MEMORIAL SERVICE GIVEN TO WAR HERO

Memorial services to Glenn P. Staley, an Iosco county boy who made the supreme sacrifice for his country in north Russia on September 17, 1918, were held Wednesday at the Methodist church at Hale. Rev. George Smith of Whittemore officiated. Military rites were given by Jesse C. Hodder and Audie Johnson Posts, American Legion. Six comrades who served with him in the Russian campaign acted as pallbearers. A large number of people, including the relatives and many veterans of the Great War were present to pay their last tribute. The remains were laid to rest in Evergreen cemetery.

Nearly one hundred martyrs, mostly Michigan men, were brought home, the culmination of one of the most poignant patriotic pilgrimages in American history. Under loving escort the dead were taken to Detroit, where tribute was given by that city. Staley was brought Monday to East Tawas with an escort from the U. S. Army. Wednesday he was taken to Hale by members of Jesse C. Hodder and Audie Johnson Posts, American Legion, and "Polar Bear" veterans.

Glenn Staley met his death near Syskol, a short distance from Archangel, Russia, in an allied drive toward the Yemsta river. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Staley of Plainfield township.

F. O. GILBERT, MASONIC GRAND OFFICER, DIES

Dr. Frank O. Gilbert, of 2126 Sixth street, Bay City, Grand Lecturer of the Masonic Grand Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Michigan, for 22 years, and probably the best known member of the Masonic fraternity in Michigan, died at General hospital, Bay City, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at the age of 75 years. Mr. Gilbert had been in failing health for the past several months, or since he suffered an attack of lagrippe last summer, but improved considerably and was able to attend a Masonic Grand Lodge function in Albion on November 8.

On his return from Albion he began to fail rapidly and last Saturday he was removed from his home to General hospital, where it was ascertained that there was no hope for his recovery. About six weeks ago, Mr. Gilbert went to Escanaba to conduct a lodge of instruction, and while there suffered a collapse and was brought back to Bay City. He rallied from that, however, and was able to attend other meetings since then.

During his long years as Grand Lecturer, Mr. Gilbert became known to thousands of Masons throughout the state who attended the lodges of instruction conducted each year by every Masonic body. A Mason since 1882, he was signally honored by the order, being one of the few 33rd degree Masons in Michigan.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY WILL MEET MONDAY

The annual meeting of the Iosco County Agricultural Society will be held at the Court House, Tawas City, December 9, at 2 p. m. for the purpose of electing officers and directors for our 56th fair.

Members, especially boosters, are requested to come and it is hoped all directors and superintendents will be present as it is not too early to start preparing for our next fair.

FAMOUS BROADWAY MUSICAL COMEDY HITS IN TALKIES

Praising "The Cocoanuts" is like giving an endorsement to June sunshine. Beyond question, it represents one of the greatest accomplishments of the talking screen.

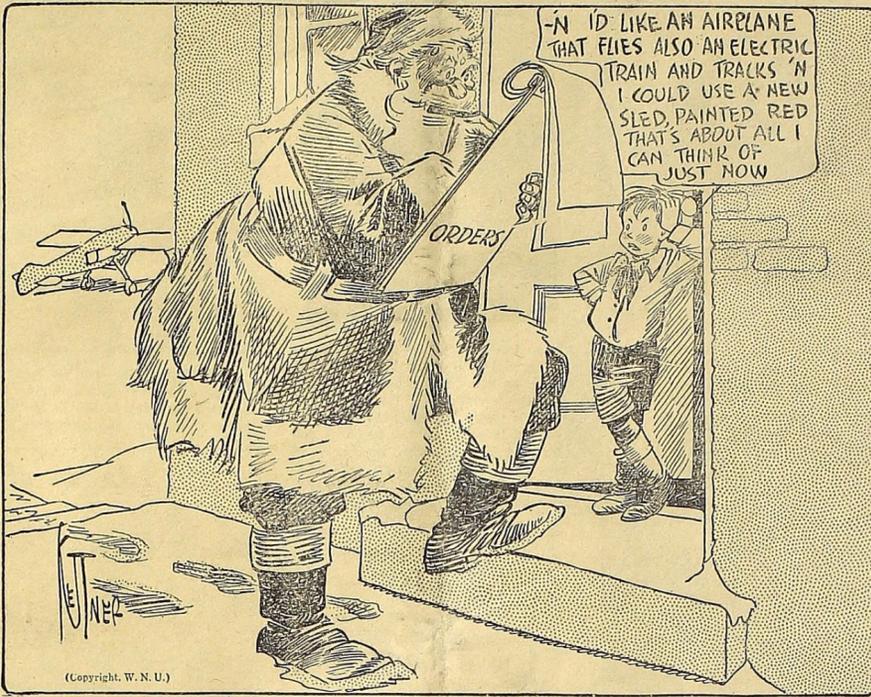

"The Cocoanuts," which will be shown at the State Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, is the first film musical comedy as such. Here is the method of musical comedy brought to the screen, all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing, all-laughing. If the lovers have a song in mind when they are in conversation, they sing it. If the chorus feels like interrupting the action with one of their dances, they skip right out. And through it all, the Marx Brothers, the world's four funniest men, the most high-powered and popular comedy team on the Broadway stage twist a gay thread of laughter.

"The Cocoanuts" is the Marx Brothers' great stage hit which played New York at $6.60 for one year. The music was composed for the original stage show by the king of composers, Irving Berlin. Berlin added a new theme song, "When My Dreams Come True," for the screen presentation and Oscar Shaw and Mary Eaton, in the romantic leads, sing this tuneful melody.

The setting is the picturesque sea-coast playground of Florida, reproduced with lavish beauty and boundless imagination. Groups of beautiful girls make up the dazzling chorus and the photography introduces many unique and surprising effects.

"Officer 666." Be careful. He will be around December 9 at Community House.

Orders Are Now Being Taken

WILLIAMS—CURTIS

A quiet wedding took place Saturday afternoon, November 30th, when Miss Vera Williams, daughter of Mrs. Clara Williams of Reno township, was united in marriage to Roy Curtis of Plainfield township. Rev. Larson, pastor of the Reno Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride was beautifully gowned in pink georgette trimmed in pink silk lace. She wore a white bridal wreath with pink buds and carried a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums and carnations. Attending her was her sister, Mrs. Alva Hutchinson, who wore a dress of flowered crepe and a wrist band of flowers.

The groom was attended by his brother, Howard Curtis. The home of the bride's mother was tastefully decorated in pink and white, the chosen colors of the bride. After congratulations were extended, the guests repaired to the dining room, where a sumptuous dinner was spread. Immediately thereafter the happy couple left for Saginaw. They will be at home to their many friends in Plainfield this week.

WILL FORMALLY OPEN

NEW LAKESIDE TAVERN DINING ROOM SUNDAY

A formal opening of the new dining room at the Lakeside Tavern will be held next Sunday, December 8. Manager and Mrs. M. H. Barnes invite their friends in the two cities and surrounding community to inspect the many improvements to the tavern at that time. Reservations for dining service Sunday may be made today or Saturday.

About 80 friends gathered at the Tavern last Saturday evening and an excellent time was enjoyed in dancing and cards. Pot luck lunch was served. The balloon guessing contest in the lobby was won by Mrs. Roy DePotty.

The improvements to the Tavern include a handsomely decorated lobby, a large beautiful dining room, a large modernly equipped kitchen, and twenty additional bedrooms, eight completed and the others nearing completion.

SCHOOL NOTES

High School

Let us all remember the sale of the Christmas seal of the National Tuberculosis Association which is being conducted by the pupils of the Lutheran and public schools. A prize will be given to the room which sells the most in our community, and an individual prize will be given to the pupil in each room who sells the greatest number of seals.

The citizenship class of the high school is making a study of the importance of health. The keeping of health is rated by educators as the most important item to be emphasized by the schools of America. It is certain that if anything can be done to cause our young citizens to realize that the road to good health is the preservation of what we have rather than seeking health after it is gone, an important step has been taken.

Seventh and Eighth Grades Those in the seventh grade who received a "B" average for last month's work are: Thomas Thompson, Agnes Roach; Eighth grade: Arlene Leslie, Arnold McLean, Dorothy Ulman and Jack Mark.

Fifth and Sixth Grades We are glad to have Effie Prescott back in school with us. The fifth grade is studying Italy in geography. George McDonald was absent on Monday.

Primary Betty Ulman brought us a pretty new German. Kathleen Davis has been ill for three weeks. We hope she will soon be well. We all had a lovely Thanksgiving.

COACH BURNS; 32 PASSENGERS; NO ONE INJURED

Cool-headedness on the part of two men passengers, the driver and a relief driver, was responsible for the safe escape of 27 women and the infant child of one woman from a bus carrying the Lovina Rebekah lodge degree staff of Bay City to East Tawas when the coach was destroyed by fire two miles south of Standish early Monday evening. No one was injured although several of the occupants were momentarily overcome by smoke.

The degree team left Bay City late in the afternoon for the northern city where degrees were to be conferred on the Tawas Rebekah lodge candidates. Taken into Standish in automobiles of motorists going in that direction, the degree team resumed its trip to East Tawas several hours late when a second bus, dispatched from Bay City, reached Standish. The return trip was made Tuesday morning.

The fire started from the heater on the bus and was first noticed when sparks were seen dropping on the pavement at the rear of the coach. Smoke also became noticeable in the bus and George Harding, the driver, stopped to investigate, finding that the outside of the bus at the rear was on fire. Arnot Parker, relief driver, Roy R. Burley, and William Moore, the latter two members of the degree team, also alighted when the stop was made.

Parker seized a fire extinguisher and attempted to check the blaze. His efforts, however, were of no avail and it was decided that the passengers had better leave the coach. By this time the bus was filled with heavy smoke and in addition to this, the lighting system went out to add to the difficulties. Most of the women heeded the appeals of Parker and the other men to take their time in reaching the exit and left the bus without difficulty.

Several of the passengers including Mrs. Etta LaBelle, and Misses Myrtle and Edna Vebeck, Mrs. Jessie Campbell, Mrs. Nine Burley and the latter's small son were lifted out of the bus through the windows which were broken and apparently were none the worse for their experience.

Occupants of the bus in addition to the two drivers and Burley and Moore were: Mesdames Fern Burley, Margaret Douglas, Ellen Teriva, Ida Giffon, Anna Domka, Lovina Gates, Effie Bradley, Rosalie Booth, Ella Landon, Elizabeth Smith, Ada E. Reinhardt, captain of the degree team, Myrtle Watson, Florence Christensen, Anna Johnson, Ina Preyore, Jessie Campbell, Elizabeth Meyers, Florence McKeldie, Margaret Alexander, May McEachren, Irma Jones, Etta LaBelle, Hazel Adams, Anna Briggs, the Misses Myrtle and Edna Vebeck, and Mrs. Nina Burley and her small son.

BAY CITY FIVE DEFEATS

TAWAS INDEPENDENTS
The Tawas Independent basketball team was met with defeat in its first game of the season at the hands of the Rowley Bros. Oil Co. five of Bay City. The contest took place at the Community House and resulted in a score of 19 to 14.

Due to the lack of practice, the local cagers were somewhat out of form. Nevertheless, they went into the game with lots of vim and provided plenty of opposition for the Bay City aggregation at all times. The end of the first half saw the visiting team leading by a score of 13 to 4.

Moeller was the leading scorer of the game, ringing up ten points for Bay City. Hogan, Tawas right forward, proved dangerous to the visitors until removed from the game on account of personal fouls.

NEW LICENSE PLATES ARE NOW ON SALE
Sale of 1930 automobile license plates started Monday in the office of Register of Deeds Frank F. Taylor.

It has been the custom for years to open the plate sale December 1, which, however, fell on Sunday this year.

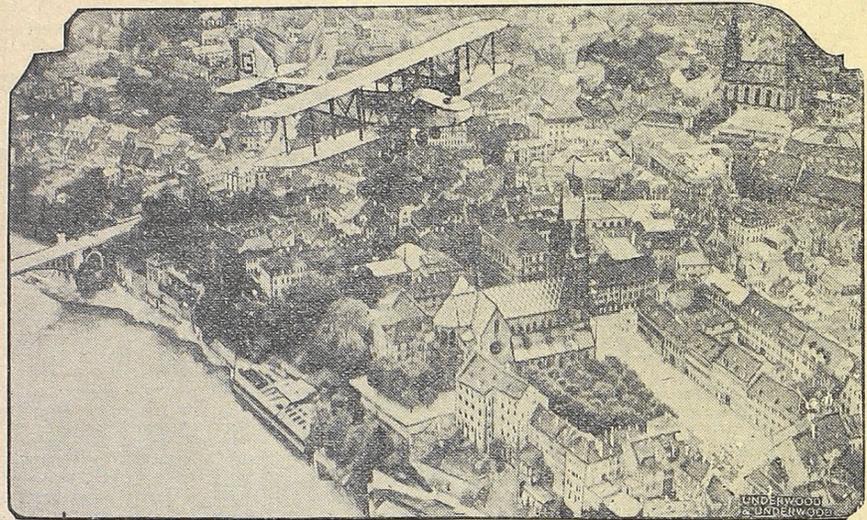

The new plates will be put in use immediately. Owners of new cars for which bills of sale are dated before December 2, will be required to pay a 1929 fee unless affidavits are filed to the effect that the cars were not driven before that date. The 1929 fee will not be required for cars bought on or after December 2. Or, if they were licensed during 1929, no additional fee for this year will be charged when the 1930 plates are bought, said Mr. Taylor.
"I earnestly request automobile owners to come early for their plates so that we may avoid the last minute rush as much as possible this year," the Register of Deeds stated.

PRESENTS THAT CAN BE GIVEN AT CHRISTMAS TIME

Crochet Crepe Twist Mules

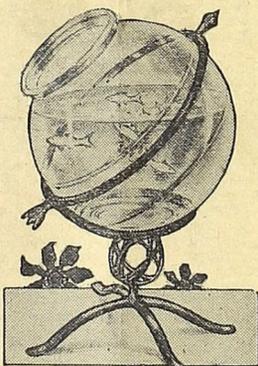

An ideal Yuletide gift for the young girl who loves boudoir finery. These dainty "mules" are crocheted of crepe twist which looks like raffia. It's really hard-twisted crepe paper and it comes in the loveliest colors. Six skeins make one pair of mule tips. Mount them on satin padded soles. Sew on tufts of gay ostrich flues as an extra beauty touch.

Decorative Buffet Ensemble

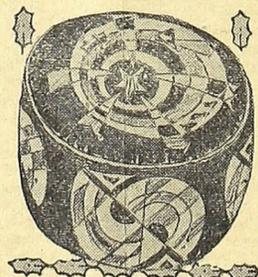

Women interested in sealing wax flowercraft will be fascinated with this resplendent ensemble consisting of candlesticks and centerpiece. It glorifies buffet or formal dinner table with equal grace. They are teaching this fascinating art in fancywork departments where materials for paper flowers are sold. To tell in this brief space "how to make" would be too long a story. Suffice it to say that the bases of candlesticks and the tree are formed of melted-to-softness sealing wax piled in a mass and then left to harden. The flowers and leaves are cut from crepe paper, wired and lacquered with transparent sealing wax paint. A Christmas gift worth receiving, we'll say!

Gift of Distinction

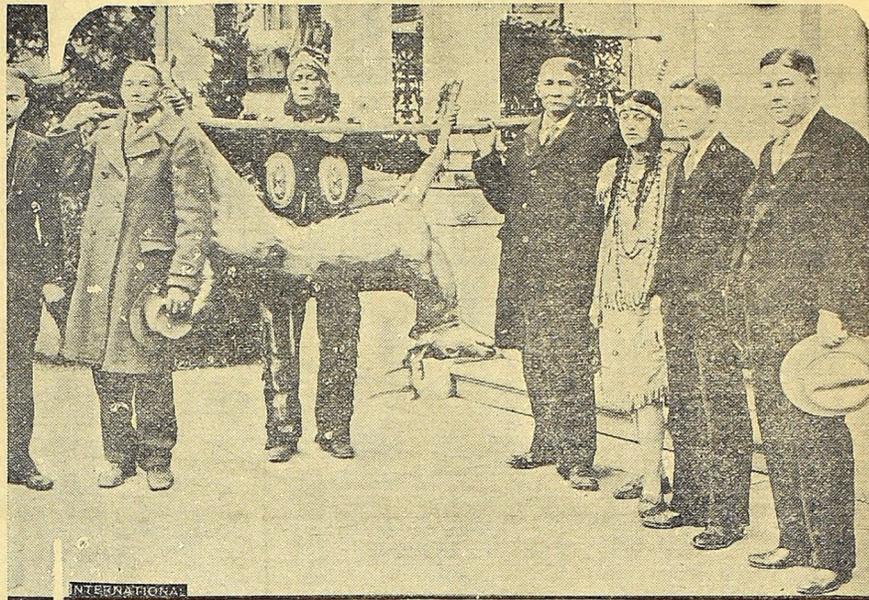

This aquarium is suggestive of a geographical globe, showing the terrestrial meridian and vertical plane of the earth's axis. Not only does this unique article qualify as a Yuletide gift of distinction which will grace any environment of culture and refinement, but then there's the goldfish—think what a "Merry Christmas" they are sure to have in this home of world-wide dimensions.

Hassock of Enamel Cloth

Here's a Christmas present which either Mister or Mistress will welcome. It is of enamel cloth, distinctly modernistic in its hectic colorings and striking design. Brings a wanted dash of color into any room. Quite one of the most popular types shown this season.

Virginia Indians Follow Custom 309 Years Old

Chief George M. Cook of the Pamunkey Indian tribe accompanied by a delegation from five tribes of Virginia, with the first game killed during the hunting season which the red men presented to Governor Byrd. Col. Australian "States"

The political divisions of Australia were originally called provinces, but when the commonwealth of Australia was formed in 1901 they became known as states, New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia and Western Australia and Tasmania are known as the "six original states."

Corn Grows Big in Nebraska

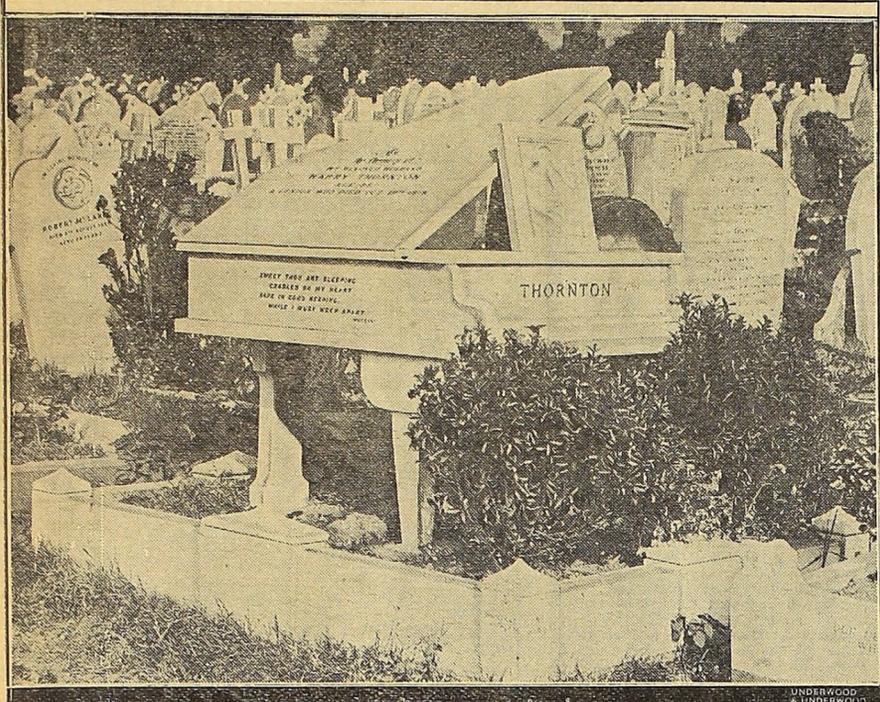

Representative Edgar Howard of Nebraska, a land long noted for its interesting agricultural products, gave his colleagues from the other parts of the "Corn Belt" a surprise with this mammoth ear of corn measuring twenty-five inches in length and weighing about twelve pounds, which was grown near Columbus, Neb.

"Here Lies—"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

RECENT press dispatches carried the news that Dr. William P. Rothwell of Pawtucket, R. I., has caused to be cut out a huge boulder in Oak Grove cemetery in that city, where he will be buried, this inscription: "This is on me." Known as an ever-generous host, Doctor Rothwell has said "This is on me" so many times while paying the check that he wants it to be his last word. When he dies, he says, he wants no mourning among his friends, and he believes that the familiar words on his tombstone will bring smiles to them instead of sorrow.

Perhaps the strangest tombstone in the world, shown in the photograph above, stands in Highgate cemetery in London, England. It is a marble piano erected "To the memory of My Beloved Husband, Harry Thornton, Age 35, A Genius Who Died Oct. 19th, 1918." His epitaph also includes this stanza from a poem by the composer, Puccini:

Sweet thou art sleeping
Cradled on my heart,
Safe in God's keeping,
While I must weep apart.

The Rhode Island doctor is not the first to write his own epitaph and to do it in a half-jesting mood. Perhaps the most famous of all American epitaphs was written by that first great American, Benjamin Franklin, at the age of twenty-three. It was:

The following from a cemetery in Elizabeth, N. J., dated 1781:

Stop, Passenger, here lie the remains of a woman who exhibited to the world a bright constellation of the female virtues. On that memorable day, never to be forgotten, when a British foe invaded this fair village and fired even the temple of the Deity, this peaceful daughter of Heaven retired to her hallowed apartment imploring Heaven for the pardon of her enemies. In that sacred moment she was by the bloody hand of a British ruffian dispatched like her divine redeemer through a path of blood to her long wished-for native skies.

The Body of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN printer (like the cover of an old book, And stripped of its lettering and gilding) Lies here food for worms; Yet the work itself shall not be lost, For it will, as he believed, appear once more In a new and more beautiful edition Corrected and amended by the Author.

A good example of the combined "historical" and "admonitory" epitaph is found on the monument of Elihu Yale, founder of Yale college, which reads:

Under this tomb lies interr'd Elihu Yale of Place Gronow, Esq., born 5th April, 1648, and died the 8th of July, 1721, aged 72 years. Born in America, in Europe bred, In Africa travelled, and in Asia wed, Where long he lived and thrived, in London died, Much good, some ill, he did; so hope all's even, And that his soul thro' mercy's gone to heaven. You that survive and read, take care For this most certain exit, to prepare, Where, blest in peace, the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in the silent dust.

His wishes were not respected by his family who thought that some other epitaph than this, which reflected his career as a printer, would be more appropriate. In the case of Robert Louis Stevenson, however, it was different, and upon Stevenson's monument in Samoa appear these beautiful lines which he wrote:

Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie,
Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.

Many of the Colonial epitaphs were long-winded affairs, but the prize goes to the brass tablet, dated 1778, which appears on the walls of St. Peter's, the oldest church in Bermuda. It reads:

This be the verse you grave for me;
"Here he lies where he longed to be,
Home is the sailor, home from sea,
And the hunter home from the hill."

The self-chosen epitaphs of two other famous men are nearly as well known. Hilaire Belloc, the historian, chose for his:

When I am gone, may only this be said—
His sins were scarlet, but his books were read.

To the Memory of George Forbes, M. D. Whom living A singular complacency of manners joined with many useful talents and eminent virtues. Render'd highly estimable Blessed with a convivial disposition In the cheerful hour of social festivity He shone irreprehensible And an agreeable companion Ever assiduous in furthering good humor and the enjoyments of sociality friendly to mankind His endeavors to mitigate the evils of life which bore himself with temper and philosophy were not alone confined to the healing art. Long exercised by him with much reputation But were likewise exerted In composing differences Restoring friendships interrupted And promoting Peace, harmony and mutual good Understanding Among his fellow men Having acquitted himself with approbation In the several relations of life As he had lived, respected and beloved, So he died. Lamented and regretted for those virtues And many others which

On the tomb of the poet Gay in Westminster abbey appears this couplet which he wrote:

Life is a jest and all things show it,
I thought so once and now I know it.

A walk through an old cemetery will reveal some interesting facts about the things which people wish to have known about them after they are gone. Especially is this true of the epitaphs written during the Colonial days in America and the early days of the republic. Many of them warn the "friend" who is passing of the certainty of death and judgment. In some cases the passer-by is hailed as "passenger" instead of friend, as witness the following from a cemetery in Burlington in the same state appears this one:

Here lies the body of Mary Ann Loder, She burst while drinking a sedlitz powder, Called from this world to her heavenly rest, She should have waited till it effervesced.

Mr. Kippax is the authority for this one, although he does not say where it may be found:

Here lies the body of Deacon Spear, Whose mouth did reach from ear to ear. Stranger, tread lightly o'er the sod For if he yapes, you're gone,—by cod.

This one comes from Connecticut:

Here lies cut down like unripe fruit The wife of Deacon Amos Shute; She died of drinking too much coffee Any Domyiny eighteen forty.

A similar one, over the grave of a former slave who lived in Savannah, Ga., tells the passer-by that:

Here lies old Rastus Somminy Died a-eating hominy In '59, anno domini.

In an Indiana graveyard there is this brief record of a tragedy:

Here lies I Killed by a sky Rocket in my eye.

In an Ohio cemetery is an inscription, often quoted, which reads:

Under this sod And under these trees Lie the body of Solomon Pease. He's not in this hole But only his pod; He shelled out his soul And went up to his God.

What could be more appropriate than this one, written for a Long Island (N. Y.) carpenter:

No wonder he sawed short life's span For long he was a (n)ailing man.

Brief and to the point is this from Schenectady, N. Y.:

He got a fish-bone in his throat And then he sang an angel note.

And here is an old epitaph, date unknown, which in these modern days of motor cars and reckless drivers should be a warning to all of us. Especially: Is it recommended that "Pedestrians, paste this in your hat!"

Here lies the body of William Gray, Who died maintaining his right of way. He was right, dead right, As he sauntered along, But he's just as dead, As if he'd been wrong.

Wipe Out Fowl Pest

The heavy hand of the government fell so emphatically upon the invasion of the United States by an alien foe that within two months of the invasion the foe was exterminated.

The foe in question was one of the most dreaded of foreign diseases from the farmers' point of view—the European fowl pest.

It was discovered when several farmers in Morris county, New Jersey, reported a strange disease which had broken out among their chickens. Prompt investigation of the first reports, which were received in June, disclosed that the dreaded pest had reached this country. Within two weeks all infested fowls and numbers of others which had been exposed were destroyed, and after a month without further reports of the disease, the federal officials were convinced that the outbreak had been suppressed while in the stage of outbreaking.

Tho' not entered on this tablet are forever engraven On the loving memory of his surviving friends. He died Jan'y 9th, 1178, aged 63 years.

If the epitaph chosen by the Rhode Island doctor seems a bit flippant, he has plenty of precedent for this kind of jesting. John R. Kippax, a Chicago man, has made a collection of unusual epitaphs, some of which would seem to be more appropriate for a joke book than a graveyard. There is the epitaph of eleven-year-old Mary Jane in a cemetery in Cape May, N. J., which reads:

She was not smart, she was not fair, But hearts with grief for her are swellin'. And empty stands her little chair— She died of eatin' watermelon.

In the town of Burlington in the same state appears this one:

Here lies the body of Mary Ann Loder, She burst while drinking a sedlitz powder, Called from this world to her heavenly rest, She should have waited till it effervesced.

Mr. Kippax is the authority for this one, although he does not say where it may be found:

Here lies the body of Deacon Spear, Whose mouth did reach from ear to ear. Stranger, tread lightly o'er the sod For if he yapes, you're gone,—by cod.

What could be more appropriate than this one, written for a Long Island (N. Y.) carpenter:

No wonder he sawed short life's span For long he was a (n)ailing man.

Brief and to the point is this from Schenectady, N. Y.:

He got a fish-bone in his throat And then he sang an angel note.

And here is an old epitaph, date unknown, which in these modern days of motor cars and reckless drivers should be a warning to all of us. Especially: Is it recommended that "Pedestrians, paste this in your hat!"

Here lies the body of William Gray, Who died maintaining his right of way. He was right, dead right, As he sauntered along, But he's just as dead, As if he'd been wrong.

Man's Vanity

There are two occasions when we men think we look splendid—when we rig up in evening clothes and when we have on the regalia of the Grand Inside Doorslammer.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Wisdom

Who is wise? He that learns from every one. Who is powerful? He that governs his passions. Who is rich? He that is content. Who is that? Nobody.—Franklin.

YOUTH FAVORS LEOPARD COAT; SLENDERIZING SATIN FROCKS

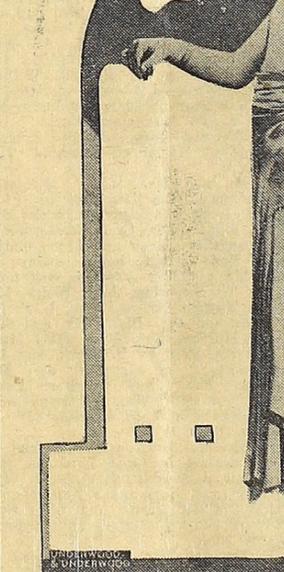

RAH! RAH! RAH!
The leopard coat wins at the football game. This year it is the leopard coat which is laying siege to the heart. Incidentally, the pocket book, of the young woman who aspires to dress up to the standard fashion sets for outdoor occasion. Most every coed who is style-alert if she is not already the happy possessor of a leopard coat covets unto the point of determination to acquire one even if she has to break into her Christmas fund at the bank to pay for it. And who can blame her with such captivating models to tempt her as are shown in the picture?

This handsome coat emphasizes two important style points, namely: the favor for beaver as a trimming and the vogue for cunning little muffs. Beaver as a trimming both on contrasting furs and on cloth is one of the featured styles of the season.

As to leopard not only for entire coats but wherever opportunity affords, this showy, spotted fur is being intriguingly worked into the mode this season. An outstanding fashion is that of the black cloth fur which is trimmed with leopard. Then, too, it is smart for this yellow-spotted pelt to finish off the neckline and cuffs of the seal or beaver coat. And again milliners are making wonderfully clever hat-and-scarf sets in which leopard fur plays a spectacular role.

Anyway you take it the novelty fur coat is a very important style factor in the outdoor enthusiast's wardrobe. A type which registers with chic in the sportsy group is the coat all of cream colored lapin with self collar and cuffs, and which flares from the

BEAUTIFUL EVENING GOWN

Then, too, any one of the off-white shades is adorable for the evening gown.

Many of the ultra satin frocks omit the usual flower corsage, featuring instead a one-shoulder strap of glittering rhinestones, to which pendants are suspended which, falling as they do, oftentimes to the waistline, are hard to see.

With these satins of classic simplicity very little jewelry is worn. The footwear also is in keeping with the general scheme, slippers being most often of the identical satin, or else dyed to match.

If your preference runs to velvet, then velvet let it be, for some of the most fetching gowns noted at opera and dance are superbly modeled along princess lines, their subtle pastel tones being not the least of their charm.

to every type is something to admire. It is amazing, too, what a success they are making of it—playing, as they are, the princess theme in every conceivable variation.

After all, it would seem as if this so-called princess silhouette, which is causing such excitement in the style world, is nothing more or less than a starting point of adventure for designers who, through artful fabric manipulation, are arriving at new goals of sartorial achievement.

In lower picture, dress design which "carries on" along lines a la princess. is shown at its best. This slenderizing satin frock is typical of the new style trend which exploits sophisticated simplicity. Here we see fabric manipulation brought to a high artistry. Also are we brought to a realization of the slenderizing possibilities of the new princess lines as fashion interpreters them.

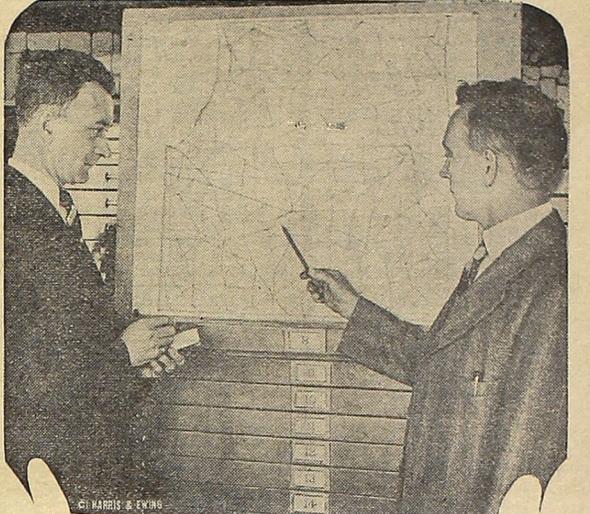

Much of the charm of the formal satin frock which is alike flattering to madam or mademoiselle, centers in its enchanting tones and tints. Glimmering white satin, for all-white is so very smart this season, competes with exquisitely feminine delicate pinks, or that which is so fashionable in Paris at the present moment—pale blue

Making American Airways Charts

Raymond L. Ross (right), chief of the airways charting section, and Martin A. Leibold of the coast and geodetic survey, completing the first sectional United States airways chart which shows 41,000 square miles in the Detroit region. It is to be followed by 82 similar charts, and the entire project will take about fifteen years.

DIRIGIBLE TO LAND ON SEA IS PLANNED

Burney Designs Working Model of Airship.

London.—The amphibian airship is poking its blunt nose over the aviation horizon. After months of experimenting, in secret, it has been brought to the working-model stage by Commander Sir Dennis Burney, builder and designer of the giant British dirigible R-100. The seagoing dirigible already is being called a revolutionary creation.

Five times as big as the Graf Zeppelin, two and one-half times as big as the R-100, it is designed to alight on water as well as on land. It can be moored to a buoy floating in sheltered harbors; it will be able to maneuver stably in a 35-mile-an-hour side wind, Commander Burney asserts, and can be towed to a dock at the water's edge as if it were an ocean liner reaching port.

Has Great Possibilities.

If it comes up to Commander Burney's expectations, it will emancipate airships from the thrall of fixed landing fields, mooring masts and ground crews. So far it is little more than a project fortified by successful experiments with working models. Its construction has not been undertaken by the air ministry, and several years must elapse before Commander Burney finds the money necessary for his task. But he is determined to go ahead with his experiments and with the ultimate building.

Already he foresees a day when his mammoth silvery airship will float out of the clouds toward New York harbor, carrying 150 or more passengers. To watchers on the Battery she will be a puzzling sight—like and yet unlike the Graf Zeppelin and the Los Angeles, with which New York is familiar. Her long, gleaming envelope will be flattened above and below, giving her an elliptical shape when seen head-on instead of the circular cross-section shape of existing Zeppelins.

Pontoons to Take Ballast.

Beneath her envelope will be a hull with giant pontoons, built on the lines of a ship. Instead of turning south toward Lakehurst, she will glide down gently, slowly, to the surface of some sheltered water—perhaps Jamaica bay or the Great South bay, where there is comparative freedom from shipping. The two great pontoons will scoop water for ballast, thus holding the airship down while her passengers are taken off in small boats. Finally the enormous bulk of the dirigible, weighing 350 tons, can be towed like the Berengaria or Majestic to a dock at the water's edge.

What Burney has done with his seagoing airship is simply to make the water his landing field. It has necessitated far-reaching structural innovations to prevent the airship from being blown over by a strong side wind. The most outstanding of these is, of course, the elliptical shape—a daring and frankly experimental departure in aircraft design. It achieves four objects: a reduction in wind resistance, a reduction of height, a wider spread for the all-important pontoons, and an increase in the dynamic lift at a given speed.

Canada Starts Arctic Service of Air Mail

Calgary, Canada.—Air mail service has been extended to Aklavik, a settlement on the Arctic ocean in northwest Canada. The first flight was made by Capt. Wilfred May, chief pilot and operations manager of air service, who flew a Bellanca seaplane.

The route stretches 1,800 miles into the wilderness of northwest Canada, from the source of the Mackenzie river to the Arctic coast.

The transport company's contract with the Dominion government calls for six deliveries of mail at Aklavik each year, three of which are to be during the winter months. In addition to contract mail service, the company will provide passenger transportation from Calgary and Edmonton, to points in Saskatchewan, Alberta, and Manitoba.

MOTORED GLIDER IS LIKELY ERE LONG

May Be Built With Small "Outboard" Engine.

Washington.—Glider flying is likely to develop a plane flown by an engine comparable to the outboard motor used on small boats, according to the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce.

Such use of gliders would require stronger construction of the ships than at present. Glider models have been used as the basis of the design of some types of planes with the motor mounted in the usual way, and many problems of aerodynamics have been worked out with gliders.

Gliders are constructed in this country by four factories, according to the aeronautics branch, one of them being at Seattle, Wash.; one at Lake Orion, Mich.; one at Kansas City, Kan., and one in Massachusetts. Prices range from $100 to $700. Machines may be bought as knockdown models with blueprints showing how they are to be assembled.

The Department of Commerce has drafted requirements for glider construction similar to the requirements for motored airplanes. These cover design load for wings, control surfaces, landing gears, fuselages and control systems, covering, towing, equipment and instruments and inspection flight tests.

Gliders not equipped with control surfaces are not approved by the Department of Commerce, as they are not considered safe. Manufacturers of gliders can get approved type certificates for their machines as motored airplane manufacturers get for their craft. Identification of gliders by numbers is provided for.

Flying of gliders is developing as a sport. National glider associations assist novices to learn the art, and sponsor races and other contests. Glider enthusiasts believe, too, that learning to fly the motorless craft is a logical step in learning to fly motored airplanes, as they are controlled in the same way.

Gliders sometimes are towed behind powered craft. The Department of Commerce, however, believes that the types of gliders now in use are not strong enough to stand the stress of towing.

Mortgage Firm Uses Plane for Inspection

Omaha.—A new use for the airplane has been discovered here. A farm mortgage company is using planes to make land inspections and photographs for advertising and mapping purposes. Aerial photographs, taken from a 2,000-foot altitude, have all the advantages of a map and a wealth of graphic details beside, according to A. L. Cramer, land appraiser.

Indian "Book of Genesis"

Washington.—An American aboriginal narrative poem, described as the Indian "Book of Genesis," has been translated into English.

The work was completed by J. N. Hewitt of the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution after thirty years of work.

The poem traces the Indian conception of the creation of man and is expected to prove a valuable contribution to American letters, both for its intrinsic literary value and for the light it throws on the workings of the Indian mind in attempting to solve the eternal problem.

The bulk of the epic relates the adventures of the Dehaehiyawakho, an imaginary man-being who is called the master of life.

Before his "arrival and creation of man and the world" there was believed to have been a "sunless and moonless skyland, lighted only by the snowy white flowers of the great tree of light."

Much confusion is created in the mind of the average reader by the amazing phenomena detailed in the poem. This, Mr. Hewitt explains, is because of the unsimilarity of creative thought between Indian mythology and the workings of the more familiar and, consequently, better understood Greek and Roman mythology.

Dehaehiyawakho, for whose origin there is only nebulous explanation in the primitive lyrics is portrayed as the creator of man while his brother, Ohaa, roughly corresponds to the theological devil, according to Mr. Hewitt.

The creator won the government and rulership of all living things by a game of bowl and plum pits with his grandmother, in which he shook as dice the heads of chicadees kept magically alive and acting according to his bidding.

The songs and stories which generation after generation of Iriquois have handed down by word of mouth depict the thought and adventures of the two brothers.

They are prepared for their first appearance by Mr. Hewitt, who, deprecating the loss of emotional stress which is lent only by the Indian tongue, believes the beauty of the primitive imagination, which is retained in the translation, will compensate for this loss.

"BACKS" IN ABUNDANCE

Pickers of All-America football teams this season have the sympathy of Amos Alonzo Stagg, the "grand old man" of the University of Chicago. "In my 40 years of football, I have never known a season when there was such a super-abundance of real backs," Stagg said. "There are at least a dozen players who stand out from the pack—men who are entitled to consideration for All-America honors."

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

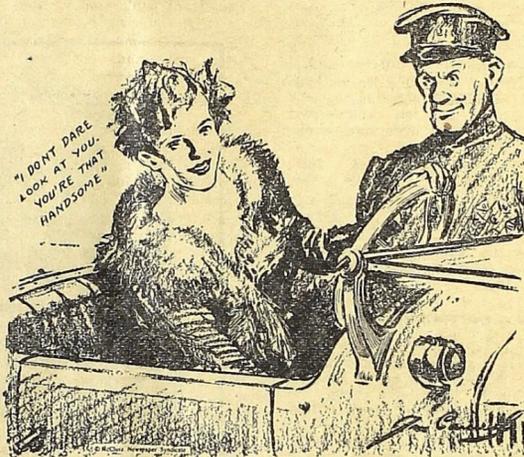

Centipedes

This member of the worm family was so named because it had so many legs it was thought there were at least a hundred. However, thirty-one pairs is the largest number of legs ever found on one. The commonly seen centipede is harmless, although some tropical species are poisonous and often reach eighteen inches in length.

Safety Vest for Aviators

Washington.—A new oxygen-breathing device has just been perfected here, intended to prevent the drowning of aviators trapped by seaplanes that crash in the water, or caught under their parachutes after a jump that brings them down into a river or the sea. It is the joint work of Chief Gunner C. L. Tibbals, well known for his inventions of submarine safety devices, and Frank H. Hobson of the naval bureau of construction and repairs. As yet it has received no official name, but is provisionally called the seaplane rescue safety vest.

and belt, equipped with two long pieces of rubber hose through one of which the wearer inhales and through the other exhales; a nose clamp to prevent the sudden rush of water from suffocating him; a tiny canister containing soda lime, which serves to purify the breath while eliminating carbon dioxide, and a bottle containing sufficient oxygen to keep a man afloat at least half an hour after he has jumped into the water from his chute. However, if it so happens that the flyer has not had a chance to use his parachute and therefore hits the water while in the plane, he can readily gain access to a larger bottle always carried as an emergency measure in the ship. This will supply a human being for about an hour and a half.

Murphy Wedding Held; Many Murphys Attend

Troy, N. Y.—There was an all-Murphy wedding here recently. Vincent A. Murphy and Miss Catherine R. Murphy were the principals. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert C. Murphy, and the bridesmaid was Miss Eileen Murphy, sister of the bride, and the best man Clarence R. Murphy, brother of the bridegroom. Even the ushers were Murphys.

Spot "Favored" by Murderers

Yonkers.—Westchester county authorities are faced with the third murder of a woman in the township of Greenburgh since last April, the decomposed and partly dismembered body of a young woman having been found in a gully off the Ardsley road on the Yonkers-Greenburgh line.

The spot is three miles from where Earle Peacox burned his murdered wife's body last April, and about six miles from where some one shot down Mrs. Bliss Marshall and dragged her body into the woods a few weeks ago, just as the Peacox trial was coming to a close.

A young man, hunting in the woods near St. Andrew's Golf club, pushed his way through the heavy underbrush into the gully and stumbled over the body. He went to the home of District Attorney Coyne in Yonkers and told the prosecutor what he had found.

The prosecutor called several Yonkers policemen and the hunter guided them to the spot where he had seen the body.

The head and right hand were missing from the body. What little remained of the body was naked, except for a pair of black pumps on the feet. A cheap wedding ring and an imitation gold ring, with three glass stones in it, were on the left hand. The back of the neck was covered with thick dark reddish chestnut hair, which had been bobbed.

Coyne and the police examined the body minutely, in the hope of finding the mark of a weapon, but were unsuccessful. The body was moved to a morgue in Yonkers, where Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire examined it.

Coyne said his opinion was that the body had been lying where it was found at least several weeks and possibly as much as three months. The body of Dorothy Peacox was found last April in a patch of woods, similar to the place where the latest body was found.

no telling what she will do when a fellow gets out his cigarette case and offers to light up for her.

A lot of us are good, not for mere goodness's sake, but for what goodness may bring us—security, reputation, advancement, freedom from gossip and criticism. In the old revival meetings which used to occupy a considerable amount of our attention during the winter months of my boyhood, the speaker spent a good deal of his time in warning his hearers against dangers and unpleasantnesses of hell. Men turned to goodness because of what virtue would help them to evade; they were good because of the incomparable things in the next world which goodness would bring them. There was little emphasis upon what immediate joy and happiness goodness in itself brought to one. We were urged to be good largely because of our inherent fear of being bad. It was really very poor psychology but we did not know so very much about psychology in those days.

Renfrew did remarkably well in his work last semester. I was curious to know what his real motive was in thus applying himself to a difficult task.

"Why, it was the only right thing to do," he said. "If father and mother are willing to trust me and sacrifice to send me the money to give me a chance to get an education, I ought to do the best I can. I'm not expecting praise or reward for doing right. There is enough pleasure in doing the right thing."

The story is told that when in the olden times the crusaders were entering the Holy City a prophetess confronted them and arrested their progress. In her hand she carried a brazier of live coals and on her shoulders a jar of water. When asked what these symbols meant she said, "The water is to put out the fires of hell and the coals to burn up the joys of heaven so that men might be good for goodness' sake."

GOODNESS FOR ITS OWN SAKE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

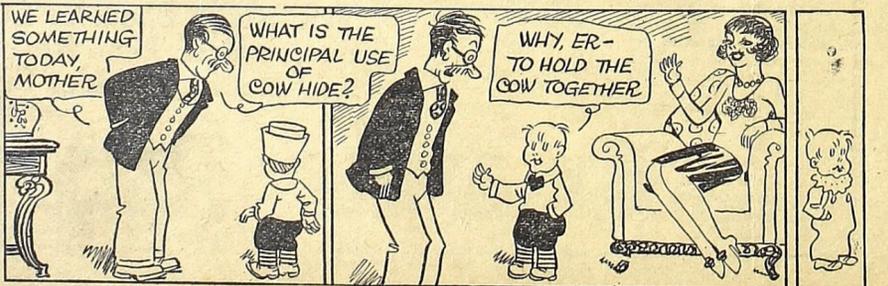

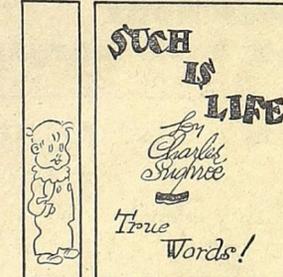

Lizette is a very pretty, self-possessed young girl whom I met at a dinner dance. There was smoking in the lounge after the dinner was over and the young people were waiting to have the floor cleared so that they might dance, and, as is common these days, smoking by the young women. Lizette smiled and shook her head when her escort offered her a cigarette.

"No, thank you, I don't smoke," she said, but there was no criticism or reproof in her voice.

"You're a good little girl," I said, for I really don't like a girl's smoking and I surmised that Lizette was refusing on principle.

"I don't mind smoking," she explained to me, "but father promised to give each of us girls a sport car if we would not smoke until after we were twenty-one. I haven't long to go."

It was not goodness, as I had supposed which had kept Lizette from smoking, but the hope of reward. When she has earned that there is

STORY FROM THE START

Capt. Lion Fellowes American merchant ship is sunk by a British frigate of Portugal in the War of 1812. Fellowes' life is saved by an English-speaking girl, who conceals her identity. Fellowes goes to Lisbon where he meets an acquaintance, Capt. Chater of the American ship True Bounty, who offers him a berth as a mate, but knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy he refuses. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of True Bounty. She is bound for home and induces Fellowes to sail as mate. He is in love with Cara. The vessel is stopped by the British frigate Badger, Captain Collishaw. Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger a "pressed" man. Maddened at what he believes is Cara's and Chater's treachery he strikes Collishaw, who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat." Fellowes hated of the three becomes an obsession. Off New York Fellowes escapes from the Badger. He seizes a plot in a meeting to be held at Chater's home and gathers a company of militia to circumvent the plot. In a fight between the militia and British sailors Collishaw escapes. At Chater's home Fellowes finds Cara, her father and Chater. Fellowes scoffs at the girl's denial of conniving in his kidnapping. No incriminating papers are found. The Inglepin party leaves for New York.

"And carry on the maintenance of the estate? I fear not, Lion, I fear not. Business is stultified."

"Humph! Then I'll have you look over our titles. See which lands could be disposed of most readily."

"Sell the Manor fields?" Sopher was overwhelmed. "Why, my dear Lion! Not an acre has gone since—But this is absurd. Do listen to reason!"

"There isn't any reason in the situation," Fellowes replied, between strokes of the razor. "I must have a ship, Nimrod, and that means I must have money. Unless I can come to some terms with Joshua Inglepin. His lean, bronzed features were contorted in a scowl. He hates his brother—as I do. I should think two men who hate the same person would make excellent partners."

"I must deplore the bitterness of your spirit," protested the lawyer. "Hatred is the cause of infinite suffering and misery."

"You have the cart before the horse," rapped Fellowes. "Misery and suffering inspire hate. No, you needn't argue. I appreciate your motives, but my mind is fast."

Sopher looked uncomfortable. "At the least," he said hesitantly "allow me to offer my services as counselor and advisor. I should be delighted to accompany you to the city, and—ah—examine any measures suggested in the light of practical and consistent lawfulness."

"No, it won't do," denied Fellowes. "This isn't an occasion for lawfulness."

"Dear me, Lion, you are most obstinate," sighed Sopher. "And do I understand it's your purpose to put to sea as a privateersman?"

"Yes."

"I shall go with you! I shall accompany you as—marine officer. My military services will have equipped me for the duties, and I am sure a number of my corps will enlist with their captain."

Fellowes' smile became a laugh, almost carefree and hearty.

"You shall come, Nimrod," he promised, "and all the Feniches you can raise. Now shall we sample Mrs. Rhodes' cooking? 'Twill taste more than good to me after two years of salt horse."

The widow received them at the foot of the stairs.

"Perked up a mite, ain't ye, squire?" she remarked. "Thar's nothin' can master sleep for a 'red man. I say and after sleep ye want food."

She led the way into the dining room, where Tom and Cuffee—Tom distinctly sheepish—were cleaning the floor and polishing furniture.

"Naow, then, Tom," she admonished, "we'll do with the sweepin' a while. 'Cuffee, ye can come outside with me, and fetch in the plates. I'll make a good waiver of ye, yet. After we get the squire settled, ye two can help out at the General Armstrong. I allus wanted a pair o' husky men-folks 'round the place. Not that I need 'em, specially; but it makes ye feel pert, jest to have men-folks 'round. And Tom, thar, he's cut out for the heavy work. A honest, well-meanin' man, Tom is." She gave him a pat, under which he giggled ecstatically. "Wantin' a leetle trainin', to be sure, but he'll come on. A couple o' months, and he'll earn his keep. I wouldn't wonder."

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Rhodes," Fellowes answered when he could squeeze a word in, "but we are starting for New York as soon as Jeff Riggle can come for us."

She halted in the kitchen door, arms akimbo.

"Noo Yawk, hey? After that Miss Inglepin, I'll be bound."

"After her and her father—and Chater," Fellowes corrected stiffly. "Humph!" The widow eyed him shrewdly. "Ain't got much use for her, I take it."

He said nothing.

"Oh, well, ye ain't the fust man calculated—Humph! Mebbe I better keep my mouth shut. I'm all upsof. Here I figgered ye'd want the Manor open, and I b'en and sweep and cleaned and brushed and polished 'til my body's crackin'. And ye tell me ye'll shet the place in an hour!"

Fellowes crossed the room, and took one of her red, calloused hands in his.

"Thank you," he said. "It was like you to think of me. And I'll come back again—with Tom and Cuffee—some day."

Mrs. Rhodes blinked her eyes sharply. There was a suspicion of a trickle in each corner.

"Some day! That's what men al'us say. They come and ye get yerself used to thar dirty ways—and they up and leave ye, keardless as a cat huntin' a new hearth. But they'll come back—some day, says they. Humph! Well, all I can tell ye, Squire Fellowes, ye'll be happier when ye stop sailin' 'round killin' folks, and gettin' yerself beat, and I daon't know what else—runnin' after gals ye hate, too. That's the queerest tune I ever hopped to. If ye'd made yer mind up to settle down, all nice and proper, and farm yer land, and raise a family—"

Her voice receded through the kitchen, and Sopher said hastily:

"I think I'll drive on, Lion. I've had my breakfast. And I'll send Riggle up to you. Miranda is—ah—in a belligerent mood, I judge."

Tom Grogan wagged his head as the lawyer left the room. The sailor was sitting, rather uncomfortably, upon one of the spindly-legged mahogany chairs Fellowes' mother had fetched home from England.

"I dunno what bellygrunt is," he said, "nless it's kin to gabby; but whatever 'tis, messmate, did ye ever see the woman could talk as fast and do as much?"

"She's a fine woman, Tom," smiled Fellowes. "And she seems to be fond of you."

"Fond of me, be? She's fond o' workin' me."

"Well, you won't see her after to-day."

"And blowed if I don't feel sorry for it," growled Tom. "I like the way she swings a rope's end over me."

He jumped up quickly as the kitchen door swung in, and Mrs. Rhodes' instructions floated through.

"—but if ye ain't got time for no more, Cuffee, the two o' ye can wash up them dishes, and fold up all the furnitche covers, and lay the draught on the carpet ag'in in that bedroom, and—"

"Sink me, what a boshin she'd make," Tom whispered awesomely.

CHAPTER VIII

Joshua Inglepin

Jeff Riggle pulled his team to a halt, with a mild: "Whoa-oo-a, thar!" brandishing his whip in either direction along the crest of the low hills overlooking Brooklyn. As far as could be seen, the countryside was dotted with work-gangs, laboring at the fortifications, which made ugly scars upon the green of fields and orchards.

"Naow, that air's a sight folks come miles to see," he observed. "All the way from Gowanus creek to Wallabout bay. We ain't agoin' to be ketchid like we wore in '76, squire. Look to them ships!"

The whip indicated the close-packed anchorages in the East river and off Governor's, Bedloe's, and Ellis islands, hundreds of sail of all dimensions, most of them with their topmasts hoisted, and tar-barrels capping their mastsheads.

"Madison's nightcaps, folks call them bar's," said Jeff. "Shippin's dead. Tain't even safe to sail the sound east o' New London—and thar's ships been picked up this side o' New Haven. Coastin' thar ain't a coast er put to sea in months, since the blockade was tightened. If 'twasn't for privateerin' and them d—d ill-cleared traders, thar wouldn't be no clearances at all. I ain't holdin' with Charter none, but ye can't argify past the point the country wasn't fixed to take on the Brits. No squire, squire, not by a jugful! Privateerin'? The auction markets are full o' capture cargoes, and ye couldn't throw a stone in the river, and not hit a prize; but thar's a many privateers git took, tharselves, and our ships that put to sea to trade stand seven chances into ten o' losin'. So whar does it git us, eh? That's what I crave to know."

Fellowes hadn't devised a solution of Jeff's problem by the time the coach dropped them at the ferry-landing. It was a sorry fix for the country to be in, only half-interested in the struggle, and that half, as he knew, mainly concentrated in the southern and frontier states, which had no conception of the government's need of a navy, and were inclined to be jealous of the wealth shipping had brought to the seaboard cities of the north. But perhaps, if men like himself, who had either a sense of conviction or of wrong, fought desperately, determinedly for long enough, the sullen apathy of the shipping interests could be neutralized, and the southern and backwoodsmen might learn the potentialities the sea held for America. They'd all come to hate the same object. Hate sufficiently, and you could conquer anyone, any difficulty. A lesson he'd learned by bitter experience, and must teach others.

He landed at the foot of Whitehall street as grim of countenance as though he went to meet Collishaw. Tom and Cuffee trod close at his heels, bewildered by the throngs of people and the racket of voices and cartwheels grinding on the cobbles.

In front of the Washington hotel, at the corner of Broad and Pearl streets, Fellowes halted his charges.

"I am going on to see Mr. Joshua Inglepin," he said. "Do you two await me in the taproom here. And Cuffee, see to it that Tom doesn't get drunk."

"Yah, Mars'r Fellowes," "Reli' on a 'nigrant nigger," fumed Tom. "Tain't fair, messmate. How'd ye know I was squarin' my sails to git three sheets in the wind?"

Fellowes turned into Pearl street, crossed Hanover square and so came to Front street, which he traversed as far as a large, double brick warehouse. Once upon a time, its facade had been pierced by a double door, exactly in the center, but this had been bricked up, so many years ago that the new bricks had faded almost to the hue of the surrounding wall.

In place of the large door, two single ones had been pierced under either gable. Over the nearer one hung the sign:

BENJAMIN INGLEPIN, Exporter and Importer; Sailings to all Ports.

Over the farther sign read: JOSHUA INGLEPIN, Exporter and Importer, Sailings to the Baltic, the British Isles, Southern Europe and the Indies.

Fellowes entered the farther door. A gray-haired clerk slid off a high stool, and advanced to meet him, timorously.

"I am looking for Mr. Inglepin," said Fellowes.

"Mr. Inglepin is out, sir. At the Tontine."

"When will he return?"

"Ah, sir, not until after three, when the board suspends. But if you went around to Wall street now you might find him at leisure. 'Tis the hour of 'high Change,' sir, and all the gentlemen should be taking their noon-ing."

Fellowes thanked the old man, and went out into Front street, turning the corner into Wall, where the Tontine Coffee house rose above the curbing this side of Water. Threading the groups, still arguing and discussing the trading projects of the morning, he had a little difficulty identifying Joshua Inglepin as the Inglepin warehouse the hostile brothers had divided in half when they broke up their partnership.

Joshua's stout body was clad as neatly as Benjamin's, but after the Democratic fashion; his long-tailed blue coat was short-waisted, and his outer garments were skin-tight gray pantaloons, terminating in polished half-boots. His gray hair was cut short, and brushed straight back, and his ruddy face was set off by a plain stock and neckerchief. Where Benjamin was sedate, quiet, circumspect, with an elusive eye, Joshua was positive, outspoken, forthright.

Fellowes tapped him on the arm. "I beg your pardon," said the lung islander. "My name is Lion Fellowes. Mr. Inglepin. I was pressed off your brother's ship True Bounty."

Phoenician Dental Art Preserved in the Louvre

The first false teeth, as far as known today, were worn by a woman of Sidon in Phoenicia about 800 B. C., according to Dr. Roy L. Moodie, of Santa Monica, Calif. The Phoenician woman's jaw, with the false teeth is now preserved in the Louvre, in Paris. The two right incisors are represented by artificial teeth, held in place and bound to each other by gold wire. The wire has been drawn through careful perforations in the artificial teeth. Although the Egyptians pioneered in treatment of many diseased conditions of the body, this sort of dental replacement apparently was never devised by Egyptian physicians. Thousands of mummies, representing 7,000 years of life in Egypt, have been examined, but no clear evidence of such repair work has ever been found. It appears that we not only owe our alphabet and numerous geographic discoveries to the restless, inquiring minds of the Phoenicians, Doctor Moodie points out, but also we are indebted to them for this entrance into prosthetics, which is a particularly valuable field of dentistry.

Her Secret

Ellnor Glyn at a Los Angeles garden party was talking about the modern girl and charm.

"The modern girl with real charm," she said, "possesses a wonderful secret. In some delicious way or other, she won't let you kiss her just when you're doing it."

THEY NEEDED A STEPMOTHER

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

IT WAS one of those afternoons when a small town girl with a vacation has nothing to do. Frances Knight, lounging in the porch hammock trying to read a slow-moving story, welcomed the sight of her friend, Bertha Glen.

Bertha looked hot and tired and very cross. She sank into the hammock beside Frances and wiped powder and perspiration indiscriminately from her face.

"Ted's awful," she sighed. "I can't do a living thing with him. Our housekeeper and Dad both leave him to me. I'm afraid of Ted when he's mad. He was horribly mad just now. He told me to go where it's much hotter than it is here this afternoon. What that boy needs is an animal trainer."

"This trying to get along without a mother is a mess," Frances said. "We've got everything in our house to make us happy except a mother."

Bertha gazed into space. This was one of the times she felt more motherless than at other times. Her bout with her boisterous brother had disheartened and disheveled her.

"Look! There goes Miss Susan driving her new car!" exclaimed Frances. "She's wearing the fifth new hat she's had this season."

"She's a nice looking woman for her age," Bertha said. "She was a girl when our mothers were. Funny she never married."

"She didn't have to. She's got oodles of coin."

"Nevertheless she ought to marry. She's depriving some good man of her companionship. That's what Dad says."

"Mine, too!" Frances bounced on the cushions. "Bertha! I've got an idea!"

"Keep it. I don't need it. I've got one myself," retorted Bertha.

Bertha went home rather hurriedly. Frances was glad. Snatching her scissors, she dashed into the garden and began cutting nasturtiums.

"Here! You get outen there! I want them to go to seed for my pickles!" shouted the housekeeper. Mrs. Bird, trusting her dust-capped head out of the window to see "what that girl was up to."

Frances paid no heed. After all, she was the real mistress of the house. When she had cut a nice bunch of nasturtiums she scooted down the street toward Miss Susan Burke's.

Miss Susan had shut her smart roadster in the garage and sat down on her broad veranda with some sewing.

"For me?" She seemed a little surprised at this unusual attention from her young neighbor. "How nice! Won't you have a seat?"

Frances felt a sense of elation. But she bit her lip with vexation when a few minutes later Bertha appeared. Bertha bore a large book in a gorgeous jacket. Bertha's father belonged to a book club and this book had just been handed in by the postman. Miss Susan looked a trifle embarrassed, but she accepted the volume.

Frances perceived that Bertha and she had the very same idea. It was most unfortunate. Frances made up her mind that Miss Susan was just like kind of mother she wanted. Dad was fairly well off, but they had to be a mite careful of expenditure. Miss Susan was rich. If only she could be persuaded to marry Dad, Frances argued mentally, she'd probably let them move into her house. What a wonderful home for a young girl! Think of the parties one could have there! Dad was good looking and agreeable, but Frances had a feeling that he'd need her help if he was going to get Miss Susan. Of course, Bertha's father was well off and good looking, too, but he had a drawback. Not Bertha, Ted. Ted was a horror.

Every day Frances plied Miss Susan with favors. Frequently she encountered Bertha bent on like missions. Relations were strained between the former chums. Bertha took succulent young vegetables when Frances took flowers, she took books when Frances took fruit. She praised her dad to the skies. Ted was going to be just like him in time.

One afternoon Frances sought Miss Susan with an assurance she had not before known. That morning she had gone for a ride with Miss Susan in the eight-cylinder roadster. She felt a delightful new possessive sense in the car, the wonderful house, and Miss Susan herself.

On Miss Susan's veranda sat a small, brown, ugly young girl, who was toiling over some breadths of coarse blue-checked gingham. Frances' nose went up, Bertha's likewise. They sat down with their backs to the "obstacle." Judy Hoy wasn't in their crowd. She lived in "rooms" and her father came home at night in overalls, looking hot and soiled. Besides, Judy had twin sisters, Jane and Mary, who played in the street simply because there wasn't any other place for them to play. Judy was younger than either Frances or Bertha, but she and her father "managed," with the help of a woman, who came in once a week, to dig out the thickest of the dirt.

"I'm teaching Judy to make dresses for the twins," Miss Susan said. "That looks very well, Judy. I'll just run in and stitch it for you."

"You've got nerve, asking Miss Susan to teach you to sew," Frances said scornfully.

Judy lifted big brown eyes. She crossed her thin arms and legs in an attitude of defiance.

"I didn't ask her. She offered," she returned.

The tea wagon was heavily laden that afternoon. Judy ate as if she'd never seen food before. Frances thought contemptuously. But Miss Susan was beautifully courteous. She even sent a bag of cakes to the twins.

"Cheek," Frances grumbled to Bertha as they walked away together. Their antagonism toward Judy made them forget their own mutual jealousy.

Judy continued to be seen at Miss Susan's. She began to dress better and look happier. The twins, clean, were really cute. Ordinarily Frances couldn't have kept her hands off these delectable morsels of healthy humanity. But because they were Judy's sisters she passed them by.

The time came when Frances felt she must speak to her father. She laid the case before him. They needed a mother. She'd picked Miss Susan; father would have to do the rest. He listened and laughed heartily.

"Susan wouldn't have me. I asked her before I met your mother."

"Then she'll marry Mr. Glen!" grieved Frances.

"Not on your life. He, like myself, was one of her old suitors. Listen, Fran!" Mr. Knight pulled his daughter down on his knee. "Can you keep a secret? Susan is going to marry Dick Hoy."

"Not Judy's father! Oh! Oh!"

"He's a better man than Glen and I put together," Mr. Knight said earnestly. "I hope, my dear, when you get ready to mate you'll pick as fine a husband as Susan has."

Carved Rock Temple Is Marvel of Sculpture

On the rock floor of a great, open pit start into the top of a hillside in south central India in a 27-foot plinth walk, a colossal frieze of over-size stone elephants. Shoulder to shoulder they stand, appearing to bear on their stone shoulders the weight of the rock temple which rises above them. Five hundred and forty-six measured feet they run, slightly more than a tenth of a mile. They have been called by those with standards of comparison the greatest achievement in rock sculpture in the world.

They are perhaps the most striking single feature in an extraordinary architectural achievement of ancient India—the great rock temple of Kailasa at Ellora village in the territory of the Nizam of Hyderabad, today the newest wonder of the ancient world.

About the time of Charlemagne, around 800 A. D., King Krishna I came down somewhere from the North into southern India and thrust out the previous rulers of the Deccan. As a definite thank offering to his god, he conceived and started one of the most magnificent temples, stupendous in plan and brilliant in execution, that the whole long history of religious enthusiasm can produce. Down to the last, least detail it was sculptured out of the living rock.

There is not a square foot which is not covered with sculpture or bas-reliefs, not one bare wall, not one undecorated ceiling. They are all closely covered, either with huge over-size reliefs or with minute lace-like sculpture telling in Indian fashion all the detail of the endless escapades of the multifarious gods of the whole Pantheon. It is known as the Kailasa, after the celestial palace of the great god Siva, offering a physical counterpart for his honor and delectation.

The average tourist first comes upon the Kailasa with all the suddenness of an approach to a precipice. It is as unexpected and as unmarked as the opening of the Grand canyon in Arizona. One moment you see nothing but hillside, and the next the great pit is before you; and you're gazing down in the clear Indian air at a vast pattern of sculptured architecture that is too bewildering at first to be grasped as reality.—Exchange.

Sailors in Small Boat

Menaced by Albatross

Haunted by an albatross, a bird of ill omen, and in danger of having their boats smashed by a huge whale, were among the experiences of the crew of the Siltonhall, a British steamer that caught fire recently hundreds of miles from land in the South Indian ocean.

Soon after the cargo of coal caught fire the decks became red hot and the hatches were in flames. The crew took to two small boats and for 44 hours were adrift in a gale. It was during this time that the albatross constantly swooped down menacingly.

This story bears a remarkable similarity to the incident in Coleridge's poem, "The Ancient Mariner," in which the albatross, an ominous bird, haunts a stricken ship.

FOR COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

NEW STATE PLUMBING CODE WOULD REQUIRE LICENSE

The new State Plumbing Code which has just been prepared in the offices of the Michigan Department of Health, will be given public hearing on Thursday and Friday, December 12 and 13, in the Senate Chamber of the State Capitol at Lansing. All persons interested in the provisions of the code are invited by Dr. Guy L. Kiefer, State Commissioner of Health, to attend the hearing.

Preparation, publication, and enforcement of a State Plumbing Code containing minimum standards for plumbing throughout the state was provided for by a law passed by the 1929 legislature. This law also made provision for the licensing of all master and journeyman plumbers in Michigan after January 1, 1930. Those applying for license before that time, and proving that they were engaged in the business on March 1, 1929, will be granted a license without examination. After January 1, 1930, examination will be required before a license is issued.

Diseases Caused by Mind

We should be surprised if, suffering from rheumatism, we went to a doctor and, instead of being given medicine, we were told to cease our cynicism and the rheumatism would depart. Yet that may be the procedure shortly, for it has been established that certain diseases are caused by the action of the mind—the thoughts we think, and the feelings and emotions thereby raised.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

In the Circuit Court for Iosco County, in Chancery.

Edward F. Loud, Henry N. Loud and Estate of George A. Loud, Plffs., vs. Allen Sheldon, and his unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, Defendants.

Cause pending in the Circuit Court for Iosco County, in Chancery.

In this cause, it appearing by affidavit on file, and bill of complaint filed therein, that the Plaintiffs, and the affiant, attorney herein, do not know, and have been unable after diligent search and inquiry to ascertain whether said defendants are living or dead, or where they may reside, if living, or whether the title, interest, claim or possible right acquired by said defendants has been assigned by them in said premises, or conveyed to any other person or persons; or, if they be dead, whether they have personal representatives or heirs living, or where they may be living, or whether such title, interest, claim or right in said premises has been disposed of by will; and do not know, and have been unable after such inquiry and search to ascertain the names of the persons, who might claim under said defendants, and who are included as such unknown and unascertained defendants herein, or where their residence or present address may be.

On motion of N. C. Hartingh, attorney for Plaintiffs, it is ordered that the appearance of each and all of said defendants above named and their heirs, legatees, devisees and assigns, be entered in said cause within three months from the date of this order; and in case of such appearance that they respectively cause their answer to the bill of complaint in this cause to be filed therein, and a copy thereof to be served upon Plaintiffs' attorney within fifteen days after service of a copy of said bill of complaint upon them, and a notice of this order, and that in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed by them.

It is further ordered that within forty-five days from the date of this order, Plaintiff cause a copy thereof to be published in the Tawas Herald, a newspaper printed and published and circulated in Iosco County, for six successive weeks, once in each week; or that Plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be served personally upon said defendants, at least twenty days before the time above stated for their appearance, and cause a copy of this order to be mailed to each such absent, concealed or non-resident defendant (except such unknown heirs and defendants) at his or her last known post-office address, by registered mail.

This suit is brought to quiet title to—

"A piece of land in Lot 5, Section 3, Town 23 North, Range 9 East, Iosco County, Michigan, bounded as follows: Commencing at a stake 162 feet south from the north line of said Lot 5, on the west side of said lot, thence south 528 feet to centre of bridge over AuSable river; thence south 132 feet to a stake; thence east parallel with north line of Lot 5 to Lake Huron; thence north to a stake set 162 feet from said north line of Lot 5, being the 1/4 line of said Section 3; thence west to point of beginning."

Make WINTER-DRIVING a Pleasure

By changing that Crank-Case Oil

We do this work in a well heated building, and we are equipped to remove that old summer grease by heating your transmission and differential with steam. We refill with Cold Test Grease that is guaranteed to lubricate satisfactorily at below zero.

We Sell Four Brands of the Best Cold-Tested Oils we can buy.

Although the chassis of your car may be covered with ice and frozen mud, we can do a real job of Alemiting because we have steam under pressure to clean and warm it, allowing the grease to go to the places where it should be lubricated---and this extra service does not cost you any more. We will thaw out that frozen radiator free of charge.

We do Vulcanizing and all kinds of Tire Repairing also Battery Charging. We have a complete stock of Presto Lite Batteries. 6-8 volt 13 plate, $8.50 and your old battery.
