Band Concert

At last the long dreamed for auditorium has been completed and the new, enlarged band will hold their first concert of the year there on Tuesday, March 19. The citizens of Tawas City can justly be proud of her two major assets; a new auditorium and a fine band.

Since our band has been increased to 58 members, we have had no sufficiently large place in which to hold a concert, the new auditorium presents an attractive and adequate solution of our problem.

Because of the addition of numerous new members, a great deal of long and tedious drill has been necessary. The band has responded with much zeal and have received blue and gold awards for their tireless efforts. These awards will be worn on their navy blue sweaters and will be a new addition to their uniforms. Our director, Mr. Nordman, deserves much credit for producing a band which outnumbers any other in this part of Michigan.

Tickets for the concert will be 25 cents and the proceeds will go toward buying more uniforms and new musical supplies. It will begin promptly at eight o'clock and the patronage of the public will be appreciated. You may get your tickets from members of the band.

Boys Club Organized Wednesday Evening

The following officers were elected: President—Kenny Smith. Vice President—Fred Luedtke. Treasurer—Otto Ross. The new club will meet at 7:30 every Tuesday evening at the gymnasium.

Alumni of the local schools interested in joining the club should be present at the next meeting. One of the officers said "We are looking for someone older who is interested in coaching basketball."

SHOULD WE DISPOSE OF COUNTY GOVERNMENT?

By L. O. Marden, President County Highway Officials Division ARBA.

The county as a political unit is the oldest institution in Anglo-Saxon history. The shire or county, brought to England at the time of the Teutonic invasion, is the only political subdivision that has remained permanent in English history for nearly 1500 years.

The county, as formed in this country, was the basis of self-government. As such, it is undoubtedly the most representative political division of human liberty known today. The county exists today as the municipality and the state. Throughout the early formation of our country, with its early ties to England, the American Revolution, and the formation of the United States of America, the county is the only unit that has endured. Students of history will discover through research that liberty is measured by the ability of the people to maintain this secondary division known as the county. Every state in this Union is built upon counties and there the freedom of this country is principally vested, for the invasion of power by the state and by the United States is the one menace to our political institutions.

The counties in the United States have, in the main, been ably and efficiently run. The duties of county officials have been far-reaching in their effects on the community, especially those of county commissioners and other county boards. These county boards are not only the executive but also the fiscal agents of the county. Practically all counties have engineering departments, many capable of constructing important trunkline highways, large bridges, etc.

However, since the depression, there has been a movement on foot sponsored by those citizens who have banded themselves together in organizations, generally called taxpayers associations, to reduce taxes by eliminating or combining certain forms of government and doing away with any type they deem unnecessary expenditure, regardless of whether this expenditure is economically justified as a necessary governmental function. The county is one subdivision that has been attacked in many states by these taxpayers associations. These associations would do away with county government and replace it with a large central bureau operated by the state government. This local authority would be taken away from the hands of the county and placed in the hands of the political party that runs the state.

Agents from the state government, who would not know the local problems, would replace the county officers who are familiar with the needs of their locality. It can be plainly seen that no real saving would take place as local government would be replaced in all its phases with a central bureau. However, that division of local government, which has been the expression of the American people since the formation of the country would, like so many local governments in Europe, be eliminated and we would find ourselves being dominated as are the citizens of so many European states today, shorn of any personal liberty, by power given to central government.

It should be the determination of every county officer, especially the county boards, to give the people efficient and economical government service. Every community, through its civic groups, should study carefully what good county government can mean to every community in the United States. They should remember that the citizen as well as the public official has a responsibility to discharge and that their efforts should be constructive and not merely disgruntled cavilling.

Such cooperative relationships between citizens and officials can work wonders. It appears that the future will bring much need for such service.

Juniors-Seniors Will Present Play in April

Our new auditorium is finished and the Junior and Senior classes are losing no time in putting it to good use. For years much dramatic ability has been undeveloped because our community offered no facilities for presenting plays. Now the opportunity is at hand. An excellent cast has been chosen to give the play "Meet The Folks," by James F. Stone.

This play is a comedy in three acts. It is patterned after the Hardy family pictures. We have a real Mickey Rooney in this play James Smith, played by Richard Zollweg. If you like the Hardy Family you shouldn't miss this play. Every player is working hard to make this play a success. If you want to have a good laugh see "Meet The Folks." It is a laugh from beginning to end. This play will please the youngsters and grip the hearts of the oldsters. Everyone will enjoy "Meet The Folks." Specialties will be given between acts, specialties you have never seen or if you have you will enjoy them in new characters.

The date for "Meet The Folks" has been changed from March 28 and 29 to April 4 and 5. Make this change in your date book so you won't miss "Meet The Folks."

EAST AND WEST

BY TALBOT MUNDY

TALBOT MUNDY—WNU SERVICE

CHAPTER XVII

The Resident was worried. In view of the prevalent political unrest and of the convenient fact that the State of Kadur had been quietest for years, he had received confidential instructions from his State Department to be very discreet in his relations with the court of Kadur. It was impossible to misinterpret the order. It was plainly worded. He was not to interfere, if it could possibly be helped.

On the other hand, he had discovered, rather to his annoyance, that Norwood was a very likeable person, with an exceptionally good service record. Even prejudice couldn't make him believe that Norwood had accepted a bribe. It might be impossible to prove that Norwood hadn't accepted one, and there might be a cloud over Norwood's career forever after. But the Resident hadn't a doubt that Rundhia, or else perhaps the priests, or even both of them in some nefarious secret alliance, had framed Norwood. He was inclined to believe that the priests' agents had bought Rundhia, with a view to some political advantage after Rundhia should have come to the throne. Rundhia, he suspected, would do almost anything for cash.

Not being a fool, nor even a very unimaginative man, he suspected that Norwood's interest in Lynn Harding was something rather more than platonic.

And one could believe almost anything of Rundhia: even believe that Rundhia might act honorably, if honor and the circumstances didn't clash with Rundhia's convenience. The Resident liked Rundhia. Almost everyone did who knew him. But it was a bit difficult to separate Rundhia, from Rundhia's unregenerate inclinations and his record. So the Resident wrote a report, marked "secret," to the State Department, in which he respectfully urged His Majesty the King's advisers to oppose Prince Rundhia's succession to the throne of Kadur. He had small doubt that his advice would be found acceptable.

But that wasn't going to save Norwood. It was far more likely to ruin Norwood, because Rundhia employed a secret agent in Delhi, who would learn of the Indian Government's intentions about the veto in next to no time. Rundhia, and Rundhia's friends, would jump to the conclusion that Norwood had been using secret influence in order to get back at Rundhia for the accusation of bribery. Rundhia and his friends would strike back, and there would be so much purchased, perjured evidence produced, that Norwood would have no chance whatever.

So the Resident decided to do some private investigation on his own account.

There was nothing for it but to call on Mrs. Harding and to ask her to summon Lynn to the guesthouse for a confidential interview. He detested Mrs. Harding. He knew she was a snob and he suspected her of being a title-huntress. He had called on her once, and she had been damned rude, because she hadn't understood his position; she had suspected him of being merely one more peevish British officer who wished to make Lynn's acquaintance. But there are lots of unpleasant tasks that a man feels called on to undertake, in the course of duty, so the Resident ordered his car and set forth, calling en route at the Post Office to register his letter to the Department of State, so that his Parsee secretary shouldn't know about it and be tempted to talk.

Aunty Harding's locked and labeled trunks stood in a severe row at one end of the veranda. Aunty Harding reposed on pillows at the other end, where she received the Resident with hostile politeness. The veranda faced away from the sunset and the surrounding trees cast a deep shadow, so the electric light had been turned on in the living-room, and the only light there was came through the living-room window. Aunty Harding couldn't see him very well, and she hadn't her spectacles. But she remembered his name, and she had learned, indirectly, since their first interview, that he was a personage. So she bristled self-defensively and patronized him.

"Mayn't I offer you whiskey? You English are such devotees of that drink, aren't you. In the States, our men drink Bourbon. Please smoke."

"I came to talk with Miss Lynn Harding."

"You will have to look for her elsewhere."

"Oh, I know she's at the palace. Isn't there a telephone? Could you ask her to come here a moment? It won't take long. I merely want to ask her a few questions."

"I can't do what you ask. I am no longer responsible for Lynn. If I should summon her she wouldn't obey me."

"Oh? I hope nothing serious has—"

"A plot! Dishonorable! Contemptible! I won't bore you with my private affairs. It is sufficient to say that I received an insolent communication from the Maharanee. She has invited Lynn to stay with her—without consulting me, mind you. And I have received an astonishing note from my niece, addressed to me, but intended for Captain Norwood, of all impossible people! As if I were a mail box! And as if I didn't know what is being said about Captain Norwood! It was a deliberately malicious insult to me!"

"Did you forward the note to Captain Norwood?"

"No. Why should I?"

"May I see it?"

"No. Certainly not."

"Well, Mrs. Harding, I think you are within your rights about that. Quite commendable. Yes. Very. But shouldn't Norwood get it? If you care to put it in an envelope and seal it, I will have it sent to him by a very reliable messenger."

"One more effort to make of me a mere convenience! I won't do it."

The Resident, having felt out Mrs. Harding's punches, countered. He began his attack:

"Mrs. Harding, it is quite true that you don't know what is going on. If it weren't that Captain Norwood, who is a gentleman whose opinion I respect, has assured me that your niece is a thoroughly nice girl—"

"How does he know?" Aunty interrupted.

"He is an officer of unblemished record, and a gentleman who has never done a shabby thing in his life. That is why I value his opinion."

Aunty interrupted: "I have my own opinion of an officer and a gentleman."

"No, why should I?"

leman! about whom even babus and servants gossip. If Lynn had wished to associate herself with common graft and bribery, she might better have remained in America. We have plenty of corrupt officials—mostly of foreign extraction, I am thankful to say. Many of them Irish," she added.

The Resident smiled: "Yes, Mrs. Harding. I confess to being Irish. So look out! I will take no nonsense from you. If necessary, I will confront you with Captain Norwood and let him demand that letter."

"What if I destroy it?"

"I will have you arrested."

"I am leaving tonight," said Aunty Harding, firmly.

"Oh, yes? It is a long way from here to the station. You have a lot of luggage. You propose to catch the midnight train?"

"I have made my own arrangements with a native contractor, thank you."

"I understand, then, that you propose to go away at midnight, leaving your niece to her own devices."

"Yes."

"Well, that is perhaps outside my province. But there is no question about my responsibility in connection with Captain Norwood. He is a distinguished young officer, in temporary difficulty, who needs all the legitimate help he can get. He is well connected, and popular. He is the younger brother of the very distinguished Earl of Ashlawn. Numbers of people would be shocked if Norwood were disgraced. You have a letter belonging to Captain Norwood, that he possibly needs. Think that over, Mrs. Harding. It is now up to you. Good evening."

CHAPTER XVIII

Norwood went the round of the sentries. There were only four of them. They had already received orders from Sergeant Stoddart. Norwood repeated the instructions:

"There are thieves in the neighborhood, and there is a rumor that there might be a raid on the camp. It isn't likely to be anything serious, but look out for it. Don't kill anyone if you can help it. In any event, you are to challenge three times and then fire your first shot in the air. I am expecting visitors, who may perhaps approach stealthily, because their business is secret.

So look out for them, and be careful not to mistake them for thieves."

He returned to his tent, where O'Leary sat holding an empty glass with futile optimism.

"Get out of here, now, and make yourself useful."

"Me—useful?"

"Yes. Those Brahmins with whom I talked down near the waterfall this morning—"

"Yeah, they slipped one over on you! I heard all about it."

"Hold your tongue then. I expect they'll be coming to talk to me about my visiting the mine."

"You need a nurse," O'Leary answered. "You'd never get your brass hat one of these days if it weren't for your Uncle Moses. Them there Brahmins are as likely to come and talk to you tonight as I am to kiss the Queen of England. They figure they've bought you. And they figure they can prove it on you, if you don't come across. They'll sit quiet, them Brahmins will. What you're up against is what I warned you. That Bengali doctor was too scared for his own skin to be telling me lies. Set your lamp to one side of the tent and eat your supper in shadow, if you can't eat in the dark. Watch out they don't chuck no more cobras at you. They've guns. They're automatics. And there's Gulbaz in back of this, so watch out. Gulbaz and a woman."

Norwood stared at him. "Woman?" he said. "What do you mean?"

"You told me to mind my own business. This ain't my business."

"Talk!"

"How about another whiskey?"

"Do you wish to be sat in the cook-fire?"

"You'd spoil your supper! But I've been thinking. If you want to know what I was thinking, I'll tell you. Barring two or three injustices you've done to me, and I'm of a forgiving disposition, there's only one man in Kadur, by my reckoning, who'd pay money to see you dead and buried."

"You may name him."

"Name him yourself. Him and you was thumping a guitar and singing to the same girl. Let's suppose he knows, for instance, that the priests slipped you a bribe. And let's suppose he thinks you're honest. Let's suppose he thinks you'll earn the bribe and fix it so the priests win their case. And him heir to the throne. And him and you mashing the same golden-haired beauty. He'd be as officer-headed as you are if he didn't hit hard—and below the belt. He'll hit hard! What's to stop him from spiking the Brahmins' case by getting them blamed for having murdered you? Answer that one? Why not lay off the girl? If I was you, I'd—"

"Don't let me have to caution you too often, O'Leary. What I expect from you is information. I do my own thinking. If I should ever need advice from you I'll tell you."

"Tain't never no use advising nobody about no woman," said O'Leary. "I know symptoms when I see 'em. All right, mum's the word, I ain't saying nothin'."

"Get out of here."

After supper, Norwood wrote another letter to Lynn Harding. He didn't tear up that one. He addressed it in care of Mrs. Harding at the guesthouse, and then stuck it into his tunic pocket. He was still undecided. Determined, he was still ready with his plan. O'Leary came and warned him again about sitting too near the lamp, so he went outside the tent and sat in the shadow cast by the rising full moon. A sentry challenged.

"Careful!" Norwood shouted. "Don't shoot unless you have to. And don't shoot to kill!"

A bullet whizzed past him—then another. They came from two directions.

"Sentries, hold your fire!" he shouted.

Stoddart came charging up, breathing hard, fastening his tunic and belt as he ran.

"All present, sir! All ready!"

"Very well, Stoddart. Keep your hair on. Post two men to guard my tent. Send two to the horse-line and the remainder to guard the store tent. Thieves—I think."

Norwood walked ahead into the darkness, shadowed by O'Leary.

"Now what?" asked O'Leary. "For the love o'—"

"Fetch a lantern on a long stick. Hurry."

Norwood stood in deep black shadow waiting for him. O'Leary ran up with a lantern at the end of a very long stick—at least ten feet long.

"Give that to me. Next shot they fire, raise a yell that I'm hit."

"Okay. I get you. You're a credit to your Uncle Moses."

Norwood held the pole extended toward his left to its limit. He walked forward. The lantern danced as if it were in someone's hand. A bullet spat out of the darkness. Norwood fell. O'Leary shouted at the top of his lungs:

"Stoddart! Hi there, Stoddart! They've shot the Captain! He's dead! They hit him through the heart!"

Stoddart and four men came hurrying. Norwood whispered:

"Pick me up. Carry me into the tent first."

"Mournful and solemn," O'Leary added.

"Lay me on the cot in full lamplight. Spread a sheet over me," said Norwood.

"He's as dead as trouble," said O'Leary.

So they carried Norwood to the cot and there he lay, in lamplight, while Stoddart slightly overdid the business of taking over command. O'Leary scouted. At the end of ten minutes, O'Leary returned to the tent.

"That's done it. They've gone. I crashed among the bushes like a pig with a panther after him. Nobody fired a shot. There wasn't a sound. They've gone for good. All Kadur will know that you're dead, within twenty minutes. They may even tell 'em the news at the palace, though I doubt that. Palaces get the news late, after other folks have had time to lay their bets."

Norwood sat up. He stared at O'Leary. O'Leary held his tongue. He watched, waited. Norwood didn't speak for sixty seconds. Then:

"O'Leary, there is just one chance in fifty that Prince Rundhia is on the wall, by that kiosk, where he was last night."

It almost seemed as if the night knew that Norwood had made up his mind. He was riding a fresh horse, but he didn't hurry. He was followed by a mounted sais, and by O'Leary on another horse. The horses, the sais and O'Leary behaved like a snake's tail. They followed the head without asking questions. Norwood gave no orders. He didn't tell O'Leary what he intended to do. But as they came near the palace garden wall, he reduced the speed a little and O'Leary, without needing to be told to do it, went scouting ahead.

O'Leary, on the other side, made plenty of noise. He made a signal, pointing with his right arm, as he broke from shadow into moonlight. There was nothing mysterious about his signal; he simply pointed to the swinging tendrils of a baobab. It overhung the wall in search of earth in which to take root. It looked like a python, swaying slightly in the faint evening breeze.

Railway Postoffice Is Important Link in U. S. Mails

The efficiency of the United States mail is so taken for granted that very few people really know what takes place between the time a stamped envelope is deposited in one of those familiar olive-colored boxes and when it is received by the addressee.

Strange as it may seem, only a small proportion of out-of-town mail is actually sorted in the marble palaces whose portals are inscribed, "Neither sleet nor rain . . ."

A letter from New York to San Marino, Calif., for example, is handled once in New York and once in San Marino. In the meanwhile, however, that envelope may be sorted half a dozen times in order to speed it on its way in the shortest possible time.

For some unknown reason the United States post office rarely mentions the RPO (Railway Post Office) and its important part in the distribution of mail, hence very few people realize that without it our present postal service would be an impossibility.

In this country the use of the railway postal car dates to 1861, when John L. Scripps, then postmaster of Chicago, suggested that the mail which had accumulated at Cairo, Ill., on account of the Civil war, be sorted while it was aboard the train.

A few years of experimenting proved the merits of this idea and the use of railway post offices became a reality.

Originally the post office cars were used only on the main lines of long-run railroads, but today nearly every line in the country has service to form a network encompassing every town and hamlet of our nation.

Within these rolling post offices efficient crews of clerks not only break down mail shipments into section and state groups, but also sort it for cities and then go further to separate individual letters destined for different postal stations in a given city.

A clerk on the New York to Washington run, for example, is expected to know the exact location of any address in New York City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and perhaps several other intermediate cities served by that route.

"I am the ENGINE that couldn't happen!"

THIS SPRING, as my eighth birthday passes, I count more than 6 million of me in use. Yet I am the low cost V-8 engine that wise men once said never could be made.

IT IS TRUE that before my time the V-8 engine was a rich man's engine, too costly to make and too costly to run for any one else to enjoy. And it is true that without the patience and resources that could cast my new one-piece cylinder block hundreds of times before finding the one right way to do it—I might not yet exist.

BUT IT IS ALSO TRUE that today I am every man's pride and pleasure in every corner of the earth.

BECAUSE MY CYLINDERS are eight, my owners know smoothness of power-flow, quickness of response, nimbleness of action that are unknown to engines of fewer cylinders than mine.

BECAUSE MY CYLINDERS are small, I exact no penalty in cost from my owners for my advantages of performance. My efficient use of fuel burns no more gasoline than fewer cylinders of equal total size require.

BECAUSE MY CYLINDERS are banked in two rows, my over-all length is short, and passengers inside the car behind me find extra length for their own comfort.

AND, BECAUSE the quality of my metals is Ford quality, and the precision of my making Ford precision—I bring to my work dependability and stamina that are known the world around. It costs but little to buy me, little to run me, little to keep me in shape.

IN THE EIGHT YEARS of my life, many improvements have come to me—in economy, in efficiency, in quietness. Three years ago I was brought out in a 60 horsepower size, besides my 85. Owners of that new size now are telling of 22 to 27 miles per gallon of gas, and fine V-8 performance to boot.

LAST YEAR, in larger size with heavier parts and 95 horsepower, I became the powerplant of a new car called the Mercury 8. A fine, big car that's getting a reputation in excess of anything that had been planned or hoped for—now in the top ten.

THIS YEAR, TOO, in all my sizes, I find myself in finer cars than I have ever worked in before. Cars that make people talk excitedly, as I pass, of something they call style. Cars that make people riding behind me murmur approvingly of comfort and of riding quality, and of quietness that's new.

YES, I AM THE ENGINE that couldn't happen—but did. I am the engine designed for the future and already proved by the past. I invite you to come with me out on the road today. For I am an engine of action, and I'd like to let my action speak to you for me.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Battle Over Income Questions Threatens Entire 1940 Census; In Europe; Peace Talk Revived

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.

SHOEMAKER ROSSELLI AND HIS COBBLING SHOP

CONGRESS: Census Censure

From Washington to his Racine, Wis., office Census Director William Austin rushed a telegram:

"Withdraw Rosselli charges immediately. You have disregarded instructions that before taking legal action such cases must be submitted to Washington office for disposition. You will be held strictly responsible for this procedure..."

Thus was closed the latest in a series of eruptions which threaten to wreck Uncle Sam's 1940 decennial census. James Rosselli, a Kenosha, Wis., shoe repair man, had been handed a federal warrant for refusing to answer census questions about his business.

"I'm answer census questions when they put polite... Everything can be explained. I walk out on him, yes... But I don't chase him."

Gaining steam at Washington was the fight of Sen. Charles Tobey (Rep., N. H.) to have personal income questions stricken from the 1940 nose count. Franklin Roosevelt had denounced it as "an obviously political move."

After several days of this, the senate commerce committee voted 10 to 5 to postpone temporarily its consideration of an anti-personal question resolution. Meanwhile Census Taker Austin wrung his hands, for his house-to-house canvass is to start April 2. Should congress continue to squabble, he knew not what would become of the decennial census.

Wagner Act. Twenty-one changes in the present act were recommended to the house by a special investigating committee, but defeat was predicted. Chief proposal: Divorcement of NLRB judicial and administrative functions.

Clean Politics' Act. The senate killed a move to repeal the Hatch law's prohibition of political activity by federal employees, then began arguing a proposal to extend the act to state workers who get part of their pay from federal funds.

Agriculture. While the President signed legislation extending the farm mortgage moratorium, five Democratic senators introduced a bill to restore independence of the farm credit administration, recently placed under the department of agriculture.

How the wind is blowing...

RELIEF—Patterned after the successful surplus foods stamp plan, a cotton stamp plan for distributing clothing among relief families will be started this month in five or six cities.

AGRICULTURE—According to Chicago crop authorities, U. S. winter wheat prospects in early March showed "some improvement" over the December 1 condition thanks to better-than-normal winter moisture and snow protection against sub-zero weather.

ARMY—The war department announced surplus and "unstandard" munition supplies were being sold to neutral nations. Item: 90 six-inch World war guns stored at Aberdeen, Md., proving ground since the World war, were sold "as is" and "where is" to Brazil.

JEWRY—To prevent Arab uprisings, Britain restricted sale of Palestine land to Jews. When riots followed, Neville Chamberlain's government won its first wartime censure move in the house of commons. By 292 to 129, the house upheld the Palestine decree.

THE WARS: Peace in the North?

Early March found Finland's warriors valiantly trying to save Viipuri from the invading Reds, who let off excess steam by "deliberately" bombing a hospital in south-central Finland. Biggest news of the Russo-Finnish war, however, was the effort all Europe seemed making to bring these belligerents to peace.

Background for this peace was the obvious fact that every European nation would gain by it. Scandinavia would gain by side-stepping the combined pressure of France, Britain, Germany, Russia and Finland. Russia would gain by turning her attention to a sorry domestic situation.

Knowing this, observers were not surprised when London, Berlin, Brussels, Paris and Stockholm began bristling with reports that Sweden was mediating, that the Russo-Finnish war might be called off at any moment.

Most likely terms: Surrender of the Karelian isthmus (including Viipuri), part of Lapland, Petsamo and the Hango naval base. As a "deadline" drew near, the Finns practically admitted such overtures had been made, yet there was small chance they would be accepted.

More War in the West?

For the moment, northern peace talk had no effect elsewhere. In what was a day of wild and woolly warfare for the western front, 20 Britons were captured by the Nazis.

ITALY'S COAL SOURCES More from Britain?

A new wave of torpedoings, bombings and mine explosions cost the neutral Dutch 12 ships.

But Britain's foe-of-the-week was Italy, which protested furiously when the allies clamped an embargo on Italian coal imports from the Reich. Within 48 hours 16 Italian ships were hauled into British ports and their coal cargoes discharged. Rome threatened the situation would become serious unless Britain backed down, but there was no sign of this. Already getting more than a fourth of her coal from Britain (see chart) Italy seemed faced with the choice of declaring war (an improbability) or swapping her munitions and airplane motors for British coal.

Welles Mission

Completing the first half of his European fact-finding junket, U. S. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles left Berlin, gathered his strength and his luggage in Lausanne, Switzerland, then headed for Paris. In Rome he had talked with a mild-mannered Benito Mussolini. In Berlin he had met a tough and determined Adolf Hitler.

Still on the calendar were two more visits. Mr. Welles was to fly from Paris to London, where Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain would probably restate his war aims. Principal aim: (Destruction of the Nazi rule.) Then Mr. Welles would return to Rome for more conversations with Il Duce before catching the Conte Di Savoia for home. Before he walks up the gangplank, observers thought Sumner Welles could not possibly avoid planting his foot in the potentially dangerous British-Italian coal squabble.

in the news...

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL, U. S. army chief, was welcomed to Hawaii by a flight of 60 army planes. Embarrassing note: Two ships collided in mid-air, but pilots parachuted safely.

FRANK ASHTON-GWATKIN, Britisher, and CHARLES RIST, Frenchman, constituted a special allied apple-polishing expedition to soothe U. S. anger over difficulties arising from the German blockade.

ASHTON-GWATKIN Apple polisher.

Biggest complaints: (1) censorship of U. S. mails; (2) taking U. S. ships into contraband control ports. Arriving in Washington, the delegation was closeted with Secretary of State CORDELL HULL.

MOST REV. SAMUEL A. STRITCH was enthroned new Roman Catholic archbishop of Chicago.

POLAND: Atrocity News

From three sources this month came news of trouble in Nazi-occupied Poland and Czechoslovakia: (1) In Berlin it was revealed that deportation of Jews to the newly established state southeast of Lublin, in Poland, has been stopped because local administrators complained about lack of facilities.

(2) In Paris, Poland-in-exile claimed that 136 Polish schoolboys had been executed at Bydgoszcz; that 6,000 men and women had been executed there up to December 31; that 350 Poles from Gdynia were shot after being forced to dig their graves.

(3) Paul Ghali, writing from Paris for the Chicago Daily News, had "authentic sources" for his information that Polish landowners have been dispossessed, and that Czech children must submit when little Germans in the same school bully and tease them.

RUMANIA: Prayers Keystone of Balkan security is Rumania's neutrality, often threatened the past six months by the economic tug-of-war being waged between Russia, Germany, France and Britain. Cognizant of this, Pope Pius prayed in early March that Rumania might be preserved "from the scourge of war."

First day: Rumania was reported rushing a little Maginot line along her Bessarabian border fronting Russia. Second day: It was announced by Russia that Soviet Premier Viacheslav Molotov will soon visit Bucharest to initial a non-aggression pact. This was a shocker, for Russia has made no secret of her designs on Bessarabia.

Third day: King Carol opened his parliament, promising to maintain a permanent 1,600,000-man army regardless of cost. Adding it up, observers wondered if King Carol might not at last be withering under pressure from all sides.

POLITICS: Biggest Barrage For months Franklin Roosevelt has parried third-term questions. But each parry is more difficult, for each press conference brings more definite questions. In early March the President returned from his Caribbean vacation to face the biggest barrage yet. Only the day before his name had been entered in Pennsylvania's Democratic primary and correspondents were hungry for a comment. But they got nothing except his remark that all third-term rumors fell into one of the four newspaper categories suggested by Thomas Jefferson: (1) news; (2) probabilities; (3) possibilities; (4) lies.

Nobody knew into which of these categories the latest rumor fell, but it bore authentic earmarks. Out of Washington came reports that Franklin Roosevelt feud with John Nance Garner would burst into flames before Illinois' April 9 primary, first crucial Roosevelt-Garner contest support. Somehow, the wiseacres learned Mr. Roosevelt will plump this month for a New Dealish presidential slate, thus forcing an answer from the sphynx-like Mr. Garner.

CALVARY: TRIUMPH THROUGH SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 27:33-50. GOLDEN TEXT—He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.—Isaiah 53:3.

At Calvary, reverent and thoughtful readers of God's Word stand speechless, and confess themselves to be powerless to explain or to expound the awe-inspiring story, and yet just because it is such a story, because on that cross the divine Son of God gave Himself in sacrificial atonement for sin, we must do our utmost to understand it, to explain it, and certainly to declare it to all mankind. For when He who knew no sin became sin for us, it was for our sin that He died. Here alone do we find redemption.

We approach this scene therefore with reverence, and with the prayer that we may so present the dying Saviour to dying men that some may believe and be saved. We center our thoughts around three expressions taken from the text.

I. "They Crucified Him."

All of the gospel stories are remarkably reticent when they speak of the cross. Details of surrounding events are given, but when they speak of the cross itself, they can only say that He was crucified. Let us look at the One who hung on that sacred tree, for He is the Saviour of the world. Refusing the stupefying potion (v. 34) and facing death fully conscious, we hear Him crying out of the darkness which covered all the land, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" That cry indicates the depth to which our Saviour went for us.

Does it not seem that the Father in that darkest moment of history turned His back upon the One who knowing no sin Himself had become sin for us? And yet we know that it was God who hung upon the tree, God the Son. Here is divine mystery, the meaning of which we cannot fathom, but we know that it was for us.

Then came the cry with the loud voice, "It is finished!" This was not the death of the languishing martyr. The Son of God, having wrought out redemption on the cross, cried out in powerful tones of victory, "It is finished!" and yielded up His spirit.

II. "They Watched Him."

Soldiers, priests, the two thieves, the women—how different was the purpose and the spirit of their watching.

The soldiers had made sport of Him and mocked Him in the palace. They took a passing curious interest in the crucifixion. They gambled over His garments, and finally settled down to perform their duty as guards with stolid indifference. How much of humanity is just like that!

The priests who professed to know about God and His Word stand out in appalling wickedness and ignorance. Being members of the highest and noblest of callings, they fell when they sinned to the lowest depths.

Of the two thieves, one believed and the other railed at our Lord (Luke 23:39, 40). The cross has ever since been the dividing line, part of humanity turning there to life eternal, the rest going on its railing way to destruction.

The women waited. No doubt they were perplexed and troubled in heart, but they stood faithfully by until His precious body was in the grave. We read of no apostle who did as much, and we give all honor to the faithful women.

III. "He Trusted in God."

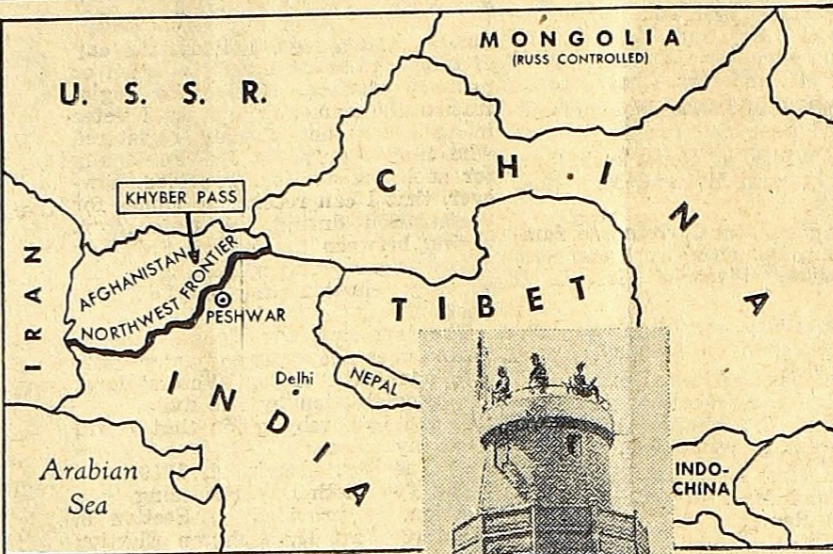

This was the sarcastic taunt of the priests. "When the King was hanging upon the cross and the interpreters of religion, the priests, misinterpreted God, there was a great silence. God's noninterference is the first thing that impresses one as the story is read, but that is not all the story. It was not wholly noninterference. 'From the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land until the ninth hour.' That seems to have been the act of God. It would seem that in infinite tenderness God wrapped the land in darkness in the hour of His Son's supreme suffering" (G. Campbell Morgan). We also read in verse 51 that the veil of the temple was torn from top to bottom, opening the way for all men in Christ to enter the Holy of Holies.

"He trusted God." Yes, even to the sacrifice of Himself in death. Because He could not save Himself (v. 42) in thus doing the will of God the Father, He did save others. The scoffing priests told the truth in spite of their wicked purpose to falsify. "They crucified Him," "they watched Him," but "He trusted God" and became the Saviour of the world.

How Great and How Wondrous

How great are his signs! and how mighty are his wonders! His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation.—Daniel 4:3.

Britain Guards Northwest Gate, Fearing Attack From Russia

Through Afghanistan and the Khyber pass, Soviet troops could invade British India. Growing fears have led the British to fortify their "Northwest Frontier." Lookout towers are manned constantly.

Above is a closely guarded frontier post dividing Afghanistan and India. With Britain busy fighting Germany, Russia's ally, it is possible that the Soviet might seize a chance to capitalize on Britain's weakness elsewhere. But Britain is not weak in India or any other part of her near eastern frontier. Below: Men of the Indian frontier constabulary on patrol.

Picture Parade

Taking no chances of having some sharpshooting hillman potting them, men manning the Northwest Frontier do their patrolling in light tanks. These patrols were increased recently when increased Soviet troop activity was reported.

Above is the Khyber pass itself, showing the trouble confronting an invader aiming to penetrate it. A remarkable serpentine road winds through the narrow defile for 33 miles. There is also a railroad, completed in 1925. It is a marvel of engineering, 26 miles long with 34 tunnels and 92 bridges and culverts. Each station is a miniature fort.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Sam Houston Jones, the comparatively young David who toppled the Huey Long Goliath in Louisiana, is a corporation lawyer, representing 43 corporations, and says he is proud of it. He never took his coat off while he was campaigning, never talked swamp talk, kept his shoes shined, dishes good grammar and never tore his hair. Defeating Gov. Earl K. Long, brother of the Kingfish, in the run-off primary, he gets the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, which means election in Louisiana.

However, he fought like a wildcat, made a half dozen speeches and two radio addresses a day, swarmed all over the state and developed a carefully organized state, parish and precinct organization. He is 42 years old, good looking, well-educated and convincing. He is a political newcomer, little known when the Kingfish called him "High-Hat Sambo." He replied that he had no high hat, but would not hesitate to get one if he needed it, and would dress as he pleased. So he did and he made them like it.

Born in a log cabin in the deep, piney woods of southwestern Louisiana, he worked in a sawmill until he was 17, with sketchy education. He entered the University of Louisiana, waited on table to help pay his way, went into the World War as a private, but never reached France, and returned to continue his education in a country law office. He has been on both sides of corporation law practice, winning the fight for the rice farmers against the millers, and has engaged in some stiff fights with public utilities. On several occasions he defended cases for labor organizations.

TROUBLED observers of world disaster, seeing no light or hope, might do well to compare Dorothy Canfield Fisher's children's crusade with the two children's crusades of the Thirteenth century. In the latter about 50,000 children went from France and Germany to fight the Saracens. Many thousands died and many others were captured and sold into slavery at Alexandria.

Something seems to have happened in the centuries between. Miss Fisher, the novelist, finds eager co-operation throughout the country as she launches a campaign to gather a penny a year from each of the 30,000,000 American school children for child refugees in all countries of the world, of all races and beliefs. The pledge will cover the entire life of the child. The fund, totaling $300,000 a year, will all go to the children, with private pledges covering the cost of administration.

Miss Fisher, author of about 25 books, including novels, educational and social studies, has been engaged in such humane enterprises all her adult life. During and after the World war, she spent three years in France in relief work. In 1934, she became chairman of the Advisory Conference of Jews and Christians to Oppose Race Prejudice and Religious Intolerance. Her unceasing battle has been against a standardized and materialized society.

A native of Lawrence, Kan., she could call herself Dr. Fisher, but never does. Her doctorate in philosophy came from Columbia university in 1904, after her graduation from Ohio State university. She probably wears more academic garlands than any other American woman, with honorary degrees from Middlebury college, Dartmouth, the University of Vermont, Ohio State, Northwestern and Williams.

Her home is in Arlington, Vt. Noting that her crusade is much more humane and sensible than that of Etienne, the shepherd boy of Cloyes, who led the ragged, hungry children to crush the Saracens, one might also note the upsurge of "Snow White" and "Pinocchio" as revealing a new adult entente with the child world. Miss Fisher might do well to make Walt Disney one of the generals of her new crusade.

WHEN this writer was in Paris a few years ago, style bootleggers were moving through plots and stratagems as melodramatic as any spy business. It was an old story then. Currently, Lucien Le-long, the Judge Landis of the Paris dressmakers, pegs a new outbreak of the old established custom of sneaking a camera shot of a gown—perhaps bribing a delivery boy—and making the model a dime a dozen all over Europe before the buyer can wear it. That's just one device. There are dozens.

As Turkey's Mechanized Army Preserves Neutrality

Backed by one of the world's most highly mechanized armies, mysterious Turkey holds the balance of power in the fight for domination of the Near East, now being waged by France and Britain on one side and Russia and Germany on the other. Although allied with France and Britain, Turkey's motorcycle troops and "big berthas" are aimed primarily to assure her neutrality.

Old Glory Breaks Even in Massachusetts Schools

The American flag made headline news in two Massachusetts schools recently. Left: Brothers Beecher, 16, and Hollis Green, 12, willingly salute the flag, but their sisters, Wanda, 14, and Geneva, 11, members of Jehovah's Witnesses, refuse the patriotic gesture. Other pupils in the Saugus school, also members of the religious sect, refused to salute the flag. School officials have instructed parents to explain their children's refusal. Right: Kathleen E. Ross, 12, Norwood, Mass., received permission from probate court to change her name to Betsy E. Ross, after the young Philadelphia woman who designed the first American flag.

Young Men With Ambition Were Aided by Depression, Youth Expert Maintains

CHICAGO.—Take it from an expert—

The high school or college graduate is all wrong if he claims there's no opportunity for young men in the business and professional world. To the contrary, the depression has really produced new opportunities for youngsters with ideas.

This is the decision of Felix B. Streyckmans, a young man who is making young men his life's work. Streyckmans studied this phenomenon as editor of a magazine specializing in young men, and he's concluded that the depression merely wiped out a lot of old, impractical ideas.

It left a clear field ahead for new and youthful thinkers.

Now Streyckmans has assembled his opinions in a new book called "Today's Young Men," published by Reilly and Lee of Chicago. It lists the accomplishments of several score American youngsters, most of whom were up against the wall 10 years ago, and all of whom are successful today. It's Horatio Alger brought up to date.

Broadway's Sign King.

Douglas Leigh is one of Streyckmans' most unusual young men. At 30, Leigh is the sign king of Broadway. He owns more of Broadway's biggest and most striking electric signs than all the others combined, yet only seven years ago he arrived in New York from Birmingham with $8 in his pocket—and no prospect of a job.

Leigh figured the signs he saw to go uphill the way Bill Martin did it.

Recalls Colonial Spirit.

In "Today's Young Men," Streyckmans points out that the pioneering spirit of today is reminiscent of that which featured early America.

"The young man of today," he says, "being a pioneer in the ruins of the last few decades, is first cousin to the pioneer of Colonial days. The outstanding men then were young—and the outstanding young men whose careers I have studied are closer to them in spirit than they are to their own fathers or their fathers' fathers."

Thomas Wingate of Amarillo, Texas, is a splendid example of this spirit. Seven years ago, when Tom was 17, his father died and left him a $165,000 soft-drink works. The city's oldsters shook their heads, and they had every reason to. Imagine trying to sell soft drinks in a drouth-stricken area just when prohibition was being repealed!

But Tom, realizing he couldn't use conventional methods, won his employees' good will by raising their salaries and promising Christmas bonuses. They went to work with a will, and the Wingate bottling works got back on its feet. Last summer Tom refused an offer of more than a million dollars cash for his business. How's that for a 24-year-old?

Young Poultry King.

There's a somewhat similar case near Houston, Texas. The hero of this story is 22-year-old Dewey Stringer, blond, and slightly built, along Broadway were bright and clever enough, but they didn't impress him with the cigarettes, automobiles, coffee or whatever they were supposed to be selling. So, on March 4, 1933 (the day of the bank holiday) he went into business. By applying individuality and novel treatment to this unique business, he's made more than a million dollars.

ORSON WELLES—At 24, he has behind him already a long record of achievement as actor and producer.

A young man who sees Leigh's signs every day is William McClesney Martin, who at 31 is president of the New York Stock exchange. He assumed this highly responsible financial post in the summer of 1938 as a result of reorganization designed to bring Wall street's operations out from behind a cloud of ill repute. Though he was born of a well-to-do St. Louis family, and although his father is president of the St. Louis Federal Reserve bank, it takes more than family connections

WILLIAM M. MARTIN—Only 31, he is the highly successful president of the New York stock exchange.

College Research Given Credit For Speeding Building Trades

WASHINGTON.—Prospects of a 15 per cent increase in residential construction in 1940 over 1939 add significance to the contribution made to the building industry by research laboratories of American colleges and universities during the past decade.

These research activities have made it possible to get more for each building dollar and effect economies of about $180,000,000 on the nation's annual home construction bill, according to a survey by the National Home Builders' bureau. The survey attaches "more than ordinary significance" to the value of new discoveries by technicians in institutions of higher learning. Although only a comparatively small portion of the money expended on industrial research is available to campus chemists, physicists and technical experts, their contribution to economic recovery has been far greater than generally realized, the report stated.

Farmer Aided by Research.

The work done by agricultural colleges and university experimental groups in aiding the farmer is perhaps more widely recognized. Modern methods of crop rotation, more diversified use of farm products, intensified ways of cultivation have all benefited from the activities in campus laboratories.

However, college research has also developed such aids to better building as a new method of adhering structural glass to concrete to form a single glass stone unit, improved weather conditioning of the home for both winter and summer comfort, a wide variety of plastics, better paints and lacquers.

It has been estimated conservatively by building engineers that research in academic laboratories during the past 10 years into new and improved uses for building materials has cut six cents off every dollar spent for such products.

Frankie Frisch Returns to Diamond Wars

Frankie Frisch, who has taken over the managerial reins of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is shown talking to pitchers (left to right) Butcher, Bauers and Herrell as they don their uniforms for an early-season workout during the spring training season at San Bernardino, Calif. Frisch was out of baseball last year, when he worked as a baseball broadcaster.

'A Very Good Boy'

First place winner in a city-wide poll of New York teachers was this picture titled "A Very Good Boy." Teachers acclaimed it as the best photograph ever to appear in the annual pictorial report of the superintendent of schools.

'Party' Man

who inherited a large poultry farm when his father died four years ago. In that period he's become such an authority and so successful that the home economics bureau of the United States department of agriculture cites him as one of America's outstanding poultry raisers. He produces a half million of the country's "best" eggs every month.

Actually, the most successful youngster listed in "Today's Young Men" is 22-year-old William Brannan, who graduated from Beloit college in Wisconsin last year. In college he was a varsity wrestler, a member of the debate team and glee club, an accordionist and an excellent student. Last summer, after he finished college, he began selling insurance. With six months to go it now seems certain that he will top the $100,000 mark in his first year. Unusual? Perhaps not, except that Bill Brannan is blind.

Newsman Who Were Successful.

"Today's Young Men" lists quite a few writers. Two of them are Robert Kintner and Joseph Alsop Jr., 30 and 31, respectively, whose "Capital Parade" column from Washington is a highly successful syndicated feature. Both started on the New York Herald-Tribune. They've made a success of their column by working hard, gathering unusual information and presenting it from a mature and well-reasoned viewpoint.

Bill Rogers, the 27-year-old son of Will Rogers, the late movie comedian, bought the Beverly Hills Citizen when he was 23 years old. In the past five years he's become one of the most influential journalists in the West, not because he is Will Rogers' son but because he's become a highly successful publisher, both financially and editorially.

There are many other young men in the editorial field. Paul Smith, 30, is managing editor of the San Francisco Chronicle. He's served on the farm security board and the farm tenancy commission, and is credited with settling a hopelessly deadlocked San Francisco warehousemen's strike.

Streyckmans insists that his young men have become successful largely because they didn't know the balmy days of 1920-30, and therefore had nothing to lament. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Industrial Products Are 'Dressed Up' to Spur Greater Sales

NEW YORK.—Under the magic wand of an Indiana boy, who made the big city sit up and listen, a strange mixture of science, engineering and art is helping to fit the luxuries of modern living to the pocketbooks of Mr. and Mrs. America.

High in his modern office, in one of the busiest sections of New York city, Walter Dorwin Teague, who was born in Pendleton, Ind., is taking industrial products apart, analyzing them, and handing them back with new clothes, new color and in a majority of cases, at a cheaper price to the consumer.

He is the pioneer of industrial design, the "tailor" of manufactured products. So heartily has industry taken Teague's designs to its bosom that he is retained by several of the largest corporations of the country just to keep their products and business equipment well dressed.

"Good design," Teague says, "is design for maximum functional efficiency."

Therein lies the success story of a score of products, some originally designed, some redesigned by Teague, who came to New York to study painting, found his talents better adapted to decorative advertising display and typography, where he became a leader. Then, bowing to the wishes of his clients, he turned to industrial design. Since that time he has designed everything from cameras and stoves to huge exhibit buildings at the world's fair, where he is one of the members of the board of design.

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Why endure those dull headachy days due to constipation, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your constipation, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy-tasted breakfast cereal is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. It helps you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day and month after month, by the pleasant means you ever knew.

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

School Notes

HIGH SCHOOL

Observers in the European history class are comparing the problems of territorial reconstruction following the Napoleonic period to the problems that would be eminent today if war were to cease in Europe.

The typing I classes have started ten minute speed tests. The fastest typists are Irene Cunniff and Janet McLean with net rates of 51 and 49 respectively. The most consistently accurate work is done by Norma Burtzloff and Mary Sims. Both girls have an average of one error in ten minutes. Norma's record being 41 net words per minute with one error and Mary's 37 net words with one error. We find that businessmen are asking us to build accurate typists. Building speed is important but not at the expense of accuracy.

Last week there were two perfect speed tests typed by typing II students, Mable Simons and Dorothy Blust. Considerable improvement was demonstrated by several other members of the class.

A good crowd of high school students attended the dance given in the auditorium Friday night. Everyone seemed to have a good time and appreciated the effort made in putting it on.

The upholstery group are getting along fine with their project. A group of boys headed by Russell Rollin and Nelson Thornton are repairing some old lamps to be used in the auditorium.

The date of the Junior-Senior play has been changed from March 28-29 to April 4 and 5. You must see "Meet The Folks."

The Seniors have ordered their caps and gowns from the Paul A. Willisie company of Detroit this year.

The color chosen this year is blue, rather than grey. They have selected as their class motto "He conquers who conquers himself." For their class colors they selected red wine and white with the white rose as class flower.

SEVENTH and EIGHTH GRADES

The eighth graders are learning how to find the square root, and studying advertising. Finding examples in newspapers and magazines and answering them helps a lot.

The persons receiving highest scores in a recent history test are the following: Maxine DePotty, Evelyn Colby and Hazel Galliker. Those getting A's in a civics test were: Linda Libka, Neil Libka, Evelyn Colby and Maxine DePotty.

THIRD and FOURTH GRADES

The fourth grade had a test to complete its study of the Paris Basin in France. The highest marks went to Milla Oisten and Lucille Sims. Milla had a perfect paper. A study of Switzerland has now begun.

We have quite a variety of art work in our room at present. There are pictures of Dutch children, Easter rabbits and shamrocks. For window decorations we have children flying kites.

Martin Musolf brought some pussy-willows to school today. We hope this is truly a sign that spring is near.

Donald Britting and Richard Match-uret had the highest scores in an arithmetic test given to the two grades. Richard had a perfect paper. Due to the absence of Mr. Nordman, we had an arithmetic ball game during music period. When the time was up, the score was 23-20. We shall play off the tie sometime soon.

Last Friday we had a spelling bee. Mills Oisten was the winner. Louis Pfeiffer was the last third grade pupil to remain standing.

PRIMARY

Mr. Nordman taught us a new singing game called "All Around the Cobler's Bench." We enjoyed it very much.

We have a new rubber ball in our room. The beginners are using it in some of their classes. All the boys and girls like to play with it.

We have made Easter pictures for our room. They make nice decorations.

Rows number three and four have had very good citizenship so far this week.
