Reports from all of the towns entered, almost 30, show that hot battles are in progress to see who shall be their local queen. And as the closing date, August 15, approaches, votes are coming in heavier in support of the various favorites, not only in Tawas City, but all along the eastern coastline of the state.

"IN OLD ARIZONA" IS PIONEER OF TALKING WESTERN PICTURES

Seems as if about everybody and his neighbor are going to see and hear "In Old Arizona," the widely heralded Fox Film which comes to the State Theatre next Thursday and Friday.

The entire cast, numbering more than a score of the leading players in filmdom, and headed by Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Burgess and Warner Baxter, is seen and heard in the picture, a romantic and thrilling story of the old southwest in the days before standardization had erased much of its glamour and color.

$20,000 RAISED FOR MEMORIAL TO LUMBERJACK

The proposed memorial to the lumberjack and the lumbering industry of northern Michigan is now assured. Twenty thousand dollars have already been donated by lumbermen or their families for the memorial which will be placed on the banks of the AuSable along the Thompson trail.

A sculptor will be at once commissioned to produce a figure in bronze to perpetuate to posterity the memory of the colorful industry and men who dominated northern Michigan for 50 years.

WEIGHT AND GAS TAX GREATER THIS YEAR

With the highway construction season at its peak, Michigan now has more improved roads under construction than in any previous year, according to figures issued by the state highway department.

A preliminary report from the office of Secretary of State John S. Haggerty shows that weight and gas tax collections for the year will far exceed those of last year, but with the highway building program now under way, all available money will be needed, especially in view of the fact that the highway department overdraw its maintenance account $1,500,000 last year.

The gas and weight tax collections for the first six months of the present year will be totaled shortly, but a large increase over last year is assured. For example, the gas tax collections in May alone ran one-third more than in May a year ago, and early collections for June indicate a corresponding increase that month.

Grover C. Dillman, state highway commissioner, announces that there are now 753 miles of surface road under construction and 148 miles of grading which will not be paved until next year. In addition, there are 66 bridges and grade separations under construction, the largest number of any previous year.

Of the different types of pavement being laid, concrete leads all with 505 miles. There are 25 miles of concrete pavement being widened, 163 miles of gravel under construction, 40 miles of asphalt on a gravel base, six miles of asphalt on a concrete base and six miles of water bound macadam.

MT. PLEASANT OIL WELL PROSPECTS ARE GOOD

The prediction that the Mt. Pleasant oil field of Central Michigan will eventually have as great a potential production as the Muskegon field, or about 75,000 barrels a day, is made in an article published in the "Michigan Manufacturer and Financial Record," surveying the development of the Wolverine state's oil resources.

"Prospects at Mt. Pleasant are considered better for longer lived wells, because of the greater thickness of sand and the greater depths at which they have been encountered in the same Dundee formation," the article stated. "Quality and gravity of the Dundee crude at Mt. Pleasant also is higher than at Muskegon," it adds.

TOURNAMENT WILL BE HELD BY GOLF CLUB

Frank Brown, manager of the Tawas Golf Club, has arranged a program for local golfers which will be of interest to all. A committee of businessmen, namely, Rev. Brogger, Hugo Keiser, Nathan Barkman, Roul LaBerge, Grant Shattuck and Dr. Klump will with the officials of the club, handle the details. Standard golf rules, obtainable at the course, will govern and it is the committee's hope that everyone will grasp this opportunity to officially establish a low score. Suitable prizes will go to the winners, these to be announced later. Handicaps will be in order so that everyone can be eligible to winning a prize. The eight low scores officially designated by the committee will represent Tawas in a bi-county contest with West Branch in September.

The committee has decided that in order to qualify it will be necessary to play 27 holes by Saturday August 17th, and the score cards be handed to Mr. Brown as soon as possible before that date. The Tawas Herald will keep the public posted on the progress of this new venture.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS

Community Vacation Bible schools are proving very popular in Isoco county this summer. Four successful schools were held during July—at Long Lake, Tawas City, and two at East Tawas. A similar school is now in session at Autable.

Under the auspices of the Isoco County Council of Religious Education the following schools will be held during August—Alabaster, August 12 to 16, inclusive, sessions from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m.; Hale, August 14 to 21, sessions from 9:00 to 11:00 a. m.; Hemlock Road, August 19 to 23, sessions, 2:00 to 4:00 p. m.

The curriculum includes worship services, music, Bible study and handicraft. Some particularly fine handwork is done by the pupils. The making of bird houses interests the boys, and the girls enjoy making the artistic futuristic vases. Scrap books, posters, etc. keep the younger children happily busy. There is no age limit for pupils, except that none younger than four years are eligible. Children are always enthusiastic over Bible school and where the parents also cooperate the project is sure to be a decided success.

"KID GLOVES" A FINE UNDERWORLD PICTURE

"Kid Gloves" Warner Bros. latest Vitaphone talking picture comes to the State Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday. The story is a hard-fisted, crackling underworld melodrama with love playing second fiddle but getting in his pennyworth for all that.

Conrad Nagel gives another of his virile performances as "Kid Gloves" Smith, a hijacker and gang leader. Lois Wilson is cast as a society girl, who, by a slight indiscretion finds herself in the whirlwind midst of a gun battle. It is through this mishap that fortune puts her in the way of Kid Gloves—and that the fortunes of both are altered.

The cast includes Edward Earle, Edna Murphy, Maude Turner Gordon, Richard Cramer, Tommy Dugan and John Davidson. Fred Myton wrote the piece which was scenarized by Robert Lord. Ray Enright directed.

Vitaphone is splendidly evident in rip-roaring accompaniment, in sounds raucous and otherwise, and at high points of the action, voices of the players. One of the best melodramas of the year is "Kid Gloves."

The Outpost of the Lost

Rescue of the Survivors

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON AUGUST 26, 1881, a little group of white men and two Eskimos stood on the shore of an ice-locked bay fifteen hundred miles north of the Arctic circle and watched a little steamer push its way cautiously through a "lead," a dark streak of open water which ran irregularly across the surface of the frozen sea. The steamer was the "Proteus," which had been held in the ice there for six days while Captain Pike waited in vain for a "lead" to cleave a path through the ice of Lady Franklin bay so that he could start south towards civilization.

The men who stood watching the ship until it disappeared from sight were members of the party officially known as the Lady Franklin Bay Expeditionary Force, which had been sent out by the United States government in the interests of science. But it was more commonly known as the Greely Expedition, in honor of its commander, First Lieut. Adolphus W. Greely, of the Fifth cavalry of the United States regular army. His subordinates were Second Lieutenants Frederic F. Kisingbury, of the Eleventh Infantry, and James B. Lockwood, of the Twenty-third Infantry. These with Octave Pavy, assistant army surgeon, eight sergeants, two corporals and nine privates, most of whom had lately been serving in the Indian war on the western frontier, and two dog-drivers, Jens Edward and Frederik Thorley Christiansen, comprised the personnel of the party.

The departure of the "Proteus" marked the beginning of what has been aptly called "one of the supreme adventure stories of the world," a story of almost unbelievable human grit and endurance which forms one of the brightest pages in the annals of the American army. For two years this party was as much lost from contact with their fellow men as if they had been on another planet, and when finally the third attempt to rescue Greely succeeded, of the original twenty-five there were just seven left alive and one of these died within twenty-four hours. The other eighteen had perished of starvation or accident after a series of adventures marked by incredible suffering and incredible heroism.

The official records of the Greely expedition were made public soon after Commander W. S. Schley (Admiral Schley, of Spanish-American war fame) and brought its survivors back to the United States on the "Thetis," but it was not until nearly half a century later that the heroic human side of the story became known. For more than forty-five years the diary of Sergeant David L. Brainard, one of the seven survivors, lay unused in an old trunk. Recently it was brought to light and under the title of "The Outpost of the Lost" it was published by the Bobbs-Merrill company. Today there are but two survivors of the Lady Franklin Bay Expeditionary Force. They are Maj. Gen. A. W. Greely, retired, the commander of the ill-fated expedition, and the man who served as a sergeant under him, now Brig. Gen. David L. Brainard, retired. It is therefore especially appropriate that his old commander, who once called Brainard "the most remarkable of a number of remarkable men of that expedition," should write in the book a "salutation" to remind himself how "together with our comrades we faced for nine months the prospect of death day by day and were harassed by the sight of our associates perishing of starvation or from vicissitudes in the polar field."

According to the plans for the expedition, it was to establish a station in the northern part of Grant or Grinnell Land to study the meteorology of the polar regions. Such a station was established, named Fort Conger and then the "Proteus" which had brought them, sailed away. The "Proteus" was to return the next year, if possible, to carry them away. If not, another relief expedition would be sent for them in August, 1883. In case it should fail, Greely's orders were to leave Fort Conger not later than September 1, 1883 and "retreat southward by boat until the relieving vessel is met or Little island is reached," or until a sledge party from the Little island base was met.

As a matter of fact the "Proteus" failed to reach them in August, 1882. But, says the foreword to the book, "The first year had not passed disagreeably, and it is doubtful if anyone regretted the experience, future uncertainty thrown into the bargain. The entire party had had the distinction of spending a winter farther north than any Arctic explorers had ever wintered, with the exception of an English outfit that had wintered on shipboard. Moreover two of their number (Lieutenant Lockwood and Sergeant Brainard on May 13, 1882) had set a new Farthest North record in the centuries-old race to the pole.

"That first winter there was weather in which Medford rum froze solid and the kerosene oil had to be thawed out before the lamps could be lighted. . . . At first there had been plenty to do, and the work was intelligently organized by the commanding officer and tackled with zeal by the men. . . . But in a few weeks cold and darkness put an end to practically all outside work except the instrument tending near the station. The monotony of the Arctic night produces strange effects on white men. They become melancholy, sleepless and very irritable. . . . Every diversion twenty-five minds could think of was tried out and dropped. 'Checkers are all the rage now,' wrote Sergeant Brainard, the faithful diarist. 'But nothing lasts like long, loud arguments. Today the subject was the relative merits of the fire departments of Chicago and New York.'

However, "the second winter was harder to bear than the first," and "on June 17, 1883, Sergeant Brainard wrote that although 'it is a few weeks too early for a relief ship, we cannot keep our eyes from wandering hopelessly to the south.'" But again they were disappointed and they began the tragic retreat related by Brainard.

On August 9, 1883, they set out in small boats through a "lead" which had finally formed in the ice after they had waited for it for several days. Their course was through Kennedy channel, which was filled with grinding floes of ice upon which Greely's force camped when there was no open water through which to push the boats. Whenever they could use the boats they hugged the coast of Grinnell Land through Kane sea. Early in September they were forced to abandon their boats and for thirty-four days they were adrift on floating ice. Finally they managed to reach Smith sound and landed south of Cape Sabine, north of and opposite Littleton island, which two hundred and fifty miles away. It was near here that the first year relief ship had been forced to turn back and far south of Cape Sabine, the second year rescue ship had been crushed in the ice and all provisions lost.

The record of their stay at Cape Sabine is one long story of terrible suffering. Here for eighteen months they lived on two months' rations. The simple record of Sergeant Brainard's diary reveals the horrors of those days as can no extended description. On October 2 he writes:

I took an inventory of the commissary stores last evening and found only 35 days full rations of bread and meat remained. These rations can be extended to 60 days, if we subject ourselves to a greatly reduced diet, but the suffering will be extreme in this low temperature where a man requires from two to three times the normal diet. Also, we have some very hard labor ahead of us incident to the building of winter quarters.

October 28:
What are we to do? As far as I can see, there is nothing ahead of us except starvation. Every hope of rescue this fall has failed us. How can we hope for anything now from a relief expedition? The civilized world has forgotten us in our hour of need.

March 4, 1884:
Lieut. Greely reduced the bread issue to eight ounces per man.

Occasionally members of the party were able to shoot a fox to supplement their rations and Sergeant Brainard rigged up a device for catching shrimps. But as the weary weeks passed the inadequate food, severe cold and the conditions under which they lived took their toll. One by one eighteen of the members of the party including Lieutenants Kisingbury and Lockwood died.

On the evening of June 22, 1884, Sergeant Brainard lay in the little fly tent which had blown down upon him and his six comrades. Beside them lay the dead body of another. But they were too weak to move it or even try to raise the pole of the tent. Suddenly a voice called out "Greely, are you there?" Brainard raised himself in his sleeping bag. He knew that voice! It was the voice of Norman, first officer of the "Proteus" in 1881.

"It's Norman!" he shouted in a weak voice. He crawled from beneath the tent and Norman thrust a hand-tack in his hand. A moment later Lieutenant Colwell came running over the hill. Brainard was sitting on the ground gnawing at the hardtack, but as he saw an officer approaching, the old habits of the regular army sergeant asserted itself. He tottered to his feet and attempted to salute! But Colwell clasped his hand and they went together into the tent, there to rouse the dazed Greely and to tell him that the ship "Thetis" had arrived with relief at last.

LIME-SULPHUR IS USEFUL ON FUNGI

Very Effective if Applied Early in September.

Sooty blotch, or sooty fungus, and Brook's spot are the only obstacles that now stand between the fruit grower and a crop of clean, perfect apples, provided the six summer sprays recommended by the New Jersey Agricultural college have been applied, says A. F. Mason, extension specialist in fruit growing.

Sooty fungus is the black, unsightly, web-like blotch which appears late in the fall and sometimes gets so bad that the whole apple is covered. It occurs very generally in orchards situated on low ground, or in foggy localities. If the fall weather is rainy, it is frequently abundant in orchards on high ground. Control measures are very simple. Concentrated lime-sulphur, diluted four quarts to fifty gallons of water, applied in early September is very effective. Dry-mix, sulphur-lime or self-boiled lime-sulphur may be substituted for the commercial concentrated lime-sulphur wherever there is danger of russetting the fruit or burning the foliage with the latter material.

Brook's spot is the small, greenish-brown spot with irregular edges which commonly appears around the blossom end of some varieties, notably Grimes, Stayman and Black Twig. This fungus does not attack apples until they are nearly mature. During the past few years it has been prevalent in many orchards, causing heavy loss. Where the disease has been severe in previous years, it may be necessary to make one to three additional applications of concentrated lime-sulphur at ten-day intervals between the sixth and seventh applications of the regular spray schedule, in order to keep the fruit clean.

Fredonia Gooseberry Is Vigorous and Productive

The gooseberry is the fruit of fruits in northern European countries, but in North America has never been popular because nursery men for the most part offer to fruit growers only sorts derived from the American species, of which the wretchedly small Houghton and Downing are the best known kinds. The New York experiment station has long been testing European kinds and trying to breed new sorts which have the character of the European varieties. This year Fredonia is recommended as a new gooseberry of the European type. The nurseryman who propagates and popularizes it deserves to make a fortune.

The plants are vigorous, productive, quite resistant to the mildew and hold their foliage longer than any other European sort. The berries are large, attractive in appearance and of most excellent quality, suitable for culinary purposes from the time they are as large as a pea until they are ripe enough for a dessert fruit. The skin is thick and tough, and the fruit hangs and keeps well, so that the sort should be excellent for the general market and cannery, as well as for home use. The berries are most delectable when ripe and make a splendid dessert fruit for those who appreciate gooseberries to eat out of hand.

Horticultural Notes

Following the harvest the strawberry grower must decide whether to renew or abandon his producing fields.

Not all trees in an orchard may need thinning. Where the crop is light and well distributed over the bearing area, thinning is unnecessary.

Thinning reduces the amount of breakage in an over-loaded fruit tree and cuts down the expenses of propping.

The question of pollination should be carefully considered in the case of pear trees of bearing age that do not set satisfactory crops of fruit.

The average strawberry field should produce some three or four profitable crops but the question of renewal depends entirely upon the condition of the field.

Strawberries that were planted this spring should be kept cultivated and free from weeds throughout the season. Next year's yield is largely influenced by the care the planting receives this season.

A small, well cared for patch of blackberries or raspberries can be a profitable side line for any fruit farm.

A minimum of 40 to 50 leaves per apple is required to bring about maximum development of quality, flavor, color, and size.

Trees like the sour cherry, which do not start growth readily from the dormant buds on the older parts, but which make new growth from the active buds near the terminals of branches, should be pruned least.

First American Hoop Race Is Held in Los Angeles

America's first "human hoop" champion is Miss Betty Ellis of Los Angeles, who was victorious in the first American "aero-wheel" race, held at Carthay Circle, a suburb of the California city. Inasmuch as the contestants were all of the type which has helped to make southern California famous, cordons of police were called into service to hold back the cheering crowds. This photograph shows the lineup of the pretty human hoop rollers before the start of the race.

Goodyear Blimp Lands on the Sea

Equipped with pontoons, the Goodyear blimp Volunteer made a series of successful sea landings in the vicinity of Los Angeles harbor. Lieut. Karl Lange, pilot, said he experienced no particular difficulty. This was said to be the second time in the history of aviation that such a feat has been accomplished. About ten years ago a similar landing was made by a Goodyear ship.

A Religious Law

It would be easier, I fancy, writes "Looker-on" in the London Daily Chronicle, to recall instances of beards being forbidden by law than of their being made compulsory, as is the case in Afghanistan, according to a message from Kandahar. Beards often have a religious significance. The really strict adherent of the Jewish faith is always bearded, while priests of the Russian Orthodox church must wear beards and allow their hair to grow as well. More strictly speaking, the canon law says that the hair must never be cut from the day on which ordination takes place, and so the Orthodox cleric is free—unofficially—to restrain an inconvenient growth of his tresses by judicious singeing from time to time!
