," remarked Leslie Barron. "We do nothing but quarrel at every meal. That's the main reason I'm going back to New Haven. I believe happiness is catching. I feel a different being

When built, at the end of the Eighteenth century, the Gray house had been a square mansion of stone in twenty acres of meadow land inclosed with a five-foot wall. Succeeding ten ants had enlarged it to its present size, and had acquired two hundred acres more of meadow and woodland lvy, Virginia creeper, wistaria, and trumpet vine fought for its walls giving it a softness of outline of which its builder could not have dreamed.

Very strongly built, its exterior was in perfect condition. War had passed it by, and time had treated it gently Before the Hanbys moved into it, a careful renovation of the interior had given it a new and dignified beauty The grounds had been molded to the new owner's desires. The Hanbys had moved from a duplex apartment into a satisfying home.

Dina breathed a sigh of content. "I have always wanted just such a place as this," she said, squeezing her husband's hand.

"You never told me so," he replied reproachfully.

"I thought it was the unattainable said Dina. "Let's go through every single room together. It's a home to our children, and Celia's children, and the children of Celia's children. It's adorable! I didn't know the hall was as big as this," she added, pausing it a lofty apartment thirty feet long and nearly as wide. "This wasn't accord ing to the plans, surely?"

"I had it altered," Hanby told her 'Incidentally, I had to reduce ou thirty rooms to twenty-eight. Isn't this a whale of a place for dances? Eagerly be pointed out the great open fireplace. "The flue goes right of through the center of the house That's a valuable feature. No hear is lost, as it would be if the shaft were on the outside."

Dina moved toward it. Over the green marble mantelpiece was some thing carved in old-English letters:

"THE SANCTUARY CLUB "Rules

"No member shall do or say any thing of which another member dis approves.

"No member shall disapprove of what any other member says or does,'

"Gets 'em coming and going!" laughed Hanby. "Great idea, isn't it? Now for the billiard room. That's for Bill's special benefit. He can trim any amateur that holds a cue."

Dina looked from her own windows down on the tangled thatch of bush bramble, and flower that was sacred to the birds.

"There's a scarlet tanager," she "Look, Hil-the beautiful cried. thing!"

From another window the glittering lake could be seen. As she looked. Celia, Les, and Junior, in bathing kit, raced toward it. Tim was else where, bent on slaying rabbits. There was not a hint in the whole place of the tragedies which had happened within its bounds. Summer bragged on every tree.

The first dinner was one of those happy functions at which every one talks vivaciously and no one troubles to listen. Exclamation points ended every sentence. Les smiled openly and the house detective was off duty

"My job's a sinecure," said Bill Pel ham. "I really had no right to take it, after accepting the honor of being hoe man in chief to Dina."

"Your work begins tomorrow," Mrs Hanby told him, "I want you to survey a place for a sunken rose gar den."

"I'll set the alarm for daybreak," be said.

He was up very early next morning Only Tim, rifle in hand, equaled him Tim was after the early rabbit and the unheeding squirrel. Pelham had decided on a location for the rose garden when Celia stopped before

"To labor that we love we rise betimes, and go to it with delight,' he quoted. Celia sat down on a grassy bank.

Sun Long Worshiped in Egypt and India

Since nothing was known of the rotation of the earth in the days of long ago, one can easily imagine how very real yet mysterious the movement of the sun must have seemed and how naturally it was an object of wonder and reverence. The sun's daily journey, its contest with the darkness and its final victory at the dawn of the new day are ideas which have led to endless stories.

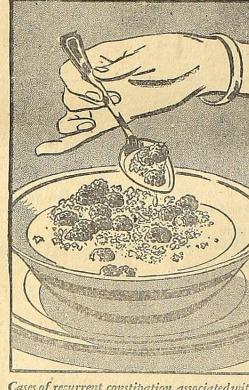

Ra, the great sun god of the Egyptians, was thought to travel in a ship across the waters of the sky by day and return during the night through the kingdom of the dead. This god was always represented either as a hawk or as a man with a hawk's head in accordance with the belief that the hawk always flies toward the sun.

In India the sun was worshiped a the god Agni, who rode in a shining chariot drawn by blond-red horses. It ancient Hindu art this golden-haires god was portrayed as having a double face, seven tongues and seven arms The number seven was held sacred by the Hindus and was thus employed to symbolize the numerous and varied duties performed by Agni.

Cases of recurrent constipation, associated with too little bulk in the diet, should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal, consult a competent physician at once and follow bis advice.

-because it's good to eat as well as effective

it's so downright good-Post's Bran Flakes with other parts of wheat. With foamy milk or cream, berries or fruit, the crumbly, flavory flakes are delicious. And there's the double satisfaction of knowing that each appetizing mouthful is giving you the bulk to help combat constipation.

Probably this appetite-tempting goodness is one reason why millions prefer Post's Bran Flakes. You can enjoy it every day-and forget it's so good for you! Try it tomorrow morning and right along for the next two weeks. Find out for yourself how good it is to eat-how good it makes you feel. The passing of winter recalls an institution that flourished in the Middle west, as it had in earlier days farther east—the old-fashioned singing school says the Omaha World-Herald. It ran its course in the earlier '80s, and was at its best in the '70s. Little probably added considerably to the total spent upon roofs.

The passing of winter recalls an institution that flourished in the Middle West, as it had in earlier days farther east—the old-fashioned singing school says the Omaha World-Herald. It ran its course in the earlier '80s, and was at its best in the '70s. Little is ever heard of this pleasant educational feature. It flourished mostly in small towns and rural districts, ending with an entertainment at the schoolhouse or a town hall, where the singing teacher exhibited his wares in the shape of bass, tenor, alto and soprano voices that had been trained with the aid of the old-time tuning fork,

Printing Plants

The tremendous amount of reading matter that is consumed annually by the United States is shown in the report of the biennial census conducted by the Department of Commerce in 1927, which shows that the output of the various publishing plants of the United States represented a total value of $2,507,425,913, an increase over 1925 of 10.5 per cent.

The figures show a total of 22,542 establishments engaged in printing of all kinds, including job printing, and a total pay roll, exclusive of salaried employees, of $473,221,233, divided among 261,671 employees.

Newspapers and periodicals to the total of 10.973 were published, representing an increase of 3.3 per cent

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

Within Arm's Reach

In the most modern homes you will find a telephone conveniently near you wherever you may be. The old time reception hall telephone is retained, but, in addition, ex= tension telephones are placed in the bedroom, library, guestroom, kitchen and basement, and even the bathroom.

A telephone makes any room more livable. You may use it not only to talk to near neighbors and distant friends, but the installation can be made so that it will be possible to telephone from one room to another within your home. Extension telephones are inexpensive conveniences which are becoming more and more popular. There are portable telephones, too, that can be moved from room to room. We will be glad to have a representative explain to you just how these modern telephone facilities can be applied to your own home, at moderate cost. Call the Telephone Manager.
