Benjamin Church of Lisbon, N. Church, a young naval officer, was seated opposite the "Great Emancipator" and saw Booth shoot him.

Famous Vatican Library

A curious feature of the Vatican library, in the custody of which Cardinal Ehrle succeeds the late Cardinal Gasquet, is the pains which seem to have been taken to conceal it. You turn aside in a corridor not far from the sculpture gallery, and pass through a glass-paneled door, screened by a grating. Within is a great chamber, exquisitely decorated, but, at a first glance, without any sign of books. The books are there, however—tens of thousands of priceless volumes—but all in closed cases and cabinets beautifully painted to harmonize with the general scheme of decoration.

Two Naval Heroes Named Perry

OLIVER HAZARD PERRY AT THE BATTLE OF LAKE ERIE

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

NAVY day (October 27) this year finds an interesting memorial nearing completion, for when the Perry homestead at Wakefield, R. I., is thrown open to visitors as a patriotic shrine, it will be not only a monument to two of our greatest naval heroes but to a family whose record in our naval history is unique. For that family was rich in "a naval heritage," if ever any American family was, and it is not to be wondered at, perhaps, that Oliver Hazard Perry and Matthew Calbraith Perry should distinguish themselves aboard ship.

Although Christopher Perry, the father of the two naval heroes, was only thirteen years old at the outbreak of the Revolution, he immediately enlisted in the Kingston Reds and served in the Continental army. He next served on a privateer, then on board the Mifflin, was captured by the British and for three months endured the horrors of the British prison ship, Jersey. Escaping from the Jersey, Perry enlisted on the Trumbull under Capt. James Nicholson and had a part in the brilliant victory over the British privateer, Watt, in 1779. Later he was captured again and sent to Newry, Ireland, as a prisoner of war. There he became acquainted with Sarah Alexander, a pretty Scotch girl, whose grandfather had fled from Scotland to Ireland and who had been left an orphan in her childhood. At the close of the war Christopher shipped as a seaman on a British ship bound for America. Sarah Alexander was a passenger on the same ship and upon her arrival at the home of Dr. Benjamin Rush in Philadelphia, Christopher sought her out and they were married. He took his bride to the Perry homestead in Rhode Island, a house that looked out toward the sea and from which her husband and her sons were to "go down to the sea in ships" and become officers in the navy.

There were five of them—Oliver Hazard, Raymond—H. J., Matthew Calbraith, James Alexander and Nathaniel Hazard. As if this contribution to her adopted country's sea forces was not enough, two of her three daughters married naval officers, Capt. George W. Rodgers and Dr. William Butler! The influence of this mother on her sons had much to do with their later fame. She told them stories of her warrior ancestors in Scotland; she closely supervised their education, she "fitted them to command by teaching them to obey" and when, still in their teens, they answered the call of the sea, she sent them forth cheerfully. She lived to see all of them make honorable records in the service of their country and two of them win fame and one of them receive the highest honors which his countrymen could pay him.

He was Oliver Hazard Perry, born August 23, 1785 in the home which is soon to be opened as the Commodore Perry Memorial. He entered the navy as a midshipman at the age of fourteen when war with France seemed inevitable. But it was not until Commodore Preble was sent to subdue the Barbary pirates that he saw his first active service in the war with Tripoli. In 1810 he was commissioned a lieutenant and placed in command of the schooner Revenge. The Revenge was wrecked off Watch Hill, near his home, but a naval board of inquiry not only cleared him of all blame for the disaster but highly applauded him.

By the time of the second war with England, Perry was known as one of the best ordnance officers in the navy and early in 1812 he was placed in command of a flotilla of gunboats in Newport Harbor. Then came the chance for him to win fame. The war was going badly for the Americans. The British had captured Detroit and were threatening to conquer the Northwest, which had been won for us by George Rogers Clark during the Revolution. To check them, it was necessary to obtain mastery of Lake Erie and there Perry was ordered to go, build a squadron of ships, defeat the British fleet on Lake Erie, which was manned by some of Nelson's veterans, and co-operate with General Harrison and his land forces.

It seemed like a hopeless task, but Perry never faltered. Making his way through the wilderness in a sleigh in February, 1813, he arrived at Presque Isle (now Erie, Pa.) and with the aid of Sailing Master Daniel Dobbins built five ships, despite a disheartening shortage of money, shipwrights, arms and sailors to man them after they were done. His green timbered squadron was joined later by four ships from Buffalo and with these he was expected to fight six well-manned British ships.

On September 10, 1813, the two fleets met off Put-in-Bay on the Ohio shore of Lake Erie. In less than two hours and a half, the Americans were victorious. They had inflicted a loss on the British of 200 killed and 600 made prisoners. Perry's loss was 27 killed and 96 wounded. Before the smoke of battle had cleared away he sat down and, resting his cap on his knee, used this impromptu desk for penning his immortal dispatch to General Harrison: "We have met the enemy and they are ours. Two ships, two brigs, one schooner and one sloop."

Perry's victory had saved the Northwest again to America. The news of it thrilled the country. Congress gave him a vote of thanks and awarded him a gold medal. He was promoted from master commander to captain. At the close of the war he was placed in command of the Java, a first-class frigate, and sailed with Decatur for the Mediterranean. In 1819 he was made a commodore and placed in command of a squadron which was sent to the West Indies to suppress piracy. There he fell ill of the yellow fever and on August 23, 1819, he died in Port Spain, Trinidad. He was buried there, but in 1826 the American government sent a sloop of war to bring his body back to his native state. He was buried at Newport with all the honors due him and today a tall granite monument marks the last resting place of the "hero of Lake Erie."

Matthew Calbraith Perry was nine years younger than his brother, Oliver Hazard, and served as a midshipman under him on the Revenge. While he never attained such distinction by one brilliant feat of arms as had his brother, his life was one of continuous action. It is summarized by a recent biographer as follows:

"He conveyed the first colony of negroes from this country to Africa; his ship regulations for use on the African station were a model long followed in the navy; he fought pirates in the West Indies, voyaged to Mexico, protected commerce from Greek pirates in the Mediterranean, founded the first United States naval apprentice system, commanded the North Carolina, the finest warship in the world, took John Randolph as envoy to the czar in the first American warship to enter Russian waters, was entertained by the founder of the khedival dynasty in Egypt, made a brilliant naval demonstration in the harbor of Naples, served ten years shore duty at Brooklyn navy yard where his work caused him to be called the chief educator of the navy, studied lighthouse illumination and went to Europe on one of the first regular steamships, enforced the Webster-Ashburton treaty in Africa, had oversight of the steam navy in the Mexican war and breached the walls of Vera Cruz with naval guns when Scott's light artillery failed, and visited the waters of Newfoundland to settle the fisheries dispute."

But the thing for which he is most famous is the fact that he organized and commanded an expedition in 1854 which was to have world-wide significance. For centuries Japan had cut herself off from contact with the nations of the Western world and had steadily refused to have either trade or diplomatic relations with "foreigners." Under the excuse of making arrangements for protecting American ships engaged in the Pacific whaling industry, who might be shipwrecked on the coasts of Japan, Perry proceeded there with four warships. Despite the suspicion and thinly-veiled hostility of the Japanese, the American commander conducted his negotiations so diplomatically, combining firmness with the politeness, so dear to the heart of the Oriental, that on March 31, 1854, Japan signed a treaty of peace, amity and commerce with the United States. From that day dates the end of the "hermit nation" and the rise of modern Japan to a position among the world powers. It was brought about by a Commodore Perry, whose diplomatic victory was no less brilliant than the victory in warfare won by another Commodore Perry 31 years earlier.

Yiddish Not Hebrew

Yiddish is spoken by a large number of Jews of German or Polish ancestry, and is not the natural language of the Jewish people, who speak modern Hebrew. The Jews who left Germany in the Middle ages for the Slavic lands of Bohemia, Poland, Galicia and Lithuania spoke, besides Hebrew, the middle high German. In course of time Hebrew and Aramaic and Slavic words became customary, and a certain modification of the sound of the German words also took place, and by the sixteenth century a world-defined dialect, or language, known as Yiddish had become common. It was not adopted as a literary language until the Nineteenth century.

PILOTS BLAMED FOR MANY AIR ACCIDENTS

Fatalities in Army Service Are Analyzed.

Washington.—Sixty-three per cent of all fatal airplane accidents in the army air corps, reserve and National Guard during 1928 were caused by errors on the part of the pilots, according to a survey by the office of the chief of the air corps.

The result of a study and analysis of military aircraft accidents will be published at intervals by the air corps and circulated among military pilots as a means of discouraging carelessness and to set the pilots to thinking of means of preventing accidents, it has been announced.

The national advisory committee for aeronautics, through a special committee on aircraft accidents, has been engaged in a similar study since February 18, 1928. Two officers of the army air corps are members of this committee.

The air corps study of military air fatalities shows that accidents due to spins and stalls resulting from faulty piloting are decreasing, while the number of collisions seems to remain fairly constant.

The number of fatal crashes due to errors on the part of pilots has increased steadily in proportion as other causes decreased. In 1926 only 32.3 per cent of accidents were due to pilot's errors. In 1927 the proportion increased to 44.13 per cent and last year to 63 per cent.

Of the 63 per cent of crashes caused by the "human element," 24 per cent were due to error of judgment, 30 per cent to poor technique, 3 per cent to disobedience of orders and 6 per cent to carelessness or negligence.

Overconfidence Blamed.
For the past year approximately half the fatal crashes due to pilots' errors may be traced to overconfidence, air corps officers stated.

"Inasmuch as 85 per cent of pilot fatalities occurred among officers with less than two years' experience," it was reported, "it would indicate that our young pilots are overconfident and overzealous."

"During this year 46 per cent of the pilot fatalities occurred with pilots of less than 200 hours of flying, 17 per cent had from 200 to 500 hours to their credit, 25 per cent from 500 to 1,000 hours and 12 per cent from 1,000 to 1,200 hours."

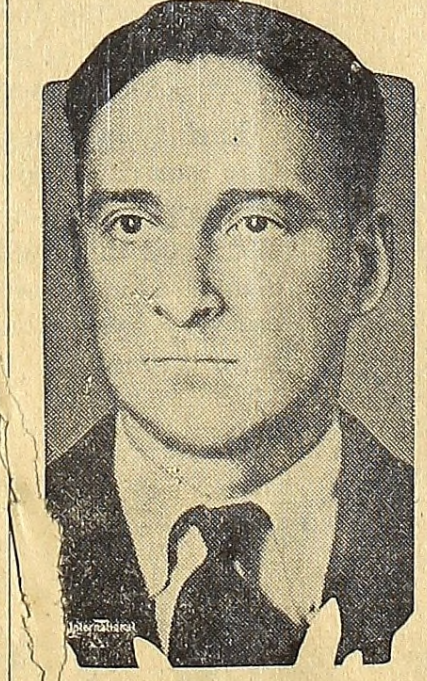

"The successful pilot of today is the one who eliminates unnecessary hazards, when the taking of such hazards is not mandatory in the proper performance of the military mission. He learns from the costly experience of his predecessors." With modern equipment, the well-trained and alert pilot of today, who always uses good common "horse sense" can expect to live a long time. Ask the old-time pilot with over 2,000 hours to his credit."

In connection with its study of airplane fatalities, the army air corps also has undertaken a study of forced landings, including those which do not result in damage to equipment or injury to personnel. The inspection division of the air corps has ordered that pilots submit detailed reports on all forced landings, defined as being unpremeditated landings, whether caused by adverse weather conditions, failure of the airplane or its power plant.

Study Forced Landings.
In the past it has been the policy to forget forced landings. If the plane or motor needed adjustment the matter was attended to and no more thought was given the affair. The inspection division now is requiring that all these minor flight difficulties be reported, accompanied by an analysis of the cause of the landing.

By gathering and studying statistics concerning such landings the inspection division hopes to be able to recommend action leading to the reduction of forced landings. If the statistics show a certain type of motor develops magneto trouble, the material division will be called upon to remedy the evil. If persistent fogs or bad weather cause forced landings of more than average frequency between two points, efforts will be made to provide more frequent weather data to pilots flying the bad stretch.

Leighton W. Rogers, former European representative of the Department of Commerce, has been appointed head of the new division of the Department of Commerce known as the aeronautics trade division.

Airplane of Future Will Be Luxurious

Factors which are adding to the public's belief in flying are ideas such as slotted wings, the autogiro, metal construction, wide landing gears, wheel tail skids, closed cabins and others, according to William B. Stout, aviation authority.

"If there is one thing that we are altogether decided upon it is that the present airplane is not going to be the future airplane," says he. "We are building today merely a forerunner of what we can see in the future."

"The problem today is not only an engineering problem, it is a human, psychological problem. Engineering must solve it, but we must understand first that safety is the first fundamental. Safety in our present planes is largely dependent on power, but we must go further before we can satisfy the public that we are building something it wants to ride in. If it looks like a grasshopper with a broken back, the people will not ride in it."

"Now that we are beginning to make trips of ten hours and more, they are going to demand more luxury in the air than they ever demanded on the railroad. That is going to put a load requirement on the engines in the matter of larger fuselages in proportion to wing areas."

AIRPORT PROGRESS IS FOUND VERY UNEVEN

Ruth Nichols' Observations During Long Tour.

Washington.—Airport progress in the United States is exceedingly uneven, according to Miss Ruth Nichols, who recently completed a flight of 12,000 miles, visiting forty-six states, in the interest of the aviation country clubs movement, of which she represented the board of governors. She characterized airport conditions as in a state of development. Some ports were excellent, while others, she found, were much too small and badly situated to give promise of safe operation. One landing field, dignified by the name of airport, the flier said, was only about 1,100 feet long and from 150 to 200 feet wide, and was entirely surrounded by woods.

Miss Nichols, who flew the plane she used during the whole trip, made landings at more than one hundred cities. She never had to make a forced landing, she said, and found that she could reach the ground at very slow speeds with the training ship and could average a landing speed of about thirty-eight miles an hour for a good three-point landing.

Fuel consumption averaged about eight gallons an hour at 1,475 engine revolutions per minute. Oil was changed after every five or six hours of flying during the tour and the motor inspected after each 400 miles or so. At the end of 250 hours of flight the motor was taken down at Buffalo, but Miss Nichols said that no service was found to be required.

Little variation was noted by the pilot in the requisite length of take-off or in landing speeds at varying altitudes until the really high fields, such as those in Colorado, were reached. Above 6,000 or 7,000 feet Miss Nichols said she found long take-off runs and comparatively high landing speeds necessary. Some of these high fields had mile-long runways, she added.

During the course of the tour ten cities were added to the ten already planning country clubs of the air.

Canada Will Install Wireless Beacons

Washington.—Radio beacons for air mail service in the prairie provinces of Canada are to be installed by the Department of National Defense, according to a report received by the United States Department of Commerce from A. H. Thiemann, trade commissioner at Ottawa.

"The utility of the radio beacon in all sorts of weather is considered an improvement over the light beacons along the mail routes," it was reported, "although lights will be continued at airports. Air mail planes will carry on their instrument boards devices consisting of two little reeds painted white, which vibrate in sympathy with the signals sent out by the radio beacons. The reeds are set side by side in a such a manner as to change in length as the strength of the signals increases or decreases."

"When they show white stripes of the same length the pilot knows that he is on the right course, and when one is longer than the other he knows that he has deviated from his path."

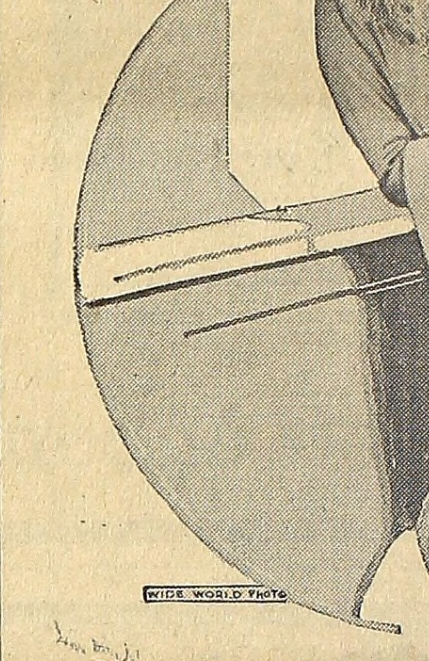

The first two stations will be established at Cordoba, Manitoba, and Regina, Saskatchewan. Others may be erected later at Maple Creek, Saskatchewan, and Calgary, Alberta.

Archbishop Blesses Planes
In a picturesque scene, attended by many visitors, airplanes from the Loreto airport, Italy, were recently blessed by the Archbishop of Loreto. This has grown to be a custom taking place on a yearly religious holiday. While the planes zoom above the church, some of them stunting, the archbishop pronounces benediction.

ELABORATE USE OF FUR MARKS STYLING OF COATS AND SUITS

MORE and more clearly is a line of distinction being drawn between sports clothes and those for formal afternoon wear. Wherefore the perfectly appointed wardrobe must perforce include this season, not only a swagger suit of sturdy tweed for sports, but an elaborately styled ensemble, preferably of broadcloth, becomes a necessary luxury.

As to the very formal cloth suit or ensemble, fashion declares that there is no possibility of going too far in the matter of elegance and ornateness.

There is no doubt but what the designer of the handsome costume in this picture has "caught the vision" as to the rich details in matter of fur-trim and such, which constitute a really and truly formal afternoon ensemble.

For this gorgeous outfit Patou selects the finest of broadcloth in a delectable rose-beige tone, the fox fur being an accurate color to match. Because of the dignity of the new styles, all the prestige formerly accorded to broadcloth has been restored which again proves the gentility of present modes.

Another illuminating style point is the lengthened hemline stressed in the full-plated skirt. As to the elaborate fur treatment, there is much to be gained as to the new fashion trends. The collar, for instance, flares so decidedly and becomingly away from the face, which is a feature made much of this season. The lavish fur bordering, too, accenting the shapely hemline of the coat bespeaks a detail of outstanding significance, for luxuriant and massive fur borders add to the elaborateness of the better coats. Last, but not least—the muff! What a vista of opportunity this fanciblack velvet coat, like the one in the picture, which flaunts a black fur cuff on one sleeve, a white fur cuff on the other, and a collar that goes fifty-fifty on the black-and-white question. The whole trend of fashion is just like that—simply thrilling through and through with its chic, charm and striking originality.

As is the case with many of the new fashions, the coat in the lower picture highlights the black-and-white theme. And though the idea in itself is age-worn, the interpretations as given this season are utterly and refreshingly different from those which have gone before.

All through the scheme of things fashionable one sees the somberness of black happily relieved by white. Especially is a play being made on combining black furs and white furs. For instance, a seal or black velvet coat is enlivened with perky bows of white ermine or lapin, and usually the black hat boasts a single or a series of corresponding white fur bows.

With a black velvet jacket suit mlady wears a white crepe satin blouse, or one of glistening white transparent velvet if her pocketbook so allows. This effective black-and-white costume she tops with a snowy angora or white chenille-crocheted toque. Her boutonful muff reveals to those who are planning their autumn and winter costumes.

Perhaps that which this costume proclaims, most of all, is the fact that the individualized mode is the thing it is plainly to be seen from fashions such as this, that there is in prospect an era of real elegance in dress wherein the afternoon costume enters invites the best efforts of creative genius and which encourages fabric and fur elegances detailed to a nicety and with that versatility which tunes each costume to the wearer.

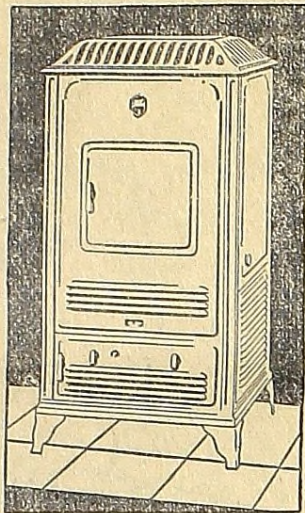

Anything is apt to happen in the name of fashion this season—even that, for instance of a handsome niere is, of course, white, the newest thing being to substitute a cluster of little black-and-white ermine tails for flowers, with a corresponding ermine motif on her hat.

The latest message from Paris which has to do with black-and-white, is that of flat white fur embroidered with black chenille. Wonderfully effective are the ensembles which line the up-standing collar of a black velvet coat with snowy ermine or lapin, the same showing in bold relief a flower-patterned handkerchief with black chenille. To this the designer adds white fur streamers, their scarf ends also elaborated with black hand-stitchery.

Much-Traveled Dog Wears Shoes

"Bill," who has walked from New York city to Los Angeles and is on his return transcontinental hike with his master, Don Smith, wears specially made wool-lined shoes that protect his paws from the hard and rough roads. He gets about 900 miles out of a quartet of shoes.

Lights of New York

For Baby

New York.—There are, even in this day of fabulous royalties and sales of motion picture rights, writers who are not wealthy. Of several such that I know, one recently became a father and all his friends showered the young son with gifts—appropriate clothing, silver spoons, mugs and what-not.

"But the best present of all," the writer told me, "is one good old George X sent. George gave my young hopeful two $20 gold pieces, and my wife and I have been instructed not to start the child's bank account with them. Instead, we must, each morning, hold the coins close to the baby's eyes and clink them together.

"As he grows up he will realize what real money is, and he will be trained to grab for it whenever he sees it."

Sensitive Fellow

Here is a story they are telling about Jimmie Durante, comedian. Durante, who used to play the piano for a singing waiter named Eddie Cantor, is known far and wide as Schnozzie, because of his de Bergerac nose. He is, perhaps, sensitive. At any rate, rather than have people laugh at him, he expends tons of energy in making them laugh with him.

He was playing golf one day, out on Long Island. Part of the course lay alongside a railroad track, near a station. A crowded passenger train had pulled in, just as Durante was getting ready for a tee shot.

Decidedly nervous, Durante was the last of a foursome to drive. He took a terrific swing, and missed the ball entirely. Without a word he started down the fairway.

His companions called to him:

"Hey, you missed the ball!"

Durante gestured for them to pipe down:

"I know it," he said, guardedly, "but look at all of those people in the train watching me. They don't know it."

Detective Story

A colored man walked into a pawn shop with a $250 camera. The pawn broker was suspicious and questioned the man regarding where he got such an expensive instrument. The colored gentleman thereupon departed hastily, not even troubling to take the camera, and not getting a ticket for it, either. The pawnbroker turned the camera over to police, who found a roll of film in it. This they had developed and prints made from it. The pictures were scenes aboard a yacht and at obviously expensive beaches. "Aha!" said the detectives, "A rich man owns this camera." One snapshot showed a close-up of a man in yachting costume, and a detective recognized the subject. It was Edmund O'Brien, an actor and the son of a former Supreme court justice. Pursuing the picture clew still further, the detective learned that the camera had been stolen from O'Brien, who hadn't even bothered to notify the police.

SPORTS ENSEMBLE

A tan suede jacket, belted and trimmed with buckled bands of suede at the collar and cuffs, a sport sweater and an accordion pleated tan silk crepe skirt made up this interesting sports ensemble. A final touch is added with a roman striped scarf and a soft tan felt hat banded with Roman striped ribbon.

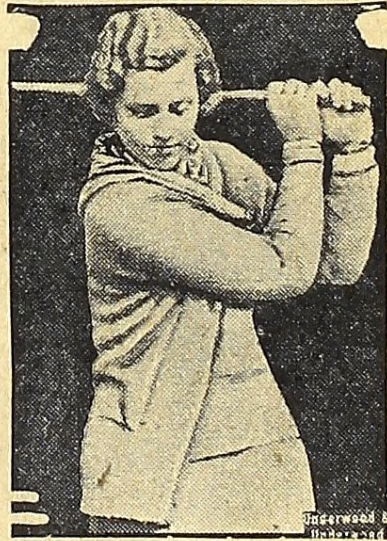

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Freezing Points Vary

While water freezes, or the ice melts at 32 degrees Fahrenheit, some liquids have a different freezing point. Mercury freezes at 39 degrees below zero, alcohol at 202 below zero. Salt water freezes according to the amount of salt it contains, the mark for sea water freezing averages 28.5 degrees above. Alcohol supplants mercury in thermometers used in very cold countries.

FOUR TIMES CHAMPION

Glenna Collett won the women's golf championship of the United States for the fourth time and the second consecutive year, over the Oakland Hills course, at Detroit. She defeated Mrs. Leona Pressler of Los Angeles, 3 and 3, in the 36-hole final, which was as fine a golf match as women ever played.

Needless Suffering

The next time a headache makes you stay at home—

Or some other ache or pain prevents your keeping an engagement— Remember Bayer Aspirin! For there is scarcely any pain it cannot relieve, and relieve promptly.

These tablets give real relief, or millions would not continue to take them. They are quite harmless, or the medical profession would not constantly prescribe them.

Don't be a martyr to unnecessary pain. To colds that might so easily be checked; to neuritis, neuralgia; to those pains peculiar to women; or any suffering for which Bayer Aspirin is such an effective antidote.

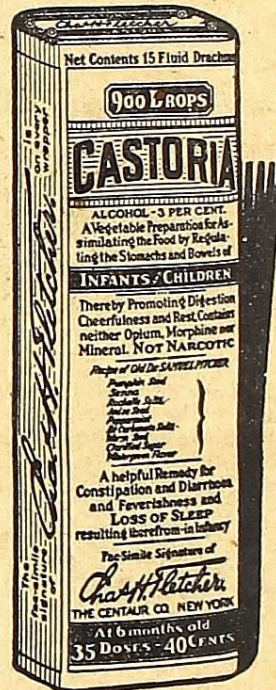

For your own protection, buy the genuine. Bayer is safe. It's always the same. It never depresses the heart, so use it as often as needed; but the cause of any pain can be treated only by a doctor.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

Ambition begins with a wish, but there is no fool like an old fool— unless it is a young one.

An Ailing CHILD

Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so. You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

New York Great Silver Center

New York.—The biggest store of pure silver in the United States lies under the pavement in Spruce street. Its repository is the vault, reaching out under the street, of a company which so dominates the world silver market that it is virtually a clearing house for the metal.

Bars and ingots of the treasure are constantly coming into the vault from the mines of the world, and as constantly being shipped away to mints and jewelry manufacturers in the United States and Europe.

Insurance Rate Low. The business of getting the pure silver in and out of the vault is highly organized. Armored cars and caged wagons bring it in and carry it away. It is carried up and down between the sidewalk level and the steel vault in electric elevators, and armed attendants are always on guard. The trucks that carry the treasure back clear up to the elevator shaft so that the silver can be transferred with minimum exposure, and most passers-by do not even stop to watch the operation. At the docks the metal is handed under guard, and on ships and liners it is kept in specie rooms. So efficiently is it transported that the insurance rate from New York to

HE HAD A BOTTLE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

They were talking about England and what that small country has accomplished in power and influence.

"What one thing has helped more than anything else," one of the older men asked, "to put England where she is today?"

The boy to whom the question was put thought a little while seriously and then answered:

"Respect for law, I think." He was quite right. No one who has kept his eyes open in London, for instance, can help but be impressed with the reverence of the Englishman for the law and for those who are delegated to enforce it. A policeman in America is often a joke and a byword. In England he is respected, loved almost, and his raised hand is the hand of God. He is the friend of children and of the crippled and the unfortunate; he is a haven of safety for strangers and his word puts an end to disturbances of every sort.

Three men were sitting in the observation car as I rode up to Minneapolis. They were beyond middle age; they were evidently experienced, and I gathered from their conversation that they were officials of the road. As we rode along they pointed out the one to the other, where changes should be made, where some subordinate had, perhaps, made errors in carrying out regulations. A fireman stoking an engine, as we halted at a division point, was wasting coal and breaking some regulation evidently, which had been laid down for his guidance. One of the men took the number of his engine, and I knew that some one would sooner or later hear about the dereliction. Law should be obeyed.

The oldest man of the group rose, finally, to go to his compartment.

"What did you do with my overcoat?" he inquired of his companion. "I have a bottle in the inside pocket and I shouldn't want it broken." He winked knowingly at the other man and whispered something interesting into his ear, and they went off together. I had seen him the night before sitting half drunk in the smoking room, mumbling incoherently, a glass of liquor in his hand too stupefied with drink to set the glass down or to finish its contents. No one better than he could realize the danger of one of his engineers or firemen or brakemen violating the prohibition law, but for him it was all right, the matter of a joke in fact. His attitude explains a lot of anomalies in American life. We do not respect law, though we expect the other man to do so. We want ourselves to cling to the forbidden bottle.

I talked to a young fellow a few days ago who had violated a well-known college regulation and had knowingly and intentionally done so. "Well," he said, in extenuation of his dereliction, "every one violates law, some time. You do, don't you? I don't see why I should be better than the rest especially when the majority of the fellows get away with it."

He could not see the illogic of his argument. He simply wanted his bottle in spite of prohibition.

India is only 15 cents on $100 worth, and in 25 years not an ounce of silver has been stolen.

Is Handled "Naked."

The silver is handled "naked," with no covering around the bars. Handlers are careful not to rub them against each other and, although the metal in its pure state is comparatively soft, the loss from scratching in shipment averages but five ounces in every 8,335 pounds. Before the war London was the great silver bullion market. Now New York has usurped the place, principally because the use of silver has become so much more extensive here.

The phrase "born with a silver spoon in his mouth" hasn't much significance any more in this country, for almost every family has some silverware now, and since the war American industry has found many new commercial uses for silver. The laws require sterling silver to be 925-1000 pure. The silver in the Spruce street vaults runs higher than 999-1000 pure.
