TRI-COUNTY O. E. S. MEET AT WHITTEMORE

The semi-annual meeting of the A. I. A. Association, O. E. S., was held at Whittemore on Friday, October 18th.

Every chapter was represented by its matron and such a large delegation of members that this meeting will go on record as the biggest ever known in the history of the Association. The afternoon session was in charge of Sister Florence Curtis, president of the Association, and the following program was rendered:

Opening song; Presentation of Flag—Mrs. Mueller; Invocation—Mrs. Hunter; Roll Call of Association Officers—Mable Stone; Introduction of Honored Guests—Florence Curtis; Duet—Ruth Schuster and Glade Charters; Address of Welcome—W. M. Whittemore Chapter, Anna Thompson; Response—W. M. Hale Chapter, Sarah Johnson; Address—Vice-President James Mark; Duet—Rev. and Mrs. Shugg.

Following a short business session, the afternoon program concluded with a play entitled, "The Child Moses," put on by ten members of Whittemore Chapter, directed by Florence Curtis. The play was very impressive, and at the end of the first act there was hardly a dry eye in the building. The cast of characters was as follows:

Amram, father of Moses, A. Harrell; Jochebed, mother of Moses, Pearl Ridgley; Miriam, his daughter, Lois Charters; Khai, an Egyptian official, Seth Thompson; Wer-muthis, the Princess, Clara Fuerst; Kilegepa, Ionharti, ladies of the King's household, Ida Rahl, Ella Fuerst; Nefert, a maid, Ellen Schuster; Jambres, Jannes, scribes of the King, R. Fuerst, J. Little.

At the close of the play everyone assembled over the Roll-Inn, where a three-course dinner was served to 170 members. Sister Curtis introduced the Philathea class, who furnished the meal, the Whittemore high school glee club, who waited on the tables, and the Serenaders, who furnished music throughout the banquet. Much credit is due the three organizations for their co-operative spirit and the able manner in which they served such a large crowd.

Just before everyone again assembled in the Masonic hall, the glee club favored the assembly with two songs.

During the evening session Brother Otto Bishop of Alpena, who is Grand Patron of the Order, conducted a school of instruction in place of Sister Bess Gardner, Grand Conductor, who for some unknown reason failed to arrive.

The meeting adjourned immediately afterward to meet again in Harrisville some time in May.

THOS. BRADLEY KILLED BY ENRAGED BULL

Thomas Bradley, age 77 years, was killed by an enraged bull late Sunday afternoon at his farm at the city limits. Mr. Bradley was a highly esteemed citizen of this community and was beloved by his neighbors and his many friends throughout the county. In the early nineties the deceased served two terms as sheriff of this county. He had been a very active member of the Masonic fraternity and was a Past Master of Oscoda and Tawas City Lodges.

The tragedy occurred between four and six o'clock. Mrs. Olive Davison, the housekeeper, left the house at four o'clock. His son, Elmer, was down town during that interval and so no one knows just how it happened. It is thought that Mr. Bradley attempted to drive the bull into the barn yard and the animal turned on him. In the struggle, the aged man, although strong and quite active, was overcome and his life crushed out.

Elmer came home at six o'clock, but darkness had covered the tragedy. Thinking that his father was away, he put the bull into the barn, and after doing the remainder of the chores, returned down town, where he spent the evening. Mrs. Davison came home later and retired, thinking Mr. Bradley was in his room asleep.

Monday morning Mrs. Davison called him, but getting no response, found that the bed had been unoccupied. Immediately a search was made, and the bruised, lifeless body was found under some shrubbery near the house.

Thomas Bradley was born September 13, 1852, at Fenton, Michigan. In 1878 he went to AuSable. December 25, 1882, he was united in marriage to Eleanor VanPatten of East Tawas. He was elected sheriff of Isoco county in 1890 and the family came to Tawas City. After serving two terms as sheriff they removed to the farm at the edge of Tawas City, where he has resided ever since. Previous to being elected sheriff and while at AuSable he was engaged in the lumbering business.

The deceased is survived by three sons, John Bradley of Chicago, William Bradley of Pontiac, and Elmer at home, one daughter, Mrs. Edith McLaughlin of Atlanta, Georgia, one brother, Wm. Bradley of Crookston, Minnesota, and one sister, Mrs. Sarah Mills of Flint.

The funeral services were held at one o'clock Thursday afternoon from the residence. Rev. George Smith of Whittemore, officiated. Last Masonic rites were given by Tawas City and East Tawas lodges.

DISTINCTIVE NEW TRIUMPH IN TALKING SCREEN'S ART

A sensational achievement of the talking screen, the William Fox Movietone Follies of 1929, which comes to the State Theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

This all-talking musical comedy sings, dances, talks, sighs and laughs. It is everything that a stage musical revue is, with the addition of the numerous advantages the motion picture enjoys over the stage.

The numbers are expertly and artistically staged, the principals are talented and youthful and the music is original and provocative.

There is a highly interesting story interwoven into the texture of the revue with expert hands which adds greatly to the enjoyment of the audience.

With such a galaxy of talent and beauty, it is difficult to single out any particular numbers for special praise, although "That's You, Baby," "The Breakaway," "Walkin' With Susie" and "Pearl of Old Japan" receive the most applause.

"That's You, Baby" serves to introduce David Percy, handsome young baritone, who has a voice of grand opera calibre. He sings melodiously and with a clarity that makes every word understandable.

Sharon Lynn, young Texas actress who has appeared in several Fox productions, including the all-talking picture, "Speakasy," plays opposite Percy in this number and reveals a contralto voice of rare charm.

This number also is the vehicle for the debut of Sue Carol and David Rollins, popular youngsters of the silent screen, in musical comedy roles. Miss Carol has a surprisingly sweet voice and Rollins, too, acquires himself with honors.

Color photographs adds much to the beauty of "Pearl of Old Japan." It is a fantasy based on an old Japanese legend, and the setting is a magic grotto under the sea. The music is especially beautiful and the pageantry and movement shows expert direction.

The Fox Movietone Follies is a distinctive new triumph for the talkies.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the neighbors and friends for their kindness during our bereavement, also for the beautiful floral offerings and the use of cars at the funeral.

WATERS

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
BANG! goes another of our illusions! It is in regard to that pleasant period in autumn, known as Indian summer. And as usual, it is science which has disillusioned us. No less an authority than the United States weather bureau, basing its statement upon accurate meteorological observations, has this to say about that delectable season, famed for its genial sunshine and alluring haze:

Indian summer is the name applied in this country to a period of mild weather following a spell of unseasonable cold weather conditions at "squaw winter," such as occurred this fall. It is not a fixed season in the calendar. In many years it is intermittent; that is, there may be several Indian summers in one autumn. Thoreau in notes on weather conditions at Concord, Mass., from 1851 to 1860, records the occurrence of Indian summers on dates ranging from September 27 to December 13.

In Europe as well as in this country it is popularly believed that a real "spell" of mild weather occurs every autumn, and the dates of its supposed occurrence are more definitely fixed than is the case in America. The period is associated with the names of various saints. The mild period, thus, is known in different parts of Europe as "St. Martin's Summer," "St. Luke's Summer" or "St. Michael's Summer," and tradition fosters the idea that it is always mild and warm, about the time of these various saints' days. Climatological facts, however, do not always square with this belief.

Indian summer has always been a favorite theme of artists and poets, especially the latter who, however, have usually been better verse makers than meteorologists. "When was the red man's summer?" asks Lydia Huntley Sigourney, "the Felicia Hemans of America" and one of the early Nineteenth century poets. Then, without trying to fix the date in one of her poems, she says it came

When the groves
 In fleeting colors wrote their own decay.

When with heart
 Foreboding or depressed, the white man marked
 The signs of coming winter, then began
 The Indian's joyous season.

John G. C. Brainerd, a contemporary of Mrs. Sigourney, is more specific in placing the season at the time

When the frost
 Turns into beauty all October's charms.

Longfellow fixes the season about the first of November in a passage in his "Evangeline" as follows:

Then followed that beautiful season,
 Called by the pious Acadian peasants
 The summer of All Saints, Filled with the air with a dreamy and magical light; and the landscape
 Lay as if new-created in all the freshness of childhood.

Since election day comes in November, the following quotation from Whittier's, "The Eve of Election" also places Indian summer in that month:

From gold to gray
 Our mild sweet day
 Of Indian summer fades too soon;
 But tenderly

 Hangs, white and calm, the hunter's moon.

In its pale fire
 The village spire
 Shows like the zodiac's spectral lance;
 The painted walls
 Whereon it falls
 Transfigured stand in marble trance!

Stephen Henry Thayer puts it a little later in the month when he says that

It is in the autumn's dotage, mid November,
 When skies, seductive, seem to woo
 The earth.

Other poets, however, are more concerned with what it is rather than when it is and have given us some charming descriptions. Sam Walter Foss, in his inimitable dialect, calls it "a piece of sweetmeat" in the following verse:

"Natur," the good old school-marm
 who pities our distress,
 She gives her children every year a little glad recess;
 An' ol' gray-headed boys and girls
 they feel their hearts thaw out,
 An' life flows on as musically as water from a spout;
 An' now the Ingin Summer time, 'th
 all its rest is here,
 A piece of sweet meat stuck between the slices of the year;
 A sorter reign er Jubilee 'twixt snow
 an' thunder showers;
 A chunk of sweetness sandwiched in between the frost and flowers.

Nor were the early American poets the only ones who paid their tribute, as witness the following by Marian Isabel Angus:

INDIAN SUMMER
 Indian summer broods today
 Over the mellow autumn lands,
 Soft wispy veils of amethyst
 And amber pale stream from her hands.

Vines hang heavy with purple grapes;
 Apple trees bend with crimson gems,
 And in the woods the great oak trees
 Are crowned with golden diadems.

Like topazes the pumpkins lie
 Set in a ring of brown and green,
 And mock the sun, while slender spears
 Of goldenrod make gay the scene.

Nature is drowsy; her work is done,
 Now she awaits her winter rest;
 Harvest is over; the tired brown earth
 Will sleep with red leaves on her breast.

And Minna Irving paints this gaylycolored word picture of

INDIAN BLANKETS
 Sumac fires are burning brightly,
 Ruby-red the embers glow,
 Indian council fires rekindled
 From the ash of long ago;
 And the wind's a runner passing
 With his feet in deerskin shod,
 And a chief's tall feather tosses
 In the dusty goldenrod.

Wild grapes ripen in the thicket,
 Purple asters edge the stream,
 And the braves to earth returning
 By the moon's enchanted beam
 Hang their red and yellow blankets
 On the windy maple bough
 When the frosty night is over,
 For it's Indian summer now.

Another famous dialect poet, Frank L. Stanton, writing of Indian summer in his native state of Georgia, declares that upon her trail. But she sternly said to him:

 "No publicity. I insist on being left alone. Remember, sir, no publicity."
 "Willie Williams laughed for joy.
 "Gee," he said, "what a story I can make out o' that!"

The DAIRY

DAIRYING MUST BE SPEEDED UP MORE

Scientists Facing Several Serious Economic Problems.

(By K. L. HATCH, Agricultural Extension Service, University of Wisconsin)
 Dairying is a business, a big and a serious business, both for the producer and the manufacturer.

The dairy farmer is just awakening to the fact that he is a business man employing both capital and labor on no mean scale. Dairy manufacturers are realizing as never before, that their problem is one of producing an article that will please the trade and stimulate, through quality, its own demand. These are the big and vital problems that the dairy scientists must face—are now facing. They are economic problems and must be faced with facts not now obtainable.

Everywhere in experiment station literature do we find feed costs of milk production, but rarely do we find labor costs, or dry cow costs, or depreciated herd costs, or bull costs, or capital charges, such as interest, taxes, insurance and depreciation which I submit as the principal costs of milk production on the up-to-date dairy farm.

On the manufacturing side we are equally weak. We continue to use small, insanitary and wholly inefficient plants. Neither have we studied the demands of the consumer who makes our market nor have we made much effort to produce what will especially appeal to his tastes.

And yet every other business of national scope, be it ever so small, has done all these things, and for the most part borne its own costs. A great dairy industry with nationally endowed research laboratories should do these same things—must do them for the sake of the industry.

Potato Flavor in Cream Not Caused by Feeding

The common assumption is that potato flavor in cream is caused by feeding the cows potatoes. This antiquated idea has been placed in the discard through experiments conducted by North Dakota Agricultural college. The trials with feeding potatoes to cows indicate that potato flavor in the cream is not caused by feeding the potatoes, but by exposing cream to air heavy with potato odor.

Potatoes were fed in varying amounts and immediately before milking time. The cream or milk that was stored in a cellar where the air was heavy and potato odor prevailed took on a marked potato flavor in a few hours. Once the cream acquired the potato flavor it could not be removed. No ordinary treatment, such as pasteurization, will remove potato flavor from the butterfat.

Satisfactory Ration of Roughage and Legume Hay

Heifers should have all the good roughage they will eat. Silage and any one of the legume hays make a very satisfactory combination. In addition to this they should have some grain, the kind and amount depending somewhat on the kind and quality of roughage supplied. If the quality of the legume hay is good, two to four pounds per head daily of a simple mixture, such as equal parts of ground corn, ground oats, and ground barley, is satisfactory. If the hay is not so good add one-half part each of bran and linseed or cottonseed meal. For heifers within three months of calving the grain should be increased to from four to six pounds per head daily depending on condition.

Dairy Hints

Barley is a good feed for finishing calves. In fact it equals corn for gains.

Any cream separator that leaves over four-one-hundredths of one per cent of butterfat in the skim milk is stealing money from the farmer who owns it.

Grass seems to have a stimulating effect on dairy cattle, and it is a matter of common knowledge that cows turned on good pasture increase in production.

Pasture grass is the natural feed for the cow, and it doubtless is the best feed which the cow receives during the year, but too many dairymen expect too much of pasture grass.

Any farmer sufficiently interested in dairying to keep 10 milk cows will find a silo profitable.

Do not forget to provide salt for dry cows and heifers on pasture. There should also be a good water supply and extra feed when pasture gets short.

Grain rations adapted to pasture are relatively low in cost, because they need to carry only a small amount of protein, grass being quite high in this important nutrient.

WASHABLE WEAVES POPULAR; STORY OF THE MODERN SCARF

Practical and Modish Fall Frock.

THANKS to the advent of rayon into the textile field, that which women have long since hoped for has come to pass—fabrics which, while they do not look as if they are washable, are nevertheless just that. We have available materials which present in appearance the formality and fineness of higher priced woolsens or silks yet they tub just as satisfactorily as cottons or linens. What greater boon, we ask, could come to women who seek suits and frocks for smart utilitarian wear?

Talk about "blessings in disguise," well, these new washable weaves, some of which look like handsome tweed suitings, others like wool etamine and still others which give the impression of sheer wool georgette, are certainly blessings to womankind. As to their "disguise," perhaps to speak of them thus scarcely does them sufficient honor, for after all there's no attempt to conceal the identity of rayon, rather do the fabric-wise hale with enthusiasm this comparatively new medium into the realm of fabrics.

For street wear, for wear in school room or office, frocks of these washable, yet smart, and apropos materials are proving a boon to womankind. Whether you make your own clothes, or whether you employ a by-the-day-or-week dressmaker, or whether you buy the finished ready-to-wear models, this matter of weaves which look like the more expensive woolsens and silks yet launder perfectly should be kept in mind.

The practical and modish early fall street frock in the upper picture is made of a sheer wool-and-rayon closely woven, washable fabric in one of the newest deep brown shades. The closely fitted hipline is as important listed among suitings which yield admirably to various tailored treatments.

Bicolor, tricolor, in startling contrast—thus runs the story of the modern scarf. It is an easy matter to make one's scarf this season for many of the very smartest ones are fashioned by simply seaming materials of sharply contrasting colors together, usually on the diagonal like the one in the lower picture.

Another clever idea is the twin kerchief scarf which is nothing more or less than two squares of silk sewed together, a corner of the one overlapping a corner of the other. Take this to the hemstitcher and have it picot edged and presto! there you are with one of the smartest scarves of the season.

You will like the way this twin-scarf ties about the neck, for one square falls folded over one shoulder, and the other over the other shoulder, and when they are brought together and tied to the front in a loose knot the colors intermingle most effectively.

Seeing that so much importance is being attached to black-and-white this season, here's a suggestion: Make a twin scarf, joining as first described, one eighteen-inch square of white, the other of black sheerest of sheer transparent velvet.

The tricolor, bicolor theory in regard to the scarf is quite well worth as are the low-dropped plaits in the skirt. The "classy" collar and cuffs are very youthful and bespeak a popular vogue.

One of the very smartest materials for the coat-dress or street ensemble is a coarse tweedlike fabric of wool either flecked with bouclettes of rayon or interwoven with a distinct rayon thread. In these bold handsome effects the rayon remains white and silvery against the color of the wool en. For their handsomest models these rayon-flecked woolsens with white or eggshell flat, curly fur.

Covert cloth which has a considerable interweaving of rayon also is recalling when one is plunged into a sea of doubt as to just how to finish the neckline of this frock or that when your by-the-day dressmaker runs out of "ideas." A scarf which will happily solve the problem and which may be made to complement the color trend of the costume is easily fashioned by combining materials the same kind as that of the dress only in, let us say, three different colors. Per example, a brown flat crepe frock, collared with a scarf which seams orange, cream and matching brown crepe together would achieve a very effective neckline treatment. When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound as a tonic. A City of New Telephone Buildings

IN 1926, the Michigan Bell Telephone Company entered upon the largest expansion program in its history. The intervening three years have witnessed the engineering and construction of 25 new telephone buildings and major building additions throughout the state.

Grouped together, these structures, housing thousands of telephone workers and millions of dollars' worth of equipment, would make an imposing "business city."

But this building construction represents only a portion of the extension of telephone plant by this Company during that period. Total expenditures for telephone plant expansion in Michigan the past three years were $72,000,000, greatly increasing facilities and improving the service. This is a continuing program, for as business and social activities increase, demand for still greater telephone expansion develops.

This plant expansion and improvement would be meaningless if it were not translated into terms of service and a desire to afford increasing telephone comfort, convenience and satisfaction, and to meet the growing needs of the state.

Our policy—"To continue to furnish the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety"

Millions of Miles of Constant Testing

to maintain the outstanding quality and dependability of The Chevrolet Six

In spite of the fact that a million Chevrolet Sixes have already been placed in the hands of owners, and have proved their performance and stamina by billions of miles of service over every type of highway the nation affords—

—the Chevrolet Motor Company continues to take new Chevrolet Sixes from the assembly line at the factory and subject them to pitiless testing on the roads of the General Motors Proving Ground! This passion for proof—this consistent refusal to accept any tests as final—is one of the fundamental reasons for the overwhelming popularity of Chevrolet cars. For in no other way is it possible to make the Chevrolet Six so sound in design and materials—so dependable in performance—and so economical to operate!

If you are considering the purchase of an automobile, come in and see the new Chevrolet. You will find that it is more than a Six in the price range of the four. In every way it is a finer car than you ever thought possible in the low-price field!

"Dead" Man Demands His Money

Detroit, Mich.—Walter H. Domzalski, a Detroit attorney and a magician of no little ability, has a cunning that will require all of his punning as a lawyer and his skill as a sleight of hand artist to solve. As a member of a magicians' union who can pull white rabbits out of a hat and create oranges where eggs were before, Mr. Domzalski has established quite a reputation for himself. Now, according to his own admission, he has a feat of legal legerdemain to perform. He must prove that his client, Joe Slominski of Josephat's alley, who is legally dead and buried, is very much alive and entitled to the residue of his own estate of approximately $600. Most of the $600 has been used up long ago to pay the funeral expenses and administrate the estate of the other man buried as Joe Slominski, according to Mr. Domzalski. Here's the story: Back in 1927 Slominski, who lived with friends in Josephat's alley, which is somewhere near Canfield avenue and Hastings street, did some drinking and eventually he found himself undergoing treatment in the county hospital at Eloise. September 29, 1927, Joe was reported missing. A few days later the police notified friends that a man answering Joe's description had been killed by a street car. The friends identified the dead man as Joe Slominski. A Chene street undertaker took the body to Joe's former home on the alley for the funeral services. There Joe's more intimate friends said: "Why, that's not Slominski. This man is too big to be Joe." But friends who accompanied the undertaker said: "Sure that's Joe." The funeral services were held for Joe Slominski. The funeral cost $125. In the nearly two years that followed much of the rest of the $600 was distributed according to a will that Slominski had made. Mr. Domzalski brings the story up to date. Recently Joe Slominski wandered from Eloise and went fishing. He caught six fine carp and sold them to a passing motorist for 25 cents, the first money he had obtained since 1927.

EDUCATION AND DISCIPLINE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Mrs. Collins came in to see me a short time ago concerning her son who is shortly to finish a course in a high-priced preparatory school. She had the child by the hand when she came in. He was an indifferent looking youth with little enthusiasm apparently for the strenuous activities of life. He let his mother do the talking, and she talked very easily. "I want George to go to college," she assured me, "and I am sure he will do well if he can find something not too hard that he likes. What would you suggest?"

I hadn't anything in mind, and I told her so. She was not wanting her son to have an education; she was looking for a pleasant, easy experience masquerading under the guise of training. She had never heard the statement of a very wise man, or if she had heard she had forgotten, that "an education that is not a discipline can scarcely be considered a preparation for life." It is only when we subject ourselves to the discipline of the difficult task, and do it well whether or not we like it or find it pleasant that we really progress far in education. I said as much as this to Mrs. Collins, but she did not understand me, and my statements bored her son. Ruskin's early life, he tells us, was a very guarded one. He was given very little responsibility; he was kept from error and not allowed to make his own decisions or to learn through failure the necessity of self-discipline. He acknowledged when he was an old man that this defect in his early education unfitted him for the discipline of life and became the cause to him of failure and misfortune. Any education which does not involve a rigid discipline of one's self is pretty much a failure.

Much of the trend of education today, in and out of schools and colleges, is towards making the path of youth smoother and easier. We are doing everything we can to make education pleasant and attractive—to lower the grade and remove the barriers to progress, and to make the discipline less rigid. The effect is not altogether good.

Wood and I were talking over old times a few evenings ago. We had had the same difficult course in college under the same instructor—a hopelessly inefficient instructor, he was, too. We had put a pretty loud howl at that time regarding the little help he gave us and the rigid results he required, but all to no effect. If we passed the course, as fortunately we did, it was because we set out to discipline our own minds.

"I guess it was a good thing for us, after all," Wood concluded at the end of our discussion, "it prepared us for the more difficult things of life which come to every man when he gets out into the world, no matter what job or profession he falls into." It is really discipline which counts most in education and in life. (©, 1929 Western Newspaper Union.)

Indians Mix Up in "Triangle"

Rapid City, S. D.—"Indian woman she elope just like 'paleface' woman," complains Long Wolf, full blooded Sioux, who is searching the Indian reservations of South Dakota and the territory adjacent for his erring wife, who eloped with another warrior of the tribe—John Poor Thunder. If he comes up with the elopers Long Wolf promises to send the wife stealer to the "happy hunting ground" of the Sioux via the knife or six shooter route. The deserted husband was in Rapid City recently striving to get some trace of the elopers.

city in the eastern section of South Dakota that his wife met Poor Thunder, who appears to be the Lothario of the Sioux tribe. His lovmaking with the wife of Long Wolf must have been fast and furious, for it was only a few days after the two had first met until they turned up missing. Long Wolf at once resigned his place with the show and started on the trail of the elopers. He traced them to various places on the Pine Ridge reservation, but in each instance when he reached the place where they were reported to be they had again fled. The trail is said to have finally led to Rapid City, but here the wronged husband was unable to find any trace of them.

It is thought they may have doubled back and gone to a remote part of the Pine Ridge reservation, or they may have made their way through the Black Hills to eastern Wyoming. While in Rapid City Long Wolf stated he would keep on their trail, if necessary, the remainder of the fall and all winter, as he was determined to punish the Indian "scalawag" who robbed him of his wife.

Refuses to Give Up

4 Cents to Bandit

Newark, N. J.—Joseph Rein, truck driver, refused to surrender the 4 cents he had in his pocket when a hold-up man jumped onto the running board of his truck and pressed a glittering knife against his ribs. Instead Rein pushed the man off the truck, drove to the nearest store, borrowed another penny and called police from a pay telephone. Detectives arrested a negro, later identified as the unsuccessful bandit.

The Cat Came Back

Elma, Wash.—A pet cat owned by Mr. and Mrs. George Birdeye has completed an 80-mile trip on foot. Nation's Quarrel Over Islands

Paris.—Although both the Quat d'Orsay in Paris and the foreign office in London make every effort to pretend to know nothing about it, there is a serious dispute as to the ownership of three tiny islands lying between the Jersey islands and St. Malo, on the French coast.

The Miniquieres, like the Jersey islands themselves, form a part of the old duchy of Normandy. Although these islands are within a few miles of the French coast and are French by tradition and language the Jersey group has belonged to the English for centuries.

Bathed by the Gulf stream, the islands have a climate like Florida, a strange contrast to the French mainland where the winters are rigorous. A Paris millionaire, Henri Leroux prominent as a heavy plunger on the bourse, decided to build a castle on one of the Miniquieres.

Believing that the island was French, he applied to the French authorities at St. Lo and obtained written authorization to build on the island and a rental lease of 99 years on the whole island.

The officials at St. Helier, in Jersey, heard of the building and ordered work stopped in the name of King George of England. The pretext is that the islands form part of the duchy of Normandy, and that to prove the sovereignty of the British king, a union jack is unfurled, symbolically, one day each year over the island.

The tradition of the duchy is that Leroux, if he wants to gain the ear of the sovereign ruler, must go to St. Helier and cry three times: "Haro, haro, haro. Help me, good prince, for a wrong has been done."

That tradition dates back to good old Rollo, and the crying must be done in a public place.

Leroux has in mind a much more simple solution; he plans to appeal to the Quat d'Orsay and if that does not produce action, to the League of Nations.

Modern World Wonders

The ancients referred to great works of art in enumerating the seven wonders of the world, but our present achievements are more along the lines of science. Today, therefore, we consider the modern seven wonders as follows: The X-ray and spectrum analysis, antiseptics and antitoxins, aeronautics, wireless and radio, telephone, telegraph and radium. At Last Use Is Found for Old Razor Blades

A problem which has hitherto baffled the greatest thinkers has at last been solved. The London Evening News publishes a solution of that question, "What to do with old razor blades." It says all the perplexed shaver has to do is to take his discarded blades to the nearest road contractor and let them take their place in the foundation of modern traffic ways.

For road-construction engineers are making use these days of almost anything in the metal line. Thousands of old tins, flattened out and purged of their foreign elements, are used weekly. A reporter who watched a London road in the course of construction found many other domestic articles also proving their use. One load, for instance, contained besides a few hundred tin cans, an old umbrella and the springs of a bed.

Hen Paid for Trip

A story of a hen that laid an egg while flying a mile in the air sounds like nature faking, but one at Mays Landing, N. J., did it, although it cannot be said that it flew on its own wings. Instead of that the hen was sitting in a basket carried in an airplane. The hen belongs to young Jack Brogan, to whom was given the opportunity to make a flight. He wanted to take his hen along and it went in a basket and soon a fresh-laid white egg was found in the improvised nest. The boy was more pleased with the record egg-laying than he was with his first ride in an airplane.

The Right Way to Redye Fine Silks

Textile makers always use special dyes for silk or wool. They know that is the best way. The makers of Diamond Dyes are the first to enable home dyers to follow this plan.

Next time you want to dye some of your more valuable articles of silk or wool, try the special Diamond Dyes in the Blue Package. They will give these materials clearer, more brilliant colors than any "all-purpose" dye. And they are just as easy to use as ordinary dyes. Like the white package Diamond Dyes, these dyes contain an abundance of the highest quality anilines. The blue package dyes silk or wool only; the white package dyes, or tints, any material. Either package; 15c, drugstores.

This Fast Age

Dr. Eli Moschowitz, an eminent New York scientist, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, declares that most of us live two lives now as compared with those of an earlier generation. "A man who attains the age of fifty today," he says, "has in reality lived one hundred years, as years were formerly reckoned; and judging by the deluge of inventions aimed at even swifter methods of accomplishments, the prospect of the individual of the future is that he will be an old man in experience before his adolescence has begun."

STORY FROM THE START

Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes' merchant ship Sachem is sunk off Portugal by a British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl who conceals her identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon. Fellowes goes to Lisbon, hoping to find a vessel America bound. He meets Captain Chater of the American ship True Bounty, an acquaintance. Chater offers him a berth as mate. Fellowes refuses, knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of the True Bounty. Cara induces him to sail as mate. Fellowes falls in love with her. The True Bounty is stopped by the British frigate, Badger, Captain Collishawe. Despite his American citizenship Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger a "pressed" man. Maddened at what he believes is Cara's and Chater's treachery he strikes Collishawe, who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat." Fellowes' hatred of the three becomes an obsession.

"I'm Captain Fellowes of New York, whom you cramped out of the True Bounty."

"How's your back?" snapped Collishawe. "Why aren't you on duty?"

Fellowes slipped out of the loose pea-jacket he wore, dropping a mass of bandages with the garment, and turned to expose his stripes to the Englishman's inspection.

"You ought to see it," he said. "You might like to describe it to Miss Inglepin, when you go to smoke your pipe in her father's garden."

Collishawe's cheeks whitened.

"No occasion for this exhibition—or for your insolence. You were flogged for striking your commander—you should have been hung; I made allowance for your excited condition." He hesitated. "It ought not to be necessary to have to tell you that the lady you mention was in no way responsible for your being pressed. If you're a gentleman—"

"But I'm not," objected Fellowes. "I'm a common sailor. I've been flogged to convince me of it—one hundred lashes of the cat."

Collishawe rubbed his chin, embarrassed, apparently at a loss.

"See here," he exclaimed impulsively, "I'm d—d sorry this happened. You acted most foolishly, but I wouldn't have ordered the cat if it hadn't been any way out of the mess you got yourself into."

"Oh, d—n you and your sympathy," Fellowes answered, gently venomous. "And d—n your lies. I know what you are up to. I know what Miss Inglepin is up to. You aren't fooling me."

The Englishman stared at him coldly.

"That will do," he rasped. "Go below. And if you insult me again I'll send you to the brig in strict confinement. Clinch!"

"Aye, aye, sir!"

"Escort this man to his berth. He's not to come on deck unless he conducts himself in accordance with discipline."

"Aye, aye, sir!" The bosun was tusted. And as soon as they were out of earshot of Collishawe: "Wot 'ave I been atellin' ye? Want to get that back cut up again? Only that the cap'n's kindly ye'd be stripped at the mast this mornin'."

Fellowes sobered.

"I hate him. I think I hate him more every day. I hate him for what he did to me. I hate him for being sorry he did it. I hate him— Oh, I just hate him. D'you understand, Clinch? I hate him! Whatever he does, I hate him!"

"Taint Christian, lad," rebuked the bosun. "Taint no wise Christian. Now, ere's yer berth. Lie down, and rest up a piece. Likely ye'll get some o' that hate out o' ye, then."

"No, Bob," Fellowes answered wearily. "It's a part of me. It won't come out."

CHAPTER V

Escape

Plying her regular patrol well to seaward of Sandy Hook, the Badger was the vidette of the New York squadron, always on outpost.

One of the first things Fellowes discovered was that the blockaders were in constant communication with the shore. At night sloops and peraguers would steal out from the Jersey coves or the Rockaway inlets, with fresh meats and vegetables—and information that was much more valuable. Well-dressed gentry would climb aboard the sloop-of-war, hats pulled low over their eyes, and be escorted to the cabin, where they talked into the small hours.

Obviously, Ben Inglepin's daughter was not singular in her disloyalty; the country seethed with factional strife as in the days of the Revolution. There must be many Americans who hated Madison worse than the stupid Prince Regent—Americans who would wreck their country, procure its defeat, sacrifice a measure of its independence, rather than see the Democratic administration triumph.

Fellowes regarded the intercourse between the blockaders and the shore as encouraging for his plans to escape. He was certain the tide of treason was flowing unchecked. The continuing visits of the contraband traders were sufficient proof, and the news that percolated from them through all ranks indicated how disastrously the national effort was being crippled by political jealousy and incapacity.

But he waited with unabated confidence. His back was entirely healed and he was glad to do his share of hard, physical labor. Work helped to dull the carking itch of humiliation. Collishawe ignored him, and he avoided Collishawe as much as he could.

With the crew he was, if not popular, respected. But then any man would have been respected aboard the Badger, who could boast the friendship of Bob Clinch and Cuffee (Cockroach). Clinch was all-powerful forward, and no sailor would have dared to risk the giant negro's wrath. The nigger, men said, fought with 'is teeth; he'd eat yer alive, if 'e got primed.

One July morning the Badger left her consorts off the Hook, hauled her wind and stood to the north-west on long, reaching tacks, and Fellowes' eye glinted expectantly when she closed a low, sandy shore that after noon, and dropped her anchor outside the line of breakers. The hunger in his face drew Cuffee to him.

Fellowes caught the negro by the arm.

"That's mine, Cuffee! That's my land."

In his excitement he had raised his voice slightly, and Tom Grogan rolled across the deck.

"Easy all, messmate!" advised Tom. "No need to git yer dander rizzed up. These landin' parties is reg'lar divarsons from the blockade."

"Landin' parties?" exclaimed Fellowes. "Who told you a party was going ashore?"

"Nobody, but I seed Clinch afusht with the long boat, and we ain't anchored here for to rest our spars."

Fellowes glanced aft to where the longboat lay on its chocks. Bob Clinch was bending over it. As Fellowes watched him, he straightened and strolled forward.

"Oh, Bob," called Fellowes. "What's this I hear about a landing party?"

"Cap'n's orders. Dark of the moon, ye see." Clinch winked mysteriously. "Fine time to raid 'emroosts."

"Is that what you're after?"

There was disappointment in Fellowes' voice.

"Ow should I know, lad? The cap'n ain't give me 'is confidance. All 'e says is: 'Bosun, landin' party tonight. Overhaul the longboat and pick me twenty good men. Pistols 'n cutlasses. Ye'll go with me.'"

"He's going, himself?" Fellowes asked eagerly.

"Aye, aye, lad. That's 'ow I understand it."

Clinch stumped off, and Fellowes fixed his gaze again on the shore that was so near, and so unattainable. He had, been right. Cara Inglepin's trea-

Vegetables Enjoyed by Epicures of Old Times

The beets of ancient Greece were black and white and the leaves as well as the roots were used. The leaves were generally preferred to lettuce, though lettuce was highly thought of for its cooling effect.

There are accounts of lettuce being served in its natural state at the tables of Persian kings as far back as 500 B. C. The Romans generally cooked it. Roman lettuce was black and its milky juice was said to induce sleep. In Sixteenth century England, where eight varieties were found, it was cooked or served with oil and vinegar.

Only in recent years have mushrooms been anything like abundant on the market, and outside the large cities they are considered a rarity still; yet mushrooms have been available for thousands of years. Said Pliny: "The last device of our epicures to sharpen their appetites and tempt them to eat inordinately is the cooking of mushrooms."

son was bearing fruit. Tonight, perhaps, it would flower. And he was helpless to interfere!

He groaned, and Tom inquired anxiously:

"Ye ain't goin' to be silly, 'n' fret caus' ye can't go in the longboat?"

"Dat him land," spoke up Cuffee. "Dat him home whar he lib."

"Not my home, Cuffee," denied Fellowes. "That's Fire Island, the Great South beach. My home is across the Great South bay beyond it—at Babylon, where the landing party are going."

"Who tole ye that?" demanded Tom.

"I'm as positive as I can be," the Long Islander concluded. "Collishawe, himself wouldn't go with an ordinary raiding party. No, he is going to meet her—Miss Inglepin—a cold note of passion rang in his voice as he spoke the name—and her father. At Chater's farm, of course. They must have something for him, political or military information—and if we could only get there in time we might raise the militia, and trap them all!"

"Mebbe so we swim fo' sho'," suggested Cuffee. "Cuffee him Krooboy. All Krooboy swim plenty. Cuffee swim fo' beach, pull yo' wid him."

Started and doubtful, Fellowes surveyed the expanse of restless blue water and the smother of breakers.

"It would be a hard swim, Cuffee," he objected. "I can swim a little, but—"

"I can't," grunted Tom.

"Cuffee pull yo' bofe," grinned the negro. "Dat easy fo' Cuffee."

"Foolishness," grumbled Tom.

"We must make a try for it, Tom. If you won't come—"

"Cuffee no let yo' drown," promised the negro.

"We'll stand by you, if you'll stand by us," Fellowes pleaded earnestly.

"But we must make a try for the shore. We may never have another opportunity. Why, we'd deserve to be flogged, if we didn't go!"

Tom spat disgustedly.

"Oh, I'll go," he agreed. "Flogged or drowned, it's all one."

Despite himself, Fellowes was unable to keep his eyes off Collishawe, methodically concerned with preparations for the longboat's expedition.

An undercurrent of excitement pervaded the crew. Each of the men selected to go was surrounded by a knot of friends, and Bob Clinch was trailed along the deck by sailors, who hoped to be chosen at the last moment.

Mr. Curry and the other officers were hurrying about their various duties; the gunner was inspecting pistol-flints, and parking bags of grape-shot for the light three-pounder which squatted in the longboat's bow.

Only Collishawe remained phlegmatic and undisturbed.

Watching Collishawe, fury slowly welled in Fellowes' heart. He pondered the thoughts which occupied Collishawe, tried to plumb the secrets concealed behind the Englishman's hawk-nosed face.

Battle lanterns shed gout of yellow radiance on the deck, and the longboat's company followed their captain down the Jacob's ladder, Clinch ticking them off at the gangway. Oars rattled in the thole-pins. "That you, Clinch? Take the tiller. Give way, men."

Fellowes stole forward. Men were dousing the extra lights. A pair of ship's boys were sparring by the main-hatch, egged on by a circle of sailors.

The confusion of the longboat's departure hadn't quieted down.

"Cuffee?" whispered Fellowes.

"Yah, mars'r." The negro rose from the windlass. "Tom been under bow-sprit heel."

"Good! We must go quickly."

They slipped over the catheads into the water that rippled purringly about the bow. Tom muffled a groan.

"Drown me, ye will," he murmured dismally.

"Cuffee no let yo' drown," returned the negro, placing one of Tom's hands on his shoulder. "Hol' on dar."

And he vanished in the darkness with the celerity of a fish, towing Tom's floundering bulk as easily as though his companion was a lump of cork.

Fellowes pursued at a more moderate pace. He couldn't see twenty feet beyond his nose; the Badger was a vague huddle of spars, in a few strokes more became invisible. He traced Cuffee's progress by Tom's puffings and snortings. It was easy, he told himself, driving ahead, hand over hand, legs kicking rhythmically.

Ah, but not so easy, he discovered soon, as the little waves kept slapping at his face, and his limbs grew heavier and heavier.

Plane Made of Ten Thousand Jewels

"The Spirit of Cleveland," the $400,000 jeweled airplane which was shown at the National Aeronautical exposition in Cleveland. Ten thousand jewels, including diamonds, rubies, topazes and emeralds, were used in the plane, which was built by H. W. Beattie & Sons.

REFUELING IN THE AIR CUTS TIME AND LOAD

Operation Easy at Full Speed, Say Pilots.

New York.—The extent to which refueling in the air may be used in commercial and military aviation is one of the problems in the minds of aeronautical engineers, writes George Gardner in the New York Herald Tribune.

This method was devised for the army plane Question Mark, which established an endurance record of 150 hours, 40 minutes and 15 seconds. That record has been surpassed several times. The St. Louis Robin was kept in the air 420 hours, 21 minutes and 30 seconds by supplying the ship with fuel and oil and food for the pilots from another plane.

It was used also by the Spokane Sun God for a non-stop round trip of 7,200 miles, from Spokane to New York and return, and by the Boeing-Hornet-Shuttle in its transcontinental mail test, which was sponsored by the army and the Boeing company.

The equipment is simple. The supply plane needs only an extra gasoline tank and a hose. The plane which is to receive fuel usually has a receiving tank, but the hose could be connected to the main tank if necessary.

Refueling flights that have interested the newspaper public since the Question Mark flight, however, have been stunt flights, for the endurance record, or, in the most recent cases to demonstrate the possibilities of long-distance flights.

The lessons to commercial flying may be applied to increase speed or the distance that may be flown without landing.

Cuts Time for Flights.

For commercial flying, only the first consideration is important. If it is not necessary to make a flight in the shortest possible time, the plane might as well take on its fuel at an airport.

But America demands speed. American business, particularly, demands that its correspondence be delivered with all possible haste, and that its executives make business trips with no delay.

If an airplane can save a half hour or an hour in a long trip by receiving an additional supply of gasoline from another plane in the air, this will be of value when such a saving is an essential.

Pilots who have participated in endurance tests are confident that refueling in the air can be done without lessening the speed of the plane.

Date ("Red") Jackson, one of the pilots of the St. Louis Robin, said that an airplane which refueled in the air could make a long distance flight as rapidly as a plane that flew with a large load of gasoline and did not stop for fuel, and, furthermore, that it could fly further if that was considered desirable.

"It is not necessary to slacken speed at all," Jackson said. "The St. Louis Robin refueled while traveling 80 to 100 miles an hour. It would be just as easy to refuel at 150 or 200."

"If the pilot of a transport plane gets his gasoline in the air, while he is in flight toward his destination, he can go along without any delay at all. If he has to stop at an airport for gas, he stands a chance of being delayed from fifteen minutes to an hour. Saves Wear on Equipment."

"Then, again, you must consider the wear on equipment. The deterioration of an airplane, aside from the motor, is largely in landing and in taking off. If you eliminate this, you are practicing economy."

Maj. Clarence M. Young, now assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics, is a champion of the refueling process. "I should think the logical step is to put it to use economically by refueling planes carrying full cargo on non-stop flights across the continent," he said recently.

"Instead of taking on a heavy load of gasoline at the start," he continued, "a plane could take part of its gasoline, be refueled several times en route and save much weight for payload. For instance, 400 gallons of gasoline, weighing about 2,400 pounds, might be required for a transcontinental trip. Why not take 600 pounds, refuel in the air as necessary and carry 1,800 pounds more cargo?"

Pennsylvania Aviator Has Air-Minded Dog

Lancaster, Pa.—Even the dogs are going "air-minded" here.

"Keystone Bozo," an English setter owned by S. E. Fraim, an aviation enthusiast, has about 15 hours' flying to his credit—all in his master's plane. He has made several long hops, including one of 300 miles, during which he slept in the cockpit.

The dog doesn't care for stunt flying because he is bowled about the ship too much.

Philadelphia.—When a man builds a three-motored plane, only to see it crack-up through some defect, it is time to get disgusted with such machines and cast about for some other method of rising above the earth which will not mean death and disaster.

CIERVA TELLS ABOUT AUTOGIRO INVENTION

Young Spaniard Explains His Windmill Plane.

Philadelphia.—When a man builds a three-motored plane, only to see it crack-up through some defect, it is time to get disgusted with such machines and cast about for some other method of rising above the earth which will not mean death and disaster.

Thus Senor Juan de la Cierva, friend of the king of Spain, sportsman and erstwhile member of parliament, came to discover the principle of the autogiro—the plane which has auxiliary windmill vanes which rotate in flight—the latest model of which he has been demonstrating in the United States. The advantages of the autogiro are the ability to fly at a stalling speed, to land without a run and to take off in comparatively restricted space.

Cierva is only thirty-three, but has been experimenting with airplanes since he was sixteen.

"I do not remember how old I was when I became interested in flying," he said, his speech heavily tinged with Spanish accent. "But I was very young. I will show you the first airplane I ever made."

He picked up a piece of paper, gave it a few deft twists and produced a miniature paper plane which he tossed into the air. It watched it glide slowly to the floor.

"There," he said, smiling happily. "That was the first. And when I was about fifteen, with my brother I made two gliders. They worked nicely, nearly always. But one day when we were gliding, my brother had a smash. We had to tell my father he fell off his bicycle. My father did not find out until ten years later that my brother had been hurt on the embryo flying machine. After the gliders, I built many planes. In 1911 I built the first Spanish plane. Then, in 1919, I built a three-motored ship. It crashed. I was disgusted. We must have something better, so I thought for a year.

"In 1920 I conceived the giro principle. In 1923 I flew the first of the machines. It was simple and flimsy, but I felt that I had reached a safe footing on the way to develop the giro."

Cierva takes a childlike pride in his pet and always grins happily when the amazing machine brings delighted applause from those who watch its operation.

When a White Collar Man "Goes Army"

Perhaps he doesn't learn a few things!

DON'T envy a man who "only has to work a typewriter." So we were told by Mr. Solon S. Bloom of 3503 Woodbrook Avenue, Baltimore, Md., whose health began to give way because his work gave him no bodily exercise.

"I decided to get away to a military training camp," says Mr. Bloom, "thinking the rough and tumble with the army would do me good for a month. I asked the doctor what to do about my condition. 'I've seen men, I've known men,' he said. 'I know what they eat, drink, and how they live. I know cathartics, physics, and all the ways men try to keep themselves regular—and the only two that go together well are men and Nujol. Nujol soothes and heals the membranes and expels bodily poisons normally, naturally, easily, so that you are regular as clock-work.'"

That was what Mr. Bloom learned when he left his typewriter and went into the army. If you are like most other people, you too will find that Nujol will make all the difference in the world in the way you feel.

Remember Nujol is not a medicine, for it contains no drugs of any kind. It is simply bodily lubrication that everybody needs.

You can get a bottle of Nujol at any good drug store, in a sealed package, for the price of a couple of good cigars. If you will start today and try it for two weeks you will agree that Nujol is the easy normal way to keep well and make a success out of your life. You will be astonished at the results!
