Mad Woman's Achievement

A square of rag, inscribed in exquisite needlework with a clearly readable message nearly 1,000 words long, was among the exhibit at the pathological exhibition at Manchester. The worker was a madwoman who imagined that she was Eve, and the needlework describes her hallucinations. The most astonishing thing about it is that it was all done under the coverlet of her bed, to conceal it from the nurse. She intended it as a message to God.

When Great Tecumseh Fell

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

OCTOBER 5 is the anniversary of a battle, not nearly so well known to the average American as a dozen others of less importance but characterized by a number of unusual features which make it one of the most interesting engagements in American history. It is the battle of the Thames, fought in Canada on October 5, 1813, when American troops, led by Gen. William Henry Harrison, defeated the allied British and Indian forces led by General Proctor and Chief Tecumseh. The victory so added to the military prestige of Harrison as to aid materially in his election to the Presidency by the Whig party in 1840. In that same year the Democratic candidate for Vice President was Col. Richard M. Johnson, who had fought under Harrison at the battle of the Thames and the chief factor in his securing the Democratic nomination had been the claim made for him by his friends that he had slain Tecumseh with his own hand at the battle of the Thames. Thus more than a quarter of a century after the death of the great Shawnee leader his name was heard in a political campaign. Curiously enough it was heard in that connection again half a century later. At a meeting of the Republican national committee in Washington to select a city in which to hold a Presidential nominating convention, one committee man, during an eloquent plea for the selection of Detroit, promised to take the visitors thirty miles over into Canada to view the spot where Tecumseh, "the greatest Indian the American continent ever knew, was slain."

That last quotation affords the best reason why the battle of the Thames is notable. For the committee man had the authority of more than one historian for his characterization of Tecumseh. Trumbull declared unqualifiedly that "He was the most extraordinary Indian that has ever appeared in history." In 1768 there was born to Chief Puckeshinwau of the Shawnees at the Shawnee village of Piqua on the Mad river near the present site of Springfield, Ohio, a son, who was given the name of Tikamthi or Tecumtha, meaning "Crouching Panther" or "Shooting Star." When the boy was six years old his father was killed in the famous battle of Point Pleasant W. Va. Before he had reached his majority he had distinguished himself as a fearless warrior but one who was more humane and chivalrous towards his enemies than was common among the Indians of that period.

Tecumseh fought in two great battles of that period against the whites, the St. Claire defeat and the battle of Fallen Timbers where Mad Anthony Wayne crushed the tribes of the Ohio valley. The young Shawnee refused to take part in the Treaty of Greenville and, gathering about him a band of warriors, he spent several years roving about before accepting an invitation from the Delawares and settling on the White river in Indiana. This was in 1798 and for the next few years Tecumseh remained there, peacefully occupied in hunting. More farsighted than most Indians of his time, Tecumseh early in life realized that the red man was doomed to go down before the greater numbers of the whites unless they were stopped. So he undertook the formation of a great confederacy of all the Western and Southern tribes for the purpose of making the Ohio river the permanent boundary between the two races.

Tecumseh's dream of an Indian confederacy was not a new one. King Philip, the Waponaog, Pontiac, the Ottawa, and Little Turtle, the Miami, had tried the same scheme and all had failed. So perhaps Tecumseh, the Shawnee, was doomed to failure from the start, but the chances are that his attempt to hold back the tide of white settlement would have come nearer realization than any of these others had it not been for his brother, Tenskwatawa, the Prophet. The Prophet, a vain, boastful charlatan, had little of the greatness of Tecumseh in his make-up but he was a clever demagogue and through his self-asserted powers as a prophet exerted considerable influence over the superstitious savages. It was an influence which Tecumseh, although he must have realized that his brother was a faker, was glad to use in his grand scheme for uniting the tribes. The only thing which he could not foresee was that the character of his brother might make him a liability as well as an asset to his cause.

And this was exactly what happened. While Tecumseh was absent among the Southern tribes organizing them, the Prophet precipitated the battle of Tippecanoe, November 7, 1811, and his forces were disastrously defeated by General Harrison. After that historic engagement the influence of the Prophet was gone forever. More than that, it dampened the ardor of most of the tribes for the cause in which they had enlisted and Tecumseh saw his elaborate plans crash to earth. When the war of 1812 broke out, Tecumseh joined the English army in Canada. Nearly all of the war chiefs followed his lead and the Shawnee found himself the nominal head of more than 700 warriors. The value of these allies and especially when directed by the genius of Tecumseh was immediately recognized by General Brock, commander of the British forces, and the friendship of the two men, based upon mutual respect and admiration, continued until the death of General Brock at the battle of Queenstown.

Proctor, Brock's successor, was a very different sort from Brock and lacked all of the qualities which had won the high regard of the Indian leader for the former British commander. Despite the aid of Tecumseh and the 2,000 warriors of the allied tribes under his command, Proctor proved himself such a bungler, if not actually a coward, that the Indian leader foresaw the eventual triumph of the Americans. Tecumseh covered Proctor's retreat after Perry's decisive victory on Lake Erie until disgusted with the British leader and declining to retreat further he forced Proctor to make a stand on the Thames river near the present Chatham, Ontario.

Even then Tecumseh was not sure that Proctor would fight if he could help it and for that reason the Indian leader took his position at the junction of the British and Indian lines so as to have a near and direct communication with the British leader. His low opinion of Proctor was immediately justified, for at the first onset of Harrison's troops, Proctor fled in his carriage with his personal staff, a few dragoons and some mounted Indians. As the American cavalry broke the British line Proctor's soldiers surrendered as fast as they could throw down their arms and within five minutes after the first shot was fired the whole British force of 800 men was beaten and most of them were prisoners. A more severe engagement took place when the force of mounted Kentucky riflemen struck the Indians and Tecumseh, who was in the thick of the fight, was shot down.

According to one tradition, Tecumseh had wounded Colonel Johnson with a rifle bullet and was springing forward to finish his work with his tomahawk when the officer drew a pistol and shot the Indian through the head. During the political campaign when Johnson was a candidate for Vice President, his friends revived the story and made much of this supposed feat. Johnson himself never affirmed or denied the story. It is true that he killed an Indian under such circumstances and after the battle two Indians, one of whom was believed to be Tecumseh, was found dead there. Some of the Kentuckians, as savage by nature and training as their enemies, believing that one of these Indians was Tecumseh, flayed most of the skin from the body and made it into razor strops. This fact is vouched for by reputable historians but it is also pretty definitely established that the victim of this example of brutality by the white man was not the great Shawnee leader. With a presentiment of death before the battle, Tecumseh had discarded his general's uniform, and dressed himself in his Indian deerskin. So there was nothing in his appearance to distinguish him from any of the other warrior dead.

Chief Blackhawk of the Sacs and Foxes, who was present at the battle of the Thames, later declared that Tecumseh's body was carried from the field by his followers but where he was buried no one ever learned. To this day the site of his grave is one of the unsolved mysteries of American history.

High Divorce Rate

The chances for a life-long marriage in California seem, according to the latest statistics, to be about two out of three marriages. At any rate, during 1928 46,945 couples stepped boldly forth to proclaim to the world that they were true lovers who "never more should part," and during that same year 14,458 told the courts through their attorneys, that it wouldn't do and that they yearned once more for their freedom. Los Angeles was especially hard hit, for while the marriages were dropping off about a thousand over 1927, the divorces jumped more than 300.

NEW IDEAS IN COAT STYLES; TWEEDLIKE SILKS POPULAR

A SPIRIT to ring out the old, ring in the new, pervades the entire coat-styling realm. The whole atmosphere is fairly surcharged with a sense of change. Flares instead of straight silhouettes, sleeves which have developed a complex; high waistlines which compete with Princess fitted effects; these details and more bespeak a revolution in "lines."

And the fur treatments! "See what happens" when the autumn and winter season gets into full swing. Just one thrill after another is on the program, both for the all-fur coat and the furred cloth coat.

Especially in the matter of sleeve-design, style creators are stopping at nothing which will achieve the unusual. One of the vagaries of fur cuffs is to travel up the sleeve, to and beyond the elbow. The sleeves in the picture tell a story of this outstanding trend. It suggests but one among the strange and devious tricks modern cuffs are performing.

One of the distinctive features of sleeves, this is that of widened and flowing lines about the wrist. In other words sleeves are taking to themselves flares quite the same as are skirt hemlines. Flat pelts, such as caracul, ermine and broadtail, especially lend themselves to these effects. A wide cuff of the fabric-like fur often starts at the elbow developing into a decided bell at the wrist. Then again godets of the thin fur are seamed into the cloth of the coat so as to secure a conspicuous flare.

And the whimsical collars, how flattering they are. In many instances there is a definite reaction from small tailored types. The inclination toward picturesque lines is especially apparent in collars which set away from the face. There are cleverly designed shawl interpretations which become capes when flattened over the shoulders. Often the shawl is of the cloth bordered with wide fur. Scarf themes are endless, worked out in flat caraculs, ermine, sheared panther, or the popular galyak.

There's a lot being done with two kinds of furs, or with two colors of the same fur. Flat furs are frequently enhanced with long-haired borderings.

are the call of the current mode. Wherefore, it is plain to be seen why the re-enthronement of the for-many-years-sighted dressmaker is in prospect.

If one can sew at all the lure of the new materials is sure to "get them" this season. However, dressmaker or no dressmaker, the big stores, the specialty shops, the exclusive salons and ateliers are fairly bubbling over with a super-abundance of beautiful clothes. You can see by this picture of a tweed silk suit what stunning costumes are available.

SAFETY FIRST AIM OF "DO X" BUILDER

Why Dornier Constructed Huge German Plane.

Berlin—"Safety First"—this typically American slogan prompted the Dornier company to build the gigantic 12-motored "Do X," the world's largest airplane.

"Do X" was designed and constructed by Dr. Claudius Dornier, it was declared, principally to demonstrate that safety in the air can be substantially increased, and secondarily to prove that airplanes can be made to pay for themselves. Asked "What is today the cause of most aviation accidents?" Dornier officials listed them as follows:

Causes of Accidents.
"The pilots have too much to do. They are almost always overworked. They must steer the aircraft, keep an eye on a multitude of instruments and at the same time navigate the ship. Moreover, they are rarely protected against weather changes."

"The motors are almost always overstrained. They must run constantly under full power. Stopping them or repairing them in the air is hardly to be thought of."

"Gasoline and oil feedpipes and parts of the steering apparatus are often inaccessible. Hundreds of emergency landings can be traced to difficulties arising in this connection. Such landings often result in serious accidents."

"Fire forms a tragic chapter in the history of aviation. The majority of these fires have been due to gasoline leaking from tanks standing close to overheated motors."

Making Flying Safer.
Explaining how some, if not all, of these drawbacks to safe flying have been overcome, the Dornier officials said:

"Aboard the airplane 'Do X' the pilot can devote his attention solely to the task of piloting the craft. He need not be omnipotent or be a pilot, engineer, navigator and commander all in one. The technical work will be handled by an engineer who will be assisted by a number of specialists. The commander will be just that; he will command the ship and the crew, determine the course to be followed and so forth. No one will be overworked. Each will be able to give his undivided attention to his special task."

"Nor will the motors be overtaxed. They have sufficient surplus power to make it possible to reduce their power by 40 per cent immediately after the start."

"Up until now, hidden parts on airplanes have been almost inaccessible. As for the 'Do X,' provisions have been made to develop to the utmost facilities for repairing the motors and equipment. The possibility of making repairs does not alone depend on accessibility, but also on the ability to disconnect damaged parts without interrupting the flight of the airplane."

"The danger of fire has been met by placing the fuel tanks as far as possible from motors."

JUMPS FROM PLANE NOT FOR PRISONER

He Didn't Try to Escape on Flight to Colorado.

Denver, Colo.—Prisoners of the law who think nothing of jumping from speeding trains as a method of escaping, would doubtless give the matter a second thought before taking this route to freedom while being transported in an airplane.

At least a Colorado sheriff who was returning a prisoner to Lamar, Colo., from Chicago recently, found no trouble keeping his man aboard the ship, according to Pilot J. G. Ingram, of Universal Air Lines, who flew the Fokker trimotor on which the two were passengers and thus probably became the first pilot to serve the law in this manner.

The sheriff was L. E. Alderman, of Lamar, and his prisoner was a suspect in the robbery of the Lamar bank in May, 1928, which resulted in the killing of the bank president and his son and the subsequent murder of a kidnaped teller and of a doctor who dressed the wounds of one of the bandit gang. The two were traveling by plane because Sheriff Alderman wanted to get his man to Colorado before he changed his mind about waiving extradition.

"The air was bumpy," relates Ingram, "and the prisoner got very airsick. It was his first flight and he seemed to get a great kick out of it up to the time when he began to notice the bumpiness."

"He wore handcuffs, although they were not fastened to the sheriff's wrist, and all the other passengers knew that they had a suspected murderer in the cabin with them."

It has been thought that criminals have made good their disappearance from scenes of their crimes by boarding air liners, but this is the first time one of the fraternity has been returned via air.

BOOSTS AIR DEFENSE

Thomas L. Hill, war flyer and president of the American Society for Promotion of Aviation, who is leading a movement to have congress appropriate $40,000,000 to provide airplanes free of charge to civilian flying clubs organized throughout the United States. Under this plan, according to the society, 250,000 trained flyers would be available for any national emergency within a period of five years.

Argentina Is Ideal Country for Flying

Washington.—Argentina is an ideal country for flying, almost the whole country being a natural landing field, according to the information section of the aeronautics branch, Department of Commerce.

The country is largely level and the distances are great. It has been developing natural resources rapidly and the public and government are keenly interested in the development of commercial aviation.

These conditions, prevailing in a country heretofore lacking adequate transportation facilities, indicate great potential development of the industry. There are, according to recent dispatches, approximately 20 regularly equipped airports in the country.

Camera Shoots Plane, Shows Bullet's Route

New York.—In outward appearance, shape and weight, an exact duplicate of the standard machine gun used on fighting planes, a recently devised motion picture camera enables military aviators to practice all the evolutions of aerial combat in entire safety from bullets. Instead of firing bullets, the gun cameras take small photographs showing exactly where bullets would have struck.

The exact time of the exposure also is registered, so that aviators practicing "dog-fights" can determine which would have been shot down if the fights had been actual.

Texas Youth Only 18 Gets Pilot's License

Fort Worth, Texas.—Homer Truax, eighteen-year-old Fort Worth flyer, may be the youngest aviator in the country to possess a transport pilot's license.

Veteran flyers call the boy "just a natural born pilot." He won the highest rating granted by the Department of Commerce after a year and a half of experience. Most of his lessons were taken piecemeal.

Truax is employed as a pilot by Fort Worth oil men and airplane distributors.

Plane With Pontoons Lands Well in Field

Montreal.—Giuseppe M. Bellanca now has a new precept for pilots flying his planes with pontoon landing gears—if you can't make the water make a bay field! Harold P. Ayers, Montreal flyer, found out about it recently while returning from a fishing trip in the Laurentian lake region. A water-clogged fuel line betrayed the faith in Wright motors that lured him out over twenty miles of land, but the "fast" landing he executed didn't even open the seams in his metal pontoons. When the gas line had been cleaned the plane was rolled on beaching wheels to the nearest water and launched again.

Flyers Learn to Avoid Sensation of Falling

San Antonio, Texas.—The sensation of falling may be an optical illusion, after all.

Two lieutenants at Brooks field, Robert J. Smith and Frederick K. Sauer, have discovered that no falling sensation is felt if neither the earth nor the starting point of descent is visible to a parachute jumper.

With eight men, none of whom had made a parachute jump before, they left planes simultaneously. Under directions they did not look at the craft or the ground below. None reported that they felt the sensation of falling.

Hoover-cleaned rugs are safe from moths!

YOU need have no anxiety about your floor coverings if they are cleaned by The Hoover. So thorough is its work, so complete the removal of dirt, that even the tiniest moth eggs are gathered up, and the dreaded pests are eliminated.

Such an amazing degree of cleanliness is possible because of The Hoover's exclusive, patented cleaning principle, "Positive Agitation." It gets the dirt deep down in the rug that eludes ordinary cleaning methods. So thoroughly does it flutter loose this embedded dirt that The Hoover creates a new measure of electric cleaner efficiency—removes, as shown by actual test, more dirt per minute than any other cleaner.

Wouldn't you like to see how this dirt-removing ability of The Hoover will brighten and beautify your rugs? A telephone call will bring a Hoover to your home for a demonstration. Liberal allowance for your old cleaner. Only $6.25 down. Ask about the new Hoover Model 543, priced at only $59.50.

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

Little Rock, Ark.—"I was sick for three years after my last baby came. I could hardly walk and could not eat nor sleep as I should because I was so nervous. Seek "Pickle Jar" Treasure

Austin, Texas.—Hunt for $10,000 reputed to be buried in a pickle jar has begun in various parts of Texas and the northern part of Mexico.

The $10,000 is said to have been buried by Harry J. Leahy, who was electrocuted August 2 as the murderer of Dr. J. A. Ramsey of Mathis.

Ranger Captain Frank Hamer probably is the only man who knows whether there is such a buried treasure, and, if so, where it is. A few hours before the execution Leahy sent for Hamer. They had a long talk. "It was confidential," is Hamer's only answer to questions about what Leahy told him.

How the belief that Leahy buried $10,000 originated is as much a mystery as the buried treasure's location.

Leahy was a ranchman, at one time wealthy. What became of all the money he received has not been known. Some believe he buried part of it. Mrs. J. A. Ramsey of Mathis, widow of the man Leahy was convicted of killing, is urging the search for the buried pickle jar—not because of the reported $10,000 but because she believes that there may also have been buried personal jewelry which Doctor Ramsey was wearing when he left his home in May, 1926.

Ramsey then was called by a Mexican to come to the aid of a Mexican woman who was said to be seriously ill. His body later was found buried in a shallow grave on a lonely ranch in Live Oak county. His jewelry was gone.

Suspicion first attached to Leahy when Mrs. Ramsey offered a reward for her husband, whom she believed to have been kidnaped. Leahy offered to conduct a search but insisted the reward be for his body, dead or alive.

Hamer, a noted figure in law enforcement along the border, had long

Lights of New York

By GRANT DIXON

Vox Populi
Not long ago a newspaper polled its readers on the question whether New York should have Sunday theatrical performances. As it stands now, Sunday theaters are barred by law, but the movie stage presentations and vaudeville shows get by under the guise of sacred concerts. They prove they are sacred concerts and not commercial enterprises by not distributing programs. As I was saying this newspaper printed ballots on which the readers could mark an X for yes or an X for no. There was a deluge of replies—but scores of supposedly intelligent New Yorkers were wide of the mark. They did not realize what the ballot was for, and they didn't seem to know that Sunday shows have always been banned in their own city.

Visiting Firemen
I wonder what was the origin of the phrase, visiting firemen—meaning hit-and-run tourists who must have the aid of permanent residents to see the town right. I first heard of visiting firemen in Paris, and many's the v. f. that I entertained there. They ask you to do the strangest things. But to a friend of mine has fallen the opportunity of doing what I consider the strangest of all tours with an outlander. This girl, who works in a publishing house and is a successful short story writer, was called upon to entertain a woman who might very well have been the little old lady from Dubuque. This little old lady comes from an illustrious family whose name has been prominent in New York ever since the days of the big rum deal for Manhattan Island. And what must she do but choose the hottest day of the summer to visit, with her friend's help, the graves of all her ancestors! She has a book of the family history, and the tour began at the old Trinity churchyard and ended, hours later, in the far reaches of the Bronx.

Our Sea Lion
The sea lion in the Central park zoo is a clever member of the fair sex, and I enjoy watching her outwit the crowds. She has, of course, much less privacy than a goldfish, for, being a happy creature with a sense of humor, she draws great throngs to the fence around her bath. Much of the time she disports herself for their benefit, swimming, snorting and yapping for joy. But occasionally she yearns for peace and quiet, and when she does, she lies on the cement bank of her pool for a sun bath. Her body catches all the healthful sun's rays; but she sticks her head, ostrich fashion, into the water, covering eyes and ears. That deadens the sound of the chatter about her.

Big Girls Wanted
Girls are simply out of luck here if they are not tall. Show girls, Florenz Ziegfeld informs me, are going to be bigger and taller than ever. Only he puts it this way: American girls are growing bigger and taller, so there is nothing else to do but use them in the show business. But even in business stature is a deciding factor. A restaurant chain advertises for "Hostesses, age 20-30. Tall, attractive young women. Permanent, worth-while positions for those who qualify." Nothing is said about mental requirements. Be tall, and let those who will be intelligent. Clothes models get their jobs by their stature, rather than by beauty of face or experience.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Beeswax
Beeswax is a fatty substance secreted by bees and they consume great quantities of honey before swarming in order to produce wax used in building combs. Ten to twenty pounds of honey is required for each pound of wax. To produce wax for commercial use, the comb is boiled and the melted wax comes to the surface and hardens when skimmed off.

MODERN CONVENIENCES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I was looking around for the telephone directory in the convenient little hotel room in which I was stopping in St. Louis. Someone had misplaced it. I opened the drawer of the stand that stood at the head of my bed, but instead of discovering the lost directory I found a complete radio set. I had entirely forgotten this modern attraction which has been installed in so many hotels all over the country. By pulling a little lever and turning a dial I could listen to a concert in Birmingham, or get the latest reports on baseball, or hear President Hoover talking on farm relief. A radio in every room is the latest hotel slogan.

It was not always so. I recall with a shiver a night I spent some thirty five years ago in the "best hotel in the city" of a town of some size in my native state. The thermometer registered fifteen degrees below zero, and there was no heat in the room nor any way of getting it. If there was a bathroom in the entire layout I was not able to discover it.

Things are different now. There is a bath in every room with hot or cold water as you choose, and you may use the shower or the tub as pleases your fancy. There is ice water for your drinking if you turn the proper tap, and a cloth to polish your shoes so that you will not ruin the fine towels which are furnished in luxurious abundance. If the room is too warm or too cold the difficulty may be quickly adjusted by twisting the button that controls the thermostat. You may have it as you like.

You can have your laundry done or your clothing cleaned and pressed or your shoes shined over night by putting them into a sort of concealed closet in the door and ringing up the office. There is stationery and telegraph blanks and pen and ink in a convenient desk, and pins and needle and thread and an assortment of buttons on the dresser to repair the wreck of your wearing apparel incident to a hasty getting out of the pullman. When you stretch out on the comfortable mattress and draw the clean sheets about you, there is a reading lamp at the head of the bed, and at your elbow a telephone and you can prop yourself up with two big pillows and talk to your friends a thousand miles away if you wish, or read yourself into pleasant drowsiness. If there is anything else you can think of which would add to your comfort or convenience all you have to do is to press a button and it will be brought to you.

Things are different from what they once were!

Rodents Worried Officials

Shanghai.—A telegram forecasting the arrival of 300 hamsters for shipment to Penang recently disrupted the equanimity of the Dollar Line steamship offices in Shanghai.

The message gave no particulars except that the shipment would be accompanied by an attendant who would look after the welfare of the consignment. The official to whom the message was referred called for the freight tariff files. He searched in vain for a classification that would enlighten him. He called for a dictionary and an encyclopedia, but was unable to find any information relating to hamsters.

During the luncheon hour he inquired of every one he met. "What is a hamster?" Some said a young pig. Others defined the word as "a man who sells hams." Still another was sure it was a "container for soiled clothes."

Eventually the shipment arrived and with it a letter of explanation. The hamster is a rodent peculiar to China. It is larger than a mouse and smaller than a rat. Each of the animals was inclosed in a separate cage. The consignment was being shipped to Penang on a Dollar steamship and thence to be transhipped to Camp Gauthier, in Assam, India, to be used for experimental purposes in connection with the work of the Kala Azar commission, which is investigating cures for tropical fever. The rodents were shipped by the Peking Union Medical college. They were fed with cooked black beans and were accompanied from Peiping to Shanghai by a Chinese attendant, who saw that they received the best of care.

On board the Dollar liner President Johnson they were cared for by a doctor en route to Penang, who accepted the responsibility of seeing that his charges received the necessary quota of cooked black beans a day.

THE NEW WAXFREE HAVOLINE

WAXFREE

Wax turns water-thin under heat. Wax turns candle-hard under cold. Now, for the first time, you can get a waxfree paraffin base oil for the best year-round lubrication

The Greatest Achievement in Refining— A WAXFREE PARAFFIN BASE OIL

Motor oils made from paraffin base crudes have long been recognized as the ideal lubricants.

However, the wax that is inherent in this type of crude has always been a most troublesome element. Wax turns water-thin under heat and has no lubricating value. In cold weather wax stiffens, hard as a candle, and "drags" the motor.

Heretofore refiners have found it impossible to eliminate wax.

But NOW—the goal of refining engineers has been reached. One oil meets all requirements. It is the New Waxfree Havoline—a paraffin base oil made by the Covers Process.

This process gives the New Waxfree Havoline better heat resistance than any other oil of the same viscosity at 210°F. and above.

It gives better cold weather lubrication than any other oil.

It assures "oiliness" at every temperature, because—it is not a blended oil!

It is a paraffin base oil from which all the wax has been removed by the patented Covers Process, controlled exclusively by the Indian Refining Company.

It is the only oil that meets ALL specifications for ideal lubrication.

Any man who knows oil can read the specifications and tell you that these statements are FACTS.

Don't be content with "part time" lubrication.

There is a Havoline dealer near you. Go there at once for your motor's sake. Put the New Waxfree Havoline in your crankcase and your engine will be protected at every speed and temperature.

Waxfree Havoline sells for 35 cents a quart and it is worth a lot more in real motor maintenance. Get your Waxfree Havoline today!
